THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

INDIANAPOLIS.

The flower show, under the management of the State Florists' Association of Indiana, was held at Tomlinson hall, November 8 to 12. The weather conditions were ideal and the show, from the point of exhibits, was one of the best ever held in Indiana. The decorations, designed by George Wiegand and executed by A. Wiegand & Sons, were elaborate, and many favorable comments were passed on them. The stage setting represented a conservatory, with bay trees and palms placed about to carry out the effect. Thousands of yards of laurel and many cases of smilax were used in the decorations.

The entries in the pot mum classes were not up to standard, but the other classes more than made up for this. A number of the retailers had elaborately decorated booths, among these being E. A. Nelson, Pahud Floral Co. and A. Wiegand & Sons. The latter firm went to considerable expense in arranging the booth, which consisted of two table decorations, in one of which eight dozen orchids and 150 valley were used. The other was with yellow pompons. Another feature of this booth was a bridal altar, showing the gates, altar, kneeling stool, bower of palms studded with chrysanthemums and candles. Various other forms of decorative effects were used and this booth was one of the features of the show.

The large groups of palms used at the show were, through the courtesy of Houston Tall, superintendent of Garfield park. J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, showed a number of fine specimens of his new Begonia Glory of Cincinnati. John Rieman was a busy man, being superintendent of the show and at the same time crowded with funeral work at his store. One day he shipped four blankets and twenty funeral designs out of town.

E. T. Barnes, the dahlia specialist of Spencer, showed a number of photos of his dahlia farm, which were quite interesting.

John Elsner showed a number of pots of his new pink seedling mum.

John Grande had a number of fine pot mums for the show, but in some manner his entry was overlooked and his plants were not judged.

A fine vase was the yellow seedlings of the E. G. Hill Co., which won the sweepstakes.

Roepke & Rieman Co. showed a vase of their pink seedling mum, which was good.

The E. G. Hill Co. had a vase of their yellow rose Sunburst, which attracted considerable attention. Their pink, Rose Queen, won the S. A. F. bronze medal.

In the carnation classes a crimson seedling of F. Dorner & Sons Co. and a crimson of Baur & Smith looked favorable.

A pink seedling pompon from Hartje & Elder and a number of vases of seedlings from the Elmer D. Smith & Co. showed up well.

The Awards.

The judges were R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati; F. H. Lemon, Richmond; C. Sonnenschmidt, Cumberland.

The first day's awards were published in The Review last week and the awards for the succeeding days were as follows:

Chrysanthemum Plants.

CHICAGO.

Chicago has again held the biggest show of the year—probably a larger show than ever was held elsewhere in America. But in some way the vital spark was lacking; it was a big show and a good show, but, to borrow an expression of the theatrical fraternity, it lacked the punch—for which fact there are a variety of explanations, each one depending on the point of view. For quality of stock exhibited, plants, cut mums, roses and carnations, the show never was excelled, and the quantity was sufficient. It is just possible that the show has become an old story both to the trade and to the public, that its only real shortcoming was the lack of novelty. The press agent had little basis for new stories, for there was nothing unique for the public to see; nothing, in fact, they had not seen before. The trade looks merely with toleration upon the so-called rivalries of untested flowers named for society ladies, but such things are as of the breath of life to the press agent and the city editor of the daily paper expected to print his stuff. It takes a genius to make a newspaper story out of just flowers themselves. Election was on the opening day, with grand opera and Sarah Bernhardt competing for society's patronage through the week.

Emil Buettner, whose opinion many people value, says the one lack of this year's show was the coöperation of the retailers. He says the shows have for years been too much trade exhibits, that the public has lost interest in the roses and other stock crowded together and jammed into pots without any effort whatever at arrangement, as satisfies the needs of the trade. Mr. Buettner thinks that to rekindle enthusiasm it will be necessary to make a display of artistic arrangement—to show the uses of flowers and to bring out their beauties as only the retailers can. The Chicago show never had a prettier general arrangement than this year—the picture was perfect as viewed from the south balcony, but the retail displays were meager. The retailers responded hardly at all to the invitation to rearrange the exhibits with their own accessories and attach their cards. Only three accepted the offer of $100 cash to those who would decorate a table for four days. This was a surprise. A much larger participation had been expected, but perhaps the surprise will be greater when it is recorded that Louis Wittbold says his firm paid $60 for the loan of the cloth, silver and glass used on its table, to say nothing of other costs.

There is no criticism of the show, and nothing but commendation for the management; but the exhibition has been so successful in all the years since going to the Coliseum that the first sign of waning interest creates much discussion, which probably will lead to a turning of the tide next year.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., staged a table of roses which were a source of much interest to the growers, as two of the varieties never before had been shown in the west. One was Dark Pink Killarney, identical with Killarney except that the color is a great deal darker, being deeper than any pink rose now forced in quantity. This is the sport which originated with the Montrose Greenhouses, Montrose, Mass., and of which the Pierson corporation bought the entire stock last April. The variety is shortly to be disseminated only through the sale of grafted plants; no own-root stock will be sold. The second new variety on the Pierson table was Antoine Revoire, of French origin, shell pink, with orange center. At Cromwell this has been found a splendid summer rose, good for greenhouse work ten months in the year, but not dependable for a crop in January and February. It also is adaptable to garden use. Radiance, shown by Pierson, is the variety, cerise pink in color, sent out by John Cook, of Baltimore, last year. There has been some question as to the shipping qualities of this variety, and in this connection it is worth while noting in the illustration in this issue that the roses were cut in Cromwell, Conn., November 7, staged at Chicago November 10 and photographed by The Review on the evening of November 11. A few plants of Adiantum Farleyense completed the Pierson display.

F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., showed White Wonder, a White Perfection seedling, and Gloriosa, its new pink. It is said they already have booked orders aggregating 150,000 cuttings of these two varieties for delivery this season. The same exhibitor also had a fine vase of Pink Delight, which all the growers say is a hard thing to beat in its color. Dolly Dimple, a large yellow chrysanthemum, also was shown by Dorner.

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, sent on a vase of Melody, a new rose which is to be sent out this season.

The E. G. Hill Co., in addition to Rose Queen and Sunburst, its new roses, showed a vase of Mrs. Aaron Ward, which is thought highly of by eastern growers.

Mrs. Frank Beu staged a vase of the bronze pompon chrysanthemum named for her.

Bassett & Washburn's First Prize 100 Beauties, Photographed 48 Hours After Staging.

The crimson seedling carnation exhibited by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association as 2807A and which won the medal and sweepstakes, has been named Mrs. A. E. McCrea.

The exhibitors did not capture quite so large a percentage of the premiums this year as usual. Of the $4,959 carried by the schedule, $3,629 was awarded, plus the retailers' gratuities and the medals, but the sum was nearly a third more than was awarded last year, many of the premiums having been increased.

The prizes, aggregating $100, donated by the Chicago Florists' Club, for collections of cut orchid blooms, were not competed for.

Carnations.

The showing of carnations November 10 was exceptionally large and the stock was of high quality throughout. How uniform the quality was is shown by the premium list, in which no less than nine exhibitors are shown as sharing in the awards, which were as follows:

Fifty White Lawson, Poehlmann Bros., first.

Fifty White Enchantress, Northwestern Floral Co., first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second.

Fifty White Perfection, Northwestern Floral Co., first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second.

Fifty flesh pink introduction of 1910, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, on Dorothy Gordon; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, on Admiration. This class was protested by H. C. Blewitt, of the Des Plaines Floral Co., on the ground that Dorothy Gordon is not flesh pink, and the executive committee upheld the protest, ordering the class to be rejudged. First was then awarded to Poehlmann Bros. Co., on Admiration, and second to the Des Plaines Floral Co., on Mary Tolman.

Fifty light pink introduction of 1910, Chicago Carnation Co., first, on Sangamo; Des Plaines Floral Co., second, on Sangamo.

Seedling Carnations.

The showing of seedling carnations was meager. Charles Knopf Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., received the bronze medal for best white, with Cynthia. In the same class E. G. Hill Co. showed White May Day. The medal for best red went to the E. G. Hill Co. for Mrs. Beckwith. The medal for flesh pink went to Mt. Greenwood Cemetery for Greenwood. The medal for crimson went to Mt. Greenwood Cemetery for No. 2807A, crimson, which also was awarded the sweepstakes as the best variety exhibited in the seedling classes.

New Chrysanthemums.

The classes for seedlings, sports and undisseminated importations among mums brought out a better showing than usual, so far as numbers go, but nothing of transcendent quality. H. W.

Basket of roses, Metropolitan Floral Co., first; C. Young & Sons, second.

Floral basket, Metropolitan Floral Co., first; C. Young & Sons, second.

CHICAGO.

Chicago has again held the biggest show of the year—probably a larger show than ever was held elsewhere in America. But in some way the vital spark was lacking; it was a big show and a good show, but, to borrow an expression of the theatrical fraternity, it lacked the punch—for which fact there are a variety of explanations, each one depending on the point of view. For quality of stock exhibited, plants, cut mums, roses and carnations, the show never was excelled, and the quantity was sufficient. It is just possible that the show has become an old story both to the trade and to the public, that its only real shortcoming was the lack of novelty. The press agent had little basis for new stories, for there was nothing unique for the public to see; nothing, in fact, they had not seen before. The trade looks merely with toleration upon the so-called rivalries of untested flowers named for society ladies, but such things are as of the breath of life to the press agent and the city editor of the daily paper expected to print his stuff. It takes a genius to make a newspaper story out of just flowers themselves. Election was on the opening day, with grand opera and Sarah Bernhardt competing for society's patronage through the week.

Emil Buettner, whose opinion many people value, says the one lack of this year's show was the coöperation of the retailers. He says the shows have for years been too much trade exhibits, that the public has lost interest in the roses and other stock crowded together and jammed into pots without any effort whatever at arrangement, as satisfies the needs of the trade. Mr. Buettner thinks that to rekindle enthusiasm it will be necessary to make a display of artistic arrangement—to show the uses of flowers and to bring out their beauties as only the retailers can. The Chicago show never had a prettier general arrangement than this year—the picture was perfect as viewed from the south balcony, but the retail displays were meager. The retailers responded hardly at all to the invitation to rearrange the exhibits with their own accessories and attach their cards. Only three accepted the offer of $100 cash to those who would decorate a table for four days. This was a surprise. A much larger participation had been expected, but perhaps the surprise will be greater when it is recorded that Louis Wittbold says his firm paid $60 for the loan of the cloth, silver and glass used on its table, to say nothing of other costs.

There is no criticism of the show, and nothing but commendation for the management; but the exhibition has been so successful in all the years since going to the Coliseum that the first sign of waning interest creates much discussion, which probably will lead to a turning of the tide next year.

The classes for seedlings, sports and undisseminated importations among mums brought out a better showing than usual, so far as numbers go, but nothing of transcendent quality. H. W.

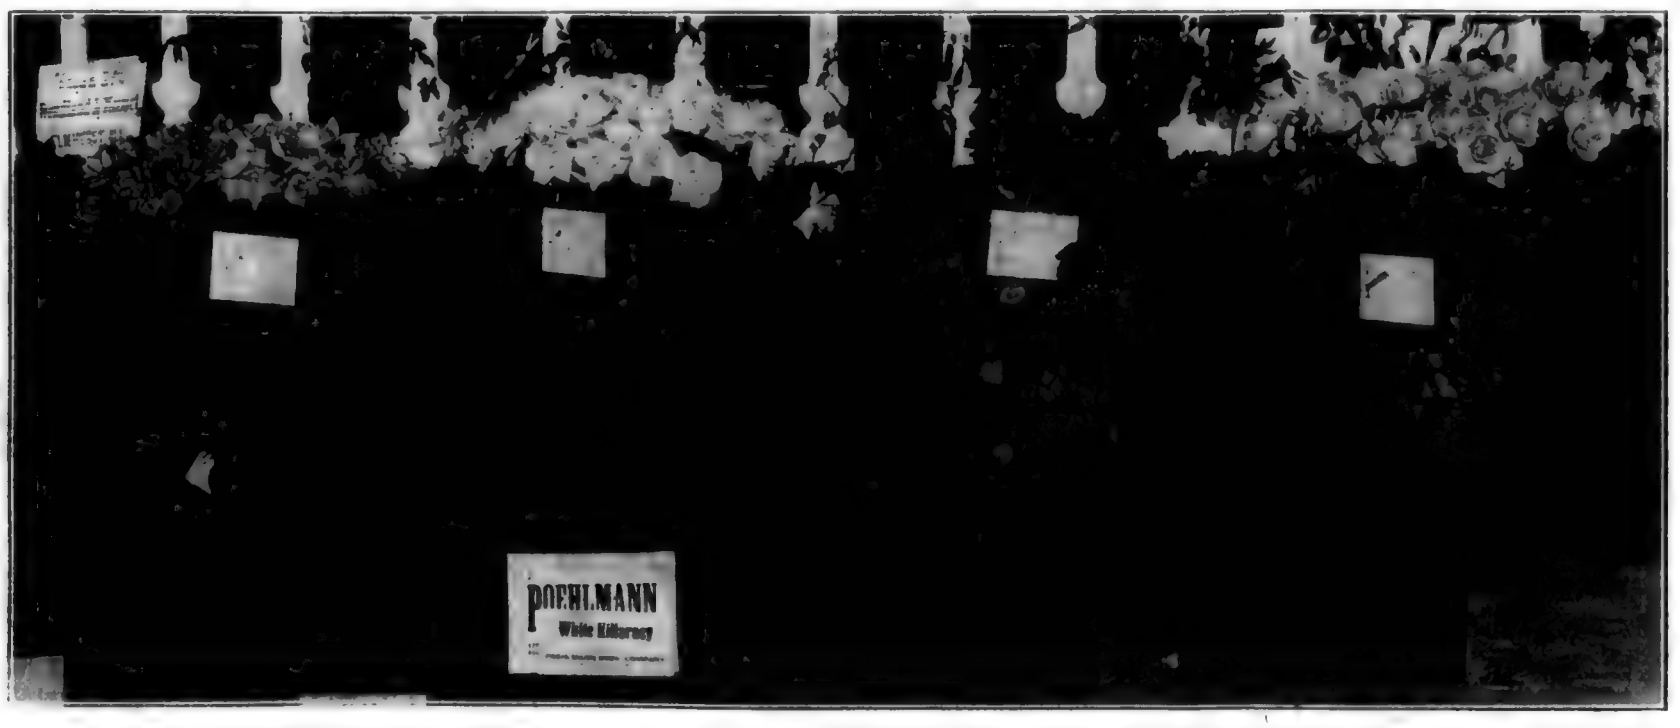
The judges concluded their work with the following addition to the record: "The judges cannot close their report of the exhibits without some reference to the non-competitive displays, which added much to the educational features of the show. Worthy of honorable mention are the displays of Vaughan's Seed Store, the George Wittbold Co., the Frank Kadlec Nursery Co., Klehm's Nurseries, W. W. Barnard Co., F. D. Clavey and Winterson's Seed Store in nursery stock and landscape effects, and the very interesting displays of photographs and drawings and models of the University of Illinois. We would recommend honorable mention to the fine display of cocos from Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, palms from the University of Chicago, the cut blooms of the pompons from the University of Illinois, and the decorative groups from Lincoln park and the South parks. The Schiller booth has been maintained in a most attractive condition during the show and is worthy of the highest commendation. The tables decorated by the Albert T. Hey Floral Co., the George Wittbold Co. and Schiller have been renewed daily and effectively."

The Banquet.

Since the Chicago Florists' Club last banqueted the flower show trade visitors, a new lobster palace has been opened, and the scene of the festivities November 10 was the red room on the nineteenth floor of the Hotel La Salle. At the round tables, each seating eight, were many congenial parties, numbering all told 200, about evenly divided between guests and members of the club. To most of those present the change from the older hotels afforded a pleasing novelty, and the repast, service and all concomitants were of a character which gave the committee every reason to be satisfied with its choice. The menu was as follows:

Bluepoints
Celery — Olives — Almonds
Cream of Tomatoes
Filet of Whitefish, au Vin Blanc
Potatoes Fondante
Larded Tenderloin of Beef
French Peas — Stuffed Tomatoes
Roast Squabs, Au Cresson
Salad
Besquit Imperiale
Petite Fours
Roquefort — Port du Salut
Assorted Crackers
Cafe — Apollinaris.



W. N. Rudd was toastmaster, but the committee did not afford him the usual free play, for a vaudeville entertainment had been aranged for, which occupied a good share of the time. George Asmus was introduced as the Pooh-Bah of the craft—the man who holds all the offices—manager of the flower show, president of the Florists' Club, and president-elect of the S. A. F. In concluding his talk Mr. Asmus urged cooperation for the national flower show at Boston and gave it as his opinion that if a spring convention is tried by the S. A. F. it will please so well that the time of meeting will be regularly changed. Other speakers were W. F. Kasting, treasurer of the S. A. F.; J. F. Cowell, of Buffalo; Adam Graham, of Cleveland; Prof. J. C. Blair, of Urbana; P. J. Foley, of Chicago; H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill.; C. L. Washburn, president of the Illinois Florists' Association, and H. B. Dorner, secretary of the S. A. F. Alternating with the talks were the acts of the vaudevillians. Toastmaster Rudd called for Chairman A. C. Kohlbrand, of the banquet committee, and that versatile gentleman responded with a German dialect story that beat the work of the professional performers. The other members of the banquet committee were Fred Lautenschlager, D. A. Robertson, Alex. Henderson and W. N. Rudd.

The bowlers of the Chicago Florists' Club gave a dance at the Coliseum annex, for the trade visitors, on the evening of November 11. About fifty couples were present and the affair was thoroughly enjoyable. It was largely in the hands of T. C. Yarnall, chairman, and Allie Zech, secretary of the bowlers' organization, with many able assistants. A feature of interest was that the music was furnished by B. Zima, who, in addition to being a florist on West Twenty-sixth street, is the leader of a first-class orchestra.

The Visitors.

As with the general attendance, the number of trade visitors was possibly not quite up to the record of recent years. The names of the florists present the first two days appeared in The Review for November 10. Those who appeared on the scene the later days of the show included the following:

MILWAUKEE.

That a good, first-class flower show is a great drawing card when properly advertised was demonstrated at this, the second annual flower show of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, held November 9 to 13, at the Auditorium. It was a show of which each member of the local craft could justly be proud. The arrangement, which represented a forest in its autumn glory, with a waterfall and a running brook, was complete in every detail, due to the untiring energy of the chairman, H. V. Hunkel, and August F. Kellner, ably assisted by the other members of the executive committee, C. Dallwig, J. G. Heitman, William Zimmermann, Arthur Leidiger, C. C. Pollworth, Nic Zweifel and a force of willing and loyal assistants. While it took several weeks of work to get the large trees and other paraphernalia to the hall, it was a still larger task to get everything in shape and place in the short time of two and one-half days and two nights. Here it was clearly demonstrated that experience is the best teacher, for, with the experience gained at last year's show, everything, under the supervision of H. V. Hunkel and August F. Kellner, seemed to run in a more systematic way, thus saving an enormous lot of time and extra expense.

The setting of the show included an artistic group of pines, from the midst of which burst the waterfall, which was as true to nature as any one could desire and was one of the most admired points in the show. The right side of the stage represented a hillside wooded with pine trees, and in front of this were two tall oak trees covered with wild smilax almost to the ceiling. Farther back several birches, with their light bark, and two magnolia trees, green with foliage, helped to give the hall the desired effect.

Winding throughout was the brook, spanned by five rustic bridges and edged with sod, and an apple tree, which was leaved with wild smilax and had a beautiful chrysanthemum group around its base, also came in for a share of the favorable comment. Seven tables set with dinner decorations, but not for competition, were placed in various locations under the trees and on the sod, and gave the impression of a fashionable lawn party.

In touching upon the exhibits it can be said that it was a local show, undoubtedly due to the fact that four other large fall shows were being held on the same days. Last year many mums, both cut and in pots, came from Chicago and vicinity; they were absent this year and the displays of some eastern firms were also missing. But the local boys had the right spirit, and, with nearly everyone contributing, the whole show was a grand success—more so than last year.

The palm and other groups, which were plentiful and of good quality, helped to comfortably fill the main floor, and the stage was used for the different classes of cut blooms. Here, too, it was proven that the Milwaukee growers are not behind in producing the quality of stock which formerly had to be looked for from outsiders. Thus the second annual flower show of the Milwaukee Florists' Club has established a reputation which will be a great help for years to come.

Elmer D. Smith & Co., of Adrian, Mich., who exhibited cut mums, showed what fine quality can be attained by specializing.

The Fox Point Floral Co., of Milwaukee, exhibited cyclamens which were exceptionally fine and an eye-opener to some of the craft.

Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, N. J., had a neat group of fine ornamental plants.

J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, O., had

The judges concluded their work with the following addition to the record: "The judges cannot close their report of the exhibits without some reference to the non-competitive displays, which added much to the educational features of the show. Worthy of honorable mention are the displays of Vaughan's Seed Store, the George Wittbold Co., the Frank Kadlec Nursery Co., Klehm's Nurseries, W. W. Barnard Co., F. D. Clavey and Winterson's Seed Store in nursery stock and landscape effects, and the very interesting displays of photographs and drawings and models of the University of Illinois. We would recommend honorable mention to the fine display of cocos from Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, palms from the University of Chicago, the cut blooms of the pompons from the University of Illinois, and the decorative groups from Lincoln park and the South parks. The Schiller booth has been maintained in a most attractive condition during the show and is worthy of the highest commendation. The tables decorated by the Albert T. Hey Floral Co., the George Wittbold Co. and Schiller have been renewed daily and effectively."

The Banquet.

Since the Chicago Florists' Club last banqueted the flower show trade visitors, a new lobster palace has been opened, and the scene of the festivities November 10 was the red room on the nineteenth floor of the Hotel La Salle. At the round tables, each seating eight, were many congenial parties, numbering all told 200, about evenly divided between guests and members of the club. To most of those present the change from the older hotels afforded a pleasing novelty, and the repast, service and all concomitants were of a character which gave the committee every reason to be satisfied with its choice. The menu was as follows:

Bluepoints
Celery — Olives — Almonds
Cream of Tomatoes
Filet of Whitefish, au Vin Blanc
Potatoes Fondante
Larded Tenderloin of Beef
French Peas — Stuffed Tomatoes
Roast Squabs, Au Cresson
Salad
Besquit Imperiale
Petite Fours
Roquefort — Port du Salut
Assorted Crackers
Cafe — Apollinaris.

W. N. Rudd was toastmaster, but the committee did not afford him the usual free play, for a vaudeville entertainment had been aranged for, which occupied a good share of the time. George Asmus was introduced as the Pooh-Bah of the craft—the man who holds all the offices—manager of the flower show, president of the Florists' Club, and president-elect of the S. A. F. In concluding his talk Mr. Asmus urged cooperation for the national flower show at Boston and gave it as his opinion that if a spring convention is tried by the S. A. F. it will please so well that the time of meeting will be regularly changed. Other speakers were W. F. Kasting, treasurer of the S. A. F.; J. F. Cowell, of Buffalo; Adam Graham, of Cleveland; Prof. J. C. Blair, of Urbana; P. J. Foley, of Chicago; H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill.; C. L. Washburn, president of the Illinois Florists' Association, and H. B. Dorner, secretary of the S. A. F. Alternating with the talks were the acts of the vaudevillians. Toastmaster Rudd called for Chairman A. C. Kohlbrand, of the banquet committee, and that versatile gentleman responded with a German dialect story that beat the work of the professional performers. The other members of the banquet committee were Fred Lautenschlager, D. A. Robertson, Alex. Henderson and W. N. Rudd.

The bowlers of the Chicago Florists' Club gave a dance at the Coliseum annex, for the trade visitors, on the evening of November 11. About fifty couples were present and the affair was thoroughly enjoyable. It was largely in the hands of T. C. Yarnall, chairman, and Allie Zech, secretary of the bowlers' organization, with many able assistants. A feature of interest was that the music was furnished by B. Zima, who, in addition to being a florist on West Twenty-sixth street, is the leader of a first-class orchestra.

The Visitors.

As with the general attendance, the number of trade visitors was possibly not quite up to the record of recent years. The names of the florists present the first two days appeared in The Review for November 10. Those who appeared on the scene the later days of the show included the following:

Dover, N. H.—Walter F. Sherman, employed at C. L. Howe's greenhouses on Garrison Hill, was recently obliged to have one of his fingers amputated on account of blood poisoning. The diseased condition was caused by a rose thorn, which had become deeply embedded in the finger.

MILWAUKEE.

That a good, first-class flower show is a great drawing card when properly advertised was demonstrated at this, the second annual flower show of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, held November 9 to 13, at the Auditorium. It was a show of which each member of the local craft could justly be proud. The arrangement, which represented a forest in its autumn glory, with a waterfall and a running brook, was complete in every detail, due to the untiring energy of the chairman, H. V. Hunkel, and August F. Kellner, ably assisted by the other members of the executive committee, C. Dallwig, J. G. Heitman, William Zimmermann, Arthur Leidiger, C. C. Pollworth, Nic Zweifel and a force of willing and loyal assistants. While it took several weeks of work to get the large trees and other paraphernalia to the hall, it was a still larger task to get everything in shape and place in the short time of two and one-half days and two nights. Here it was clearly demonstrated that experience is the best teacher, for, with the experience gained at last year's show, everything, under the supervision of H. V. Hunkel and August F. Kellner, seemed to run in a more systematic way, thus saving an enormous lot of time and extra expense.

The setting of the show included an artistic group of pines, from the midst of which burst the waterfall, which was as true to nature as any one could desire and was one of the most admired points in the show. The right side of the stage represented a hillside wooded with pine trees, and in front of this were two tall oak trees covered with wild smilax almost to the ceiling. Farther back several birches, with their light bark, and two magnolia trees, green with foliage, helped to give the hall the desired effect.

Winding throughout was the brook, spanned by five rustic bridges and edged with sod, and an apple tree, which was leaved with wild smilax and had a beautiful chrysanthemum group around its base, also came in for a share of the favorable comment. Seven tables set with dinner decorations, but not for competition, were placed in various locations under the trees and on the sod, and gave the impression of a fashionable lawn party.

In touching upon the exhibits it can be said that it was a local show, undoubtedly due to the fact that four other large fall shows were being held on the same days. Last year many mums, both cut and in pots, came from Chicago and vicinity; they were absent this year and the displays of some eastern firms were also missing. But the local boys had the right spirit and, with nearly everyone contributing, the whole show was a grand success—more so than last year.

The palm and other groups, which were plentiful and of good quality, helped to comfortably fill the main floor, and the stage was used for the different classes of cut blooms. Here, too, it was proven that the Milwaukee growers are not behind in producing the quality of stock which formerly had to be looked for from outsiders. Thus the second annual flower show of the Milwaukee Florists' Club has established a reputation which will be a great help for years to come.

Elmer D. Smith & Co., of Adrian, Mich., who exhibited cut mums, showed what fine quality can be attained by specializing.

The Fox Point Floral Co., of Milwaukee, exhibited cyclamens which were exceptionally fine and an eye opener to some of the craft.

Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, N. J., had a neat group of fine ornamental plants.

J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, O., had a display of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, which were well done and greatly admired.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Chicago, exhibited some of their high grade roses and cut mums and reaped their reward.

The judges were Otto Spidel, Oconomowoc, Wis., James Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis., and Edward Amerpohl, Janesville, Wis.

NEW YORK.

New York had two big shows last week and in each case the strike of the express drivers made the work difficult, stock being delayed, procured from the depots with difficulty and in some instances not shipped at all because of the risk involved.

The Horticultural Society of New York, of which F. R. Pierson, G. V. Nash, A. L. Miller, J. E. Lager, F. H. Traendly, Peter Duff, P. O'Mara, J. A. Manda and James Stuart compose the exhibition committee, holds its shows at the American Museum of Natural History, opposite Central park. This one opened with a private view on Wednesday evening, November 9, for members of the society, of the museum, and of affiliated organizations; about 1,000 people were present. The attendance was 4,000 to 5,000 on some days, while on Sunday afternoon it reached nearly 6,000. The society's exhibitions are entirely free. The exhibition was much larger than expected, in view of the strike of express drivers, which prevented those at a distance from sending in their exhibits. This was noticeable mainly among the larger specimen plants. The interest displayed in the success of the exhibition, however, was very gratifying, for members sent in exhibits by automobiles or any other conveyances accessible, many bringing in large boxes by hand.

The judges were Robert Stobo, C. H. Totty, Alex. Mackenzie, William Reid, I. L. Powell, Robert Angus.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Minnesota State Florists' Association held at Minneapolis, November 9 to 14, the most successful flower show in the history of the trade in the northwest, so successful, in fact, that it was held open one day longer than planned, running through Monday. The arrangement in the big armory was excellent. A. J. Smith was manager and the decorating committee was William Desmond, H. Will and C. F. Rice. The show committee was: Theodore Wirth, chairman; O. C. Swanson, H. Will, E. Nagel, C. N. Ruedlinger, E. C. Hughart, Charles Vasatka, William Desmond, Hans Rosacker, J. P. Jorgensen, C. F. Rice, A. J. Smith, William Holmes.

The show was fortunate in having the active participation of the leading retail florists of St. Paul and Minneapolis. O. C. Swanson, the Chapman-Dillin Co., Minneapolis Floral Co., H. Rosacker, L. S. Donaldson Co. and Holm & Olson, L. L. May & Co., and others put up splendid work in the classes for tables, bouquets, baskets and other retail stock, also staging many attractive things for exhibition only.

The roses attracted as much attention as anything in the show. On 100 Beauties, Holm & Olson were first, and L. L. May & Co. put up one named Apricot.

There were more than thirty classes for carnations, and the premiums were well distributed. In cut mums H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., E. D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., and the La Crosse Floral Co. contested with such local growers as the Minneapolis Floral Co., Lakewood Cemetery, Will Bros., Holm & Olson, L. S. Donaldson Co., L. L. May & Co., and others. Donaldson, Swanson and Holm & Olson were the principal exhibitors of decorative plants.

Over 100 florists attended the banquet at Donaldson's tea rooms. Theodore Wirth was master of ceremonies and made many graceful allusions to the beauty of the exhibits of those present.

The judges were J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia.; J. H. Hess, of Omaha, and F. W. Plummer, of Kewanee, Ill.

General View, West Wing, Horticultural Society of New York Show.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.

The sixth annual chrysanthemum exhibition of the Lake Geneva Gardeners' and Foremen's Association, November 7 and 8, was a pronounced success. The quality of the exhibits was far ahead of any other year. The large blooms of mums, such as Dr. Enguehard, Mrs. Weeks, Yellow Eaton, Golden Dome, Timothy Eaton, Colonel Appleton, Major Bonnaffon and many others, were the best that ever were exhibited at Lake Geneva. The specimen chrysanthemum plants were one of the chief attractions of the show. A large single variety, Catherine Livingston, which is a product of Lake Geneva, was shown by A. J. Smith, the plant measuring eighteen feet in circumference. The large groups of chrysanthemums, with palms and ferns included, were a great attraction, A. J. Smith, gardener to J. J. Mitchell, winning first, and Joseph Krupa, gardener to N. W. Harris, second; Axel Johnson, gardener to R. T. Crane, third. William F. Longland, gardener to C. L. Hutchinson, showed two creditable groups of anemones and pompons. The groups for single flowering varieties were keenly competed for, with Smith and Longland carrying off the honors. A splendid specimen plant of Ficus Parcelli was shown by A. J. Smith, Joseph Krupa coming a close second with a perfectly grown plant of Dieffenbachia magnifica. The groups of foliage plants were specially good. The roses, carnations and other exhibits were excellent. The vegetable collections surpassed anything shown here before. The Boddington prizes were won by Robert Sampson, A. J. Smith, Joseph Krupa. The Vaughan prizes for vegetables were won by Joseph Krupa, A. J. Smith and Robert Sampson. William Currie, of Milwaukee, and Mr. Blackwood, of Lake Geneva, acted as judges.

The society's annual banquet was held on the evening of November 7, at the Y. M. C. A., where 125 guests assembled. The chief speakers were Frederick Cranefield, Madison; W. Currie and A. J. Smith. Frank Higgins acted as toastmaster.

A SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

Next Monday will be the silver anniversary of the entrance of M. Rice into the business of florists' supplies. The start was made in a modest way the Monday before Thanksgiving twenty-five years ago. It chanced that year to fall on November 25, but Mr. Rice has a warm spot in his heart for the day of the week, the Monday before Thanksgiving, so his anniversary in business will be celebrated on that day.

M. Rice in 1885.

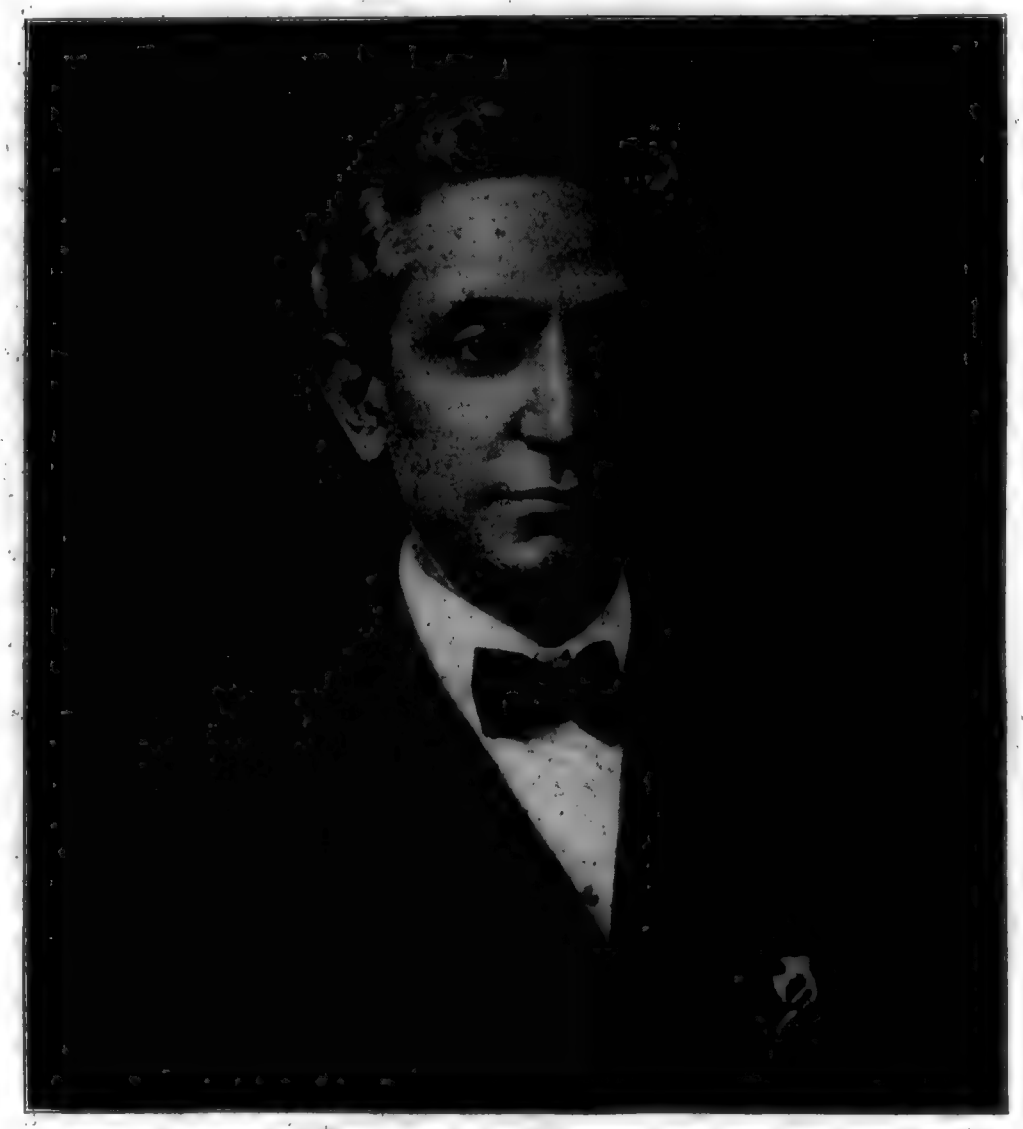
The business history of these twenty-five years is full of interest. It shows the possibilities within the reach of a man of high aims and ambitions who is willing to work.

M. Rice removed to Philadelphia from Detroit in 1875, when he was 11 years of age. The next ten years were spent in a little time at school, but mainly at work. Much of his spare time was passed at the flower shop of Eugene Weiss, on Eighth street below Arch, where he learned to love the business, which at that time was largely in designs. Mr. Rice delights to tell of how he sold a dried immortelle design of faith, hope and charity on Christmas afternoon to a young man to send his best girl on Spruce street. That there was a future for florists' supplies all over the country Mr. Rice then believed.

A start was made in 1885, when E. Weiss, A. Jones and M. Rice, then 21 years old, formed a partnership under the name of the Philadelphia Immortelle Design Co., with offices at Eighth and Arch streets. They went over to New York and bought 25,000 cape flowers for $25, a large purchase in those days, from F. E. McCallister. With these made up into designs Mr. Rice started on the Monday before Thanksgiving that year on his first trip. It snowed that day and the whole day was spent at Hazelton calling on the undertakers —there were no florists—none of whom wanted his wares, until finally the last man said those designs were just what he was looking for, and bought $24 worth. Then Mr. Rice felt there was a future in the business.



Freeland came next, then Wilkes-Barre, where William Eldridge, of happy memory, proved the first florist customer, and ordered milkweed, cape flowers and pampas plumes, to be of exactly the same shade, then an unusual request. Nine orders were the result of the first week's work, and on Mr. Rice's return a start was made in a one-story building at 725 Arch street to manufacture the designs. It was a struggle at first, but Mr. Rice tells with pride today that every account ever owed by his firm in this country has been discounted and settled by the first day of the following month, while every importation received from abroad has been paid for immediately upon its receipt from the custom-house.

It became necessary for Mr. Jones to retire, and then Mr. Rice first learned the importance of the bank, his acquaintance having been confined to the tellers or bookkeepers. Ushered into the awful presence of the president, he explained that money was needed to retire a partner and run the business and what little they had was locked up in dried flowers. To his own surprise, the money, $500, was forthcoming. It was returned in full on the day set, and from that time his credit was established. Florists' supplies in those days were confined chiefly to immortelles, cape flowers, rhodanthe, helichrysum, milkweed, pampas plumes, and the smaller grasses, Briza media, Briza maxima and others. Splint baskets, trimmed with these grasses, soon followed, then sea moss. There were regular trips on the road taken with increasing success. Undertakers chiefly, but gradually the florists, became interested, and as the business of the latter grew, that of the funeral directors dwindled.

While Mr. Rice was on one of these trips occurred the great fire at Eighth and Arch streets. He came home, though reassured by wire, and found that the wall of the burned building next door was standing and apparently safe. He started out again, but two days later was recalled by the wire, "The wall has fallen." This was a serious blow; all the stock of the Philadelphia Immortelle Design Co. was covered by debris. Much of it was saved by hard labor, the claim was satisfactorily adjusted, and a fresh start was made in better quarters at 904 Filbert street. Two years later, in 1888, they enlarged this building. In 1890 they returned to 725 Arch street under an agreement with their landlord by which they added two stories at their own expense, paying a merely nominal rental. Mr. Rice purchased the interest of his partner in 1892 and the Philadelphia Immortelle Design Co. consolidated with Joseph Marshutz & Co., the partners in the new firm being Joseph Marshutz and M. Rice, the latter having one-third interest, the business being carried on at 25 North street, then occupied by Marshutz & Co. This was a great step forward for Mr. Rice, who had but dreamed of such good fortune as being taken into a large firm with an established business.

The S. A. F. convention was held in Washington that year. Mr. Rice went there and received a wonderful order, for that time, from E. G. Gillett, then buyer for J. M. McCullough's Sons, of Cincinnati. Wheat sheaves were ordered by half gross of a size, instead of half dozens; the total amounted to over $500. This encouraging start prompted a night journey back to Philadelphia to make sure the order was understood before starting for the west. He started on the road with fresh vigor that year; conditions were prosperous and a splendid season resulted. The next year, 1893, saw the panic, but, despite that obstacle, fair results were secured.

September 15, 1894, Mr. Marshutz died. Mr. Rice purchased his partner's interest and the firm name was changed to M. Rice & Co. This was a serious matter, readily understood by anyone

Wheat sheaves were ordered by half gross of a size, instead of half dozens; the total amounted to over $500. This encouraging start prompted a night journey back to Philadelphia to make sure the order was understood before starting for the west. He started on the road with fresh vigor that year; conditions were prosperous and a splendid season resulted. The next year, 1893, saw the panic, but, despite that obstacle, fair results were secured.

September 15, 1894, Mr. Marshutz died. Mr. Rice purchased his partner's interest and the firm name was changed to M. Rice & Co. This was a serious matter, readily understood by anyone familiar with the amount of capital locked up in a large business. Mr. Rice had practically no capital, but he made generous terms with Mrs. Marshutz and more than fulfilled them. The next few years were years of difficulties and perplexities; the successful salesman had to be transformed into the successful head of a large house. The man who had sold well must learn to buy well. This was no easy matter. Competition was keen, difficulties many, but success crowned Mr. Rice's efforts, and in April, 1897, much sooner than promised, the Marshutz obligation was discharged. Mr. Rice then made his first trip abroad. These trips have been continued every year or two since.

The business prospered, the field broadened steadily, and in 1899 B. Eschner entered the firm, which today consists of Messrs. Rice and Eschner.

In 1900 the business was removed to larger quarters at 918 Filbert street, closer to the railroad terminals. Their aim being to have something exclusive, in 1902 a department of ribbons was added, requiring much additional capital, but it proved an immediate success.

Progress for the next five years was amazing; the territory covered by the firm was steadily widening. The old quarters were outgrown and in 1905 a new five-story fireproof building was erected at 1220 Race street, a model salesroom and warehouse for florists' supplies. These quarters were again outgrown five years later, and last February saw the completion of another story, the sixth.

The progress made in twenty-five years can be clearly portrayed by recalling on the one hand the small business, with the proprietor offering his own wares, happy to make a single sale, with, on the other hand, the immense business of today, with a selling force consisting of B. Eschner, Arthur Zirkman, Frank Farney, Robert Schock and Charles Shackerman, covering the United States and Canada; a firm known and depended upon all over the land for a variety of supplies that have become absolute necessities to florists.

THE SURPRISE BOX.

[Gleanings of an interview with Charles Henry Fox.]

You may remember an incident I described before the Philadelphia Florists' Club in December last. A customer came in for some flowers late one afternoon and, while I was putting them up in my best style, he said: "Why can't you florists get up something new in boxes? I am tired to death of this old style." I thought all that evening how to improve our boxes—thought of it so earnestly on the way home on the car that I don't believe a five-dollar bill on the floor would have attracted my notice. I have been experimenting, designing for a year and a half; here is the result of my work.

You see the box is useful in a variety of ways; it may be used as a gift, for luncheon, or picnic, or theater party for four, six or eight. Violets are best adapted for favors, as they will not crush. The centerpiece that may be used on the table is of red roses.

OBITUARY.

Henry C. Fruck.

Henry C. Fruck, for many years gardener at Joseph Berry's greenhouses at Grosse Pointe, Mich., died at Hot Springs, Ark., Monday, November 7. Mr. Fruck had been in ill health for several years. November 2 he left Detroit for Hot Springs in the hope that he would be benefited by the change. He was still in the prime of life, being only 48 years old. His great hobby was orchids, in the culture of which he was an expert. The funeral, Monday, November 14, was attended by many friends in the trade.

Luther T. Seaver.

Luther T. Seaver, well known as a successful grower of pansies, died at his late home, 104 Winchester street, Medford, Mass., Thursday, October 27. He had been in his usual health until six days previous. He was 81 years old, having been born February 4, 1829, at Albany, Vt.

Mr. Seaver had a strong personality, strikingly peculiar to himself. He was fond of flowers and was best known as a successful grower of pansies, in the cultivation of which he took great pride. Choice seed was often purchased from Germany and a market for his pansies was found in nearly all of the New England states. For ten years quite a tract of land, opposite the Broadway Powder House, was under cultivation for pansies and was known as "Pansy Park." In more recent years the business was removed to College avenue. Two years ago Mr. Seaver retired from active business life.

Charles Edward Pease.

Charles Edward Pease, president of the Miami Floral Co., of Dayton, O., and one of the best known and most substantial business men of that city, died suddenly November 8, at his home, 138 West Second street. Heart disease was the cause of death, and he was ill but a few hours before the end came.

Aside from being head of the Miami Floral Co. and the Buckeye Iron and Brass Works, he was also president of the Leader Oil Co., of Demopolis, Ala.

In a social way Mr. Pease was well known, and numbered many friends. He was possessed of many charitable traits that his friends knew nothing about; no worthy charity was ever refused assistance by Mr. Pease.

One of Mr. Pease's hobbies was flowers, and it was through the united influence of him and the late Wm. Kiefaber, Sr., that the Miami Floral Co. was organized eight years ago. No person has done more to beautify the city than he. Several years ago Mr. Pease inaugurated a plan of flower beds on West Second street, extending the full length of the square in which he resided. This particular stretch of street has been conceded to be the most beautiful in the city; as the seasons changed, suitable blooming plants were arranged in the flower beds, all of which was done at his own expense. For landscape gardening and rare flowers, there was no more noted home in the city. It was his hobby, his ideal, and a symbol of his splendid nature.

Charles Edward Pease was born

August 20, 1836, in West Carrollton, O., a small village five miles south of Dayton, his parents being Horace and Sarah L. (Bellville) Pease. The ancestral home of the family was at Hull, England, whence representatives came to the New World at an early period in its colonization. Mr. Pease was educated in the Dayton public schools, while later he attended the University of Wisconsin at Madison, leaving this institution in 1859. In 1862 he responded to the call for military aid, when he became connected with the quartermaster's department at Nashville, Tenn., under Capt. Chas. T. Wing, with whom he was associated until the end of the war.

Mr. Pease was a thirty-second degree Mason, a Knight Templar and a member of the Shrine. On the 3d day of October, 1865, in Cleveland, O., he was united in marriage with Miss Laura G. Erwin. Two sons were born to them, Calvin Erwin, who died in 1902, at the age of 35 years, and Edward Gardner Pease, now vice-president of the Buckeye Iron and Brass Works.

Mr. Pease is survived by his widow, Mrs. Laura G. Pease, one son, Edward Gardner, and a granddaughter, Miss Catherine Pease.

Never before, at a funeral in this city, was there such a profuse and elaborate display of flowers. Mr. Pease was a great lover of flowers, and he was literally buried in them.

P. J. Berckmans.

Prosper Julius A. Berckmans, well known in the trade as the senior member of the firm of P. J. Berckmans Co., Fruitland Nurseries, Augusta, Ga., and famous both within and without the trade as a horticulturist, pomologist and entomologist, died of heart trouble at his home on Washington road, a few miles from Augusta, November 8, at the age of 80 years. He had been ill for only a few days.

He was born at Aerschot, near Brussels, Belgium, October 13, 1830. The family to which he belonged was prosperous and highly respected and he had the best of educational advantages. He graduated with the Bachelor's degree in his native country and afterward continued his education in France.

His father, Dr. Louis E. Berckmans, was noted as an amateur horticulturist and pomologist and had one of the largest collections of pears, apples, etc., in Belgium. In 1851 the family came to America, bringing with them the choicest part of this collection of fruit trees, and Dr. Berckmans purchased a large estate at Plainfield, N. J. There he and his son, Prosper, began the work of improvement and of cultivation, but the property was found to be not altogether suitable for their special purposes, on account of the rigor of the climate.

In 1857, therefore, they moved southward, bought a piece of land on the outskirts of Augusta, Ga., and founded the Fruitland Nurseries. Beginning on a tract of not more than twenty acres, the business has developed until it is now one of the largest of the kind in the south, with roses spread over great areas; fruit trees in orchard and nursery to the extent of about 300 acres; grape vines in test vineyard and nursery row, covering ten or twelve acres; evergreens and deciduous trees of the ornamental types, occupying twenty-five or more acres. In addition there are the small fruit plots and the minor test grounds.

Ten years ago P. J. A. Berckmans gave each of his sons a fifth interest in the Fruitland Nurseries, reserved two-fifths for himself and had the company incorporated. His sons leased the two-fifths share of their father and have for several years had active management of Fruitlands, with their father's sound advice always to be secured at a moment's notice.

Mr. Berckmans' general interest in horticulture, as a writer and organizer, began early in life. At the age of 18 he assisted his father in the preparation of the "Album de Pomologie," the best authority of the kind at the time. For several years he edited the Farmer and Gardener, which was published in Augusta. In 1876 he was the leading spirit in organizing the Georgia State Horticultural Society, of which he was president continuously till his death. He was president of the State Entomological Society ever since its organization, and was long a prominent figure in the State Agricultural Society. For many years he was a member of the Richmond County Agricultural Society and in his later years was president of it. He was president of the American Pomological Society and vice-president of the International Pomological Society, with headquarters in Paris, France. He has written many interesting and valuable articles on subjects pertaining to the culture of plants.

He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Mary Craig, of New Jersey, and his second wife Mrs. Edith Frome Berckmans, who survives him. He also leaves three sons, R. C., S. A. and P. J. A. Berckmans, Jr., and a stepson, A. F. Purdy.

ROSLYN, N. Y.

At the meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society at Pembroke hall November 10, Messrs. Barton, Marshall and Westley acted as judges and made the following awards: Twelve white mums, J. McDonald, first; twelve pink and twelve yellow, L. J. Trepess, first on each. A cultural certificate was awarded to Mr. McDonald for a fine vase of mums and to F. Petroccia for celery, also honorable mention for celeriac.

J. Forbes, winner of the Troy cup, passed that trophy around filled with Moet & Chandon's best, and there were good cigars, so everybody had a good time.

The next meeting will see a contest with violets, sweet peas and poinsettias.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

WITH this issue The Review begins its fourteenth year.

THE most successful flower shows of the year were those in which the retail florists took part.

WHAT has become of that fad for wearing artificial flowers that some retailers, a few months ago, thought would be the ruination of the business?

THE glass market has fluctuated violently in the last few weeks, one day up and next day down, the lowest prices being beyond question below the cost of production. Reasons for the situation are not apparent and even those in the glass trade are in doubt as to the future course of the market.

How to attend three big flower shows in two days was demonstrated last week by H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill., and E. D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich. They spent November 9 at the Minneapolis show, November 10 at the Milwaukee exhibition and the evening of that day at the Chicago show and banquet.

DOES A NATIONAL BUSINESS.

Time was when florists were content to do local business only, but now many of them are awake to the fact that it is easier to do mail order wholesale trade and that the business all over the country can be handled without interfering in the least with the local retail end. All one has to do is work up stock and advertise in the Review:

Please cancel my ad of Asparagus plumosus and primulas; all gone; you have sold for me about 40,000 of these plants this season.—U. G. Hargleroad, Shippensburg, Pa., Nov. 8, 1910.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business is good again. The mum glut, while it was rather worse than usual this year, was passed and ended weeks ahead of the usual time. The market has been slowly recovering and now that the chill of autumn is in the air things have taken their usual late November swing. There continues to be plenty of chrysanthemums, but they are no longer the weight that they were earlier in the season. The bulk of the receipts now are Bonnaffon; it is far more plentiful than any other variety and in some houses is received in greater quantity than all other varieties put together. Those which can be sold at from 8 cents to 12 cents go best; it is the frequent complaint that the large, fancy stock, which should command 25 cents or more, is salable only in limited quantity.

Beauties have become more plentiful for commercial purposes since the flower shows, though there is not yet an abundance. Taking the present cut as a whole, the quality never was better. The greater part of each day's receipts are long stems, whereas medium stems are most in demand, but for size of bud, color, strength of stem and perfection of foliage the Beauties now being cut leave little to be desired. Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Maryland, Jardine and the several other varieties handled in smaller quantities are being cut in about the usual quantity, but demand has improved to such an extent that less stock is seen standing in the wholesale houses. It is noticeable that the stock that moves slowly is the special long fancy grade. It looks as though the production of these finest of flowers may be ahead of the demand and that the longest roses may not realize their full value as compared to the selling value of the short and medium lengths. No finer roses could be asked for than those now coming in. Few flower shows have had better roses than those daily offered in the Chicago market.

Carnations have come in for their share in the increased demand, but the call seems to be running largely toward Enchantress. Last season Enchantress was rather overdone and many growers have this year planted other varieties, especially white, cutting down to some extent on Enchantress. The result is that with a fair run of business in the carnation department wholesalers find themselves with plenty of good white and not enough light pink. White Enchantress and White Perfection both are fine and abundant.

Violets are not being received as heavily as in other years and the price has worked up to a point which should encourage the growers to increase their shipments to this market. A large demand for violets for Thanksgiving is anticipated. Cattleyas have become even less plentiful than a week ago and there are instances where as much as $1 apiece has been paid in case of necessity. The demand for valley continues strong and there is difficulty in filling late orders. Harrisii are abundant.

The advance orders indicate an excellent Thanksgiving business. Thanksgiving is not a holiday like Christmas or Easter; it is a day when people buy flowers for their own use and high prices are not to be thought of. It has been the almost invariable experience that growers held back too much stock and that on the eve of Thanksgiving the market broke badly because of too heavy receipts. Wholesalers are urging their shippers to keep the stock coming right along each day through the next week, feeling that if this course is pursued the market will have a splendid week's business.

Big Buying of Glass.

During the big break in the glass market a couple of weeks ago, when glass was offered below recent costs of production, several growers bought heavily. The fact that Poehlmann Bros. Co. bought 4,000 boxes has already been recorded and it now develops that they placed another order for 2,000 boxes, a total of about fifteen carloads. Bassett & Washburn ordered 3,000 boxes, or over seven cars. Peter Reinberg took two cars. J. A. Budlong ordered a car. Wendland & Keimel ordered nearly five cars. Ernest Weiss bought for his new place at Elmhurst and probably others placed orders not yet reported. All the glass dealers booked a share of the business. It represents a train load of glass for this market.

Mendel's Accomplishment.

Joseph Mendel, who runs two flower stores on the west side, performed a notable feat in the election November 8. At the primaries he was tenth man on the list of ten nominees for county commissioner on the democratic ticket, gaining his place at the foot of the list by only a few hundreds of votes. But in the election itself he pulled away from all those whose names were above his own on the ticket, receiving more votes than any other of the twenty candidates save Bartzen, the candidate for chairman of the board. Though Mr. Mendel was tenth man in the primaries, he polled 7,400 more votes than the man who was tenth in the election, and 3,300 more than his associate on the ticket who ran closest to him.

Various Notes.

P. M. Obertin, of Kenosha, Wis., was in town November 15, and when seen at Kyle & Foerster's told of the splendid way in which business is increasing in his town. His latest and largest order is a contract for the landscape work on the city park of about seven acres.

Tim Matchen says that if the month ends as the latter half of it has begun an excellent showing of business will be made.

George Asmus is suffering from rheumatism as a result of his exertions at the flower show.

M. Alexander, representing Lion & Co., has been calling on the retailers and reports an excellent Christmas business.

Henry Van Gelder, manager of the Percy Jones business, says that their records show that growers have thus far this year averaged better prices for Bonnaffon than were received at Thanksgiving in any previous year.

Bassett & Washburn have installed new office furniture and a desk telephone.

M. C. Gunterberg had the first Paper Whites received in the Flower Growers' Market. They arrived November 14.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., is out on the road again.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says that the growers who have produced small Bonnaffon have done better this year than those who have grown big, fancy flowers.

A. T. Pyfer, of the Chicago Carnation Co., escorted a large party of flower show visitors to Joliet November 11, to inspect Washington, the pink sport of Enchantress, growing there. Mr. Pyfer expects to do a large business in cuttings of this variety.

John Zech hopes to see next year's flower show schedule framed with rose and carnation classes specially for growers with a limited amount of glass; he says he knows of several who would like to compete in a class open to no one with over 50,000 feet of glass.

John P. Risch has typhoid fever.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., says that business was better last week than he ever has seen it with a flower show in progress.

Vaughan & Sperry state that William Dittman, at New Castle, has three houses 28x300 planted to Beauties, which are just coming in with the first crop of the season, and that they think he will hit the December market just right.

Harry Manheim, who handles the shipping orders for Hoerber Bros., reports a belated wire November 14 that called for $40 worth of stock with forty minutes to catch the train. He says he made it.

The Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y., have been sending some excellent Appleton chrysanthemums to Kyle & Foerster.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. won a single premium of $500 at St. Louis last week.

At J. A. Budlong's, Phil Schupp says he is well satisfied with his first experience of entering largely at the show. On twenty-four entries they won nineteen awards, amounting to about the market value of the stock with something over to pay for the time spent in staging, so that the publicity was clear profit.

John Kruchten is planning to extend his business through the shipping trade. Heretofore he has given most of his attention to city sales, but, with increased facilities, believes he can add to the out-of-town business without loss to the local end.

W. E. Lynch, at E. H. Hunt's, says he looks for the largest Thanksgiving demand in the concern's thirty-two years at it. Count 'em!

At Winterson's Seed Store they say that many customers this week mention the store's flower show display.

Wietor Bros. say business opened up strong this week and that a steady run of good trade is anticipated.

Aphine

The Insecticide that kills plant Lice of every species

"The Aphine has been severely tested, having passed expectations. Used it upon mealy bug, scale, fly and spider without injury to the foliage whatsoever. For red spider used it 1 part to 15 parts water with the best possible results. I consider Aphine is far ahead of any insecticides I have used in England, having had good experience with same there."

"The above is the report of my greenhouse foreman, and from my own observations the results are eminently satisfactory in every respect. You have at last put on the market an insecticide that does all claimed for it and more.

The Market.

The market was fairly good last week. There was no glut of any kind, but there was more than enough stock of good quality with which to fill orders. The lesser grades did not move quite so well and quite a bit of this was left over and wasted. The leading retailers say there is still a lack of steadiness among them, for reasons not accountable. There were a few weddings of promise that took place last week, but they lacked the usual large floral decorations. Things should pick up from now on, as Thanksgiving is not so far off.

The stock that is coming in at the wholesale houses at the present time is of good quality and mums are still crowding roses and carnations for demand. Some fine Timothy Eaton, Chadwick and Golden Wedding are now to be had. All the early varieties are cut out. The wholesalers say that mums did not bring anything like the prices they got last year for fancy stock. The smaller varieties have had the best demand so far this season. Roses and carnations have suffered greatly during the early mum season, but are now showing more demand and at somewhat better prices than ten days ago. Lily of the valley had a good call all week. Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, November 10, in its hall in Odd Fellows' building, with a record breaking attendance, there being sixty members present, the visitors swelling the crowd to nearly seventy-five. Chairman De Wever of the bulletin committee reported that everything is running in fine shape and that it is on a paying basis. The trustees reported that they had provided an entertainment after the meeting and a dinner at Cambridge court. A communication was read from President-elect George Asmus of the S. A. F. The following applicants were elected to membership: Alex. P. Geranios, M. F. Widmer, Highland, Ill., G. M. Thost and Hugo Gross. Otto Sander made application for membership.

The question box was dispensed with and an athletic performance was given which was highly interesting to the members and visitors, after which Messrs. Schoenle, Pilcher, Vennemann, Smith, Angermueller and Beneke entertained in a most pleasing way. After the performance the members and visitors were taken in a body to Cambridge court for dinner, at which sixty were seated. After satisfying the inner man, Secretary Beneke acted as toastmaster and called on the following gentlemen for a talk: President Connon, Vice-President Frank A. Weber, ex-President G. B. Windler, Joe Hill, Richard Sahm, R. F. Tesson and A. S. Halstead. Automobiles were in waiting and the entire party were taken to the Coliseum, where the flower show was held. This was one of the most pleasant afternoons ever spent by the members of the Florists' Club.

Hill Co. at the show were much admired by the local growers. Sunburst, a salmon yellow, scored 87 points and Rose Queen, a fine pink seedling of Richmond, scored 85 points.

E. W. Guy, chairman of the club's trustees, says from now on there will be something doing at each club meeting and hopes the members will come out in good numbers.

C. Young & Sons Co. were the only florists to show in all the classes for floral work and were closely followed by the Metropolitan Floral Co., and their displays were much admired. It was all made of good workmanship and good quality of flowers.

J. F. Ammann could not attend the last meeting of the club, as he was one of the delegates to attend the ceremonies of the opening of the new McKinley bridge on that day.

C. C. Sanders was all smiles during the week, as word was received from Pico, Tex., where his son, Walter, resides, that he is a grandfather. He was congratulated on all sides.

The Ladies' Home Circle gave a theater party and dinner to the visiting ladies last week, which was an enjoyable affair. Their annual meeting takes place Monday afternoon, November 21, in Trimp hall, when the election of officers will take place. They always have a good time after their meeting, with bowling and a lunch. Mrs. John Steidle, president, and Miss M. Meinhardt, secretary, expect a full attendance.

I. O. Kemble, florist at Marshalltown, Ia., is a visitor this week.

The Engelmann Botanical Club met Monday night, November 14, in the graduate lecture room of the Missouri Botanical Garden. Dr. R. R. Gates addressed the meeting on "The Brussels International Botanical Congress." After the meeting the members adjourned to inspect the chrysanthemum show, which opened in the garden that day in a big tent. The show is open day and evening to the public free of charge. There are 2,000 plants in 500 varieties on exhibition and of the highest quality. A great many in the trade were in attendance the first day.

The fine residence of Sam Erker, owner of the Oakland Floral Co., burned down a week ago. Pierre Schnider, who manages the place, is again in the market with a fine cut of carnations.

The judges for the flower show were Messrs. Bourdet, Tesson and F. W. Bruenig and they did their work well.

Otto Sander, Riessen Floral Co. and Fred Foster say that trade is beginning to pick up and become more steady, especially the transient trade.

The members of the Florists' Club and Horticultural Society were much pleased when they read in The Review that the Chrysanthemum Society had selected St. Louis as its meeting place for 1911. We will make it pleasant for them.

E. W. Guy, Gus. Grossart and A. G. Fehr, three Belleville florists, examined Henry Emunds' new chrysanthemum, yellow sport of Mme. Touset, and found it to be a true sport of Mme.

PHILADELPHIA.

Thanksgiving Prospects.

Cut flowers.—An unusually fine stock of every seasonable flower, with an abundance of all excepting cattleyas, gardenias and violets. These are likely to be scarce.

Plants.—A splendid stock of all varieties of palms, ferns of the Boston type, and table ferns. In flowering plants, cyclamens, Lorraine begonias and chrysanthemums are excellent in fair numbers.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Increased activity is evident in the cut flower market. There is plenty of fine material, with sufficient demand to use much of it at listed quotations. Chrysanthemums are a strong feature of the list. The late varieties noted for their excellence rule; Yellow Eaton as well as white, Bonnaffon in both colors, Chadwick and Mrs. Jerome Jones, both two-colored sorts, lead. Pink is represented by Minnie Bailey, Maud Dean and Dr. Enguehard. Other varieties include Lynnwood Hall, white; Roosevelt, pink and white; W. S. Davis, orange; Golden Wedding and Gold Mine. Garza is prominent among the singles. Good pompons, indoor grown, are popular, but the outdoor stock will not do.

Violets have been in favor. The supply was not equal to the demand Saturday, November 12, when Michigan met Pennsylvania on the football field. Doubles advanced to $1.50, the express strike cutting off the Hudson river shipments. Cattleyas advanced to $9 a dozen, with light receipts, and gardenias occasionally reached $4 per dozen, with the supply about equal to demand. There are more good carnations coming into town, and they are wanted. The Wards continue to bring $6; Pink Delight and O. P. Bassett, $4. The rose list is strengthened by fine Killarney with 2-foot stems; Richmond, too, is improving. Bouvardia has appeared. Snapdragon is getting into something like winter form. There is a decided improvement in the shipping demand. The street has been buying chrysanthemums, notably Bonnaffon, freely in hundred lots at 15 cents, and even paid 25 cents for some.

The Election of Mr. Heacock.

Our chief interest in last week's election attaches to the success of Joseph Heacock, president of the Philadelphia Florists' Club, in the twelfth senatorial district, Montgomery county. Mr. Heacock made a strong fight against a powerful opposition that had up to this time been successful. His election was a deserved compliment to the man more than a mere party triumph. Mr. Heacock ran for office because he felt it was the duty of a citizen to do so at the request of his fellow citizens. His two places at Wyncote and at Reulof require so much time that it will only be possible for him to attend to his work in Harrisburg through that thorough system for which he is noted and which has done so much to place him where he now is in the front ranks of our florists.

Aschmann Brothers.

Edward Aschmann and Howard Aschmann have their place at Second and Bristol streets in running order and filled with a nice stock of foliage and flowering plants. The place comprises about 25,000 feet of glass and one acre of ground. It is situated opposite Greenmount cemetery. The stock secured when the Messrs. Aschmann first took the place bears evidence of careful selection and good culture in growing. Much of it is now ready for use, the varieties and sizes showing clearly that knowledge of market requirements for which the Aschmanns are noted. Ferns of the Boston type are a leading feature—Bostons, Scottii, Scholzeli, Whitmani and Whitmani compacta, a pleasing form of the older variety. Small ferns for table use and Pteris Wilsoni in medium sizes look well. Araucaria excelsa has just arrived and is doing nicely and there are also quantities of Asparagus plumosus and Ficus elastica.

WHY THE P M RIBBONS ARE THE BEST

Those who for years have specialized along certain lines, giving their customers the best and most up-to-date in those particular lines, that brains, time and money could produce, have not won success by chance, but by perseverance, application and knowledge, with the thought always in mind of giving something better each succeeding season.

This principle is applied in every detail and branch of our rapidly ex panding business, and in no department is this better demonstrated than in Our Ribbon Department. Our twenty years and more of practical experience in handling Flowers has given us ideas obtainable in no other way. Each Flower has suggested Some Beautiful Ribbon Creation, each one more beautiful than the last, thus giving us the largest and best supply of Choice Florists' Ribbons of any house in the country. Customers re-ordering time after time demonstrates to us that the Pennock-Meehan Quality Ribbons are and must be by far the best.

The flowering plant class is represented by promising lots of Begonia Lorraine, Primula Chinensis, Primula obconica, azaleas in variety and medium sizes of poinsettia, a new departure for the brothers, who have never grown this Christmas plant before. All these varieties looked well. Then there was a block of solanums, well berried; for later use lilies, hydrangeas, hardy ivy, all testifying to foresight and hard work, both so important to success. One house was devoted to carnations—White Enchantress, Afterglow, Winsor, White Perfection, Victory, and one or two other sorts. The place had been cleaned thoroughly and renovated, silent witnesses to the determination to win success.

A Notable Wedding.

A wedding will take place on the eve of Thanksgiving in New Castle, Ind., that will be of more than usual interest in this city and all over the country. Miss Caroline Forkner will become the bride of Patrick Joseph Lynch.

Just think of it! Joe Lynch is to be married! What will all the pretty girls in West Grove say? What will the lovely ladies in Philadelphia think? Brilliant, talented, versatile Joe Lynch, who is able to do easily and well a little more than the rest of us can do with prodigious effort, has been captured at last. A western girl triumphs where the eastern ones have failed.

To be serious—Patrick Joseph Lynch, managing owner of the Dingee & Conrad Co., West Grove, Pa., and managing owner of the Heller Bros. Co., New Castle, Ind., is a leading exponent of the mail plant industry today. The catalogues that he inspires and the roses that are produced under his management are favorably known in every state of the Union and in a number of places beyond. His friends wish him well.

Various Notes.

Stephen Mortensen and Mrs. Mortensen, of Southampton, Pa., spent a few weeks abroad this fall. They hurried home fearing the place might need attention and found it looking so well that Mr. Mortensen felt another fortnight abroad would have been just the thing. The new house is planted in Killarney and White Killarney this year.

Henry C. Geiger says that the Florex Gardens have mastered the vast heating problem that has so long been a vexation in one or another of its details.

The Germantown Horticultural Society held its regular meeting and chrysanthemum show November 14. There was an excellent display of the queen of autumn in pots and cut flowers. Edwin C. Jellett entertained the large audience with an interesting talk.

The arrival of the first liner from Hamburg to this port was an event last week. H. Bayersdorfer & Co. had large shipments on this vessel.

J. Murray Bassett will open a flower store in Hammonton, N. J.

Eugene Weiss is sending exceptionally well grown Maryland roses to Samuel F. Lilley.

Maurice Fuld will deliver an address on "Bulbs as House Plants; How to Start Them and How to Care for Them," at Michell's, 518 Market street, Monday, November 21, at 11 a. m.

A promising sign of the social season is the early demand for lace bouquet holders.

The first bouvardia is in—George Carpenter to William J. Baker, and John Savage to S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

John R. Andre is sending fancy grade stock to the Leo Niessen Co.

M. Rice & Co. have violet ruscus wreaths and red ruscus wreaths this week.

A new color in cyclamen flowers is a welcome addition. It is salmon pink that lights beautifully. There were a few last season, but now it is plentiful at the Robert Craig Co. There are three varieties, Salmon King and Salmon Queen from England and Wonder of Wandsbek, perhaps the best, from Germany. The plants are fine.

T. O. Knickman, of McHutchison & Co., was a visitor recently. N. B.—Initials being the rule and being unobtainable, these stand for "The Only."

The Philadelphia growers, who have been shipping to this market during the expressmen's strike in New York, resumed shipments to that city November 14 and were disappointed to learn that matters were not entirely settled on that day.

Vast crowds visited the chrysanthemum show in Fairmount park at Horticultural hall, Sunday, November 13.

Daniel E. Gorman, Williamsport, Pa., was here a few days ago to size up the market, and, it may be, the galleries.

Alfred Burton, Wyndmoor, Pa., has completed an artesian well to replace his present water supply. The well was sunk to a depth of 300 feet and is operated by a Standard pump and engine, with a 2,000-gallon compression tank for a reservoir. Phil.

The Market.

Conditions have improved steadily during the last week. It is true prices have not made much advance, but there is no great surplus. The weather is now colder and more seasonable and snow flurries have warned us that winter is not far away. Chrysanthemums continue in big supply and are of unusually good quality. Prices are, however, not what they should be. Extra fine flowers sell at $1.50 to $2 per dozen; in fact, few fancies go above these prices. The variety mostly seen is Bonnaffon. This grand old variety is seen of even better quality than fifteen years ago. Nagoya, Shrimpton, Gold Mine, Golden Eagle, White Eaton, Yellow Eaton and Appleton are other prominent sorts. Less of the last named sort is seen than in former years. Crimson varieties have sold well for the various Harvard football games.

Roses are cleaning up well and the colder weather has much improved their quality. Beauties are now extra fine, with stems equal to midwinter length. Killarney and White Killarney are fine and selling well. Bride and Maid move slowly. Mrs. Aaron Ward is popular and in active demand. Carnations are recovering somewhat from the doldrums, in which they have been while mums were king, but are now higher and selling better. Violets are quite scarce and much higher in price. All good flowers, especially of singles, have been making $1 per hundred. The quality is greatly improved. Paper White narcissi are not yet plentiful. A few Roman hyacinths have appeared, also callas in small lots. Valley is better in quality than for some time. Some nice pink antirrhinums are coming in and some nice mignonette is seen. Lilium longiflorum is of good quality. Some of the Formosa type is already arriving. Cattleyas are becoming much scarcer and have advanced in price. Cypripediums are quite plentiful. Quite an assortment of other orchids are seen. Gardenias are now obtainable the year around. Some good flowers are arriving daily. The demand for both Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri is improving. Adiantum is coming of superior quality, the fronds being well ripened.

Club Meeting.

There were 150 present at the club meeting November 15. M. W. Barrett, of Hyde Park, Mass., was the lecturer. He is a nurseryman and florist as well as a beekeeper, and his subject, "Bees in Relation to Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables," was ably and interestingly handled.

Andrew Christensen gave an interesting talk on his European visit. Major Burton, of London, England, a large commercial grower, was present and spoke on American flowers. He considered chrysanthemums and carnations superb, but he said we were much behind Europe in the culture of valley and mushrooms.

The following nominations were made: President, P. M. Miller; vice-president, Thomas Pegler; treasurer, Peter Fisher; secretary, W. N. Craig; executive committee, Albert Batley, Thomas Roland, J. M. Gleason, Robert Cameron, Eber Holmes, William Downs, A. E. Thatcher, W. J. Kennedy, W. E. Fischer, J. P. A. Guerineau and J. F. Flood.

There was the usual good display on the tables, including Vitis Henryana from R. & J. Farquhar & Co.; specimen chrysanthemums from Duncan Finlayson; fine collection of single seedling mums from Otto Strassenburg, a white and yellow being awarded report of merit; mignonette and azaleas from W. W. Edgar Co.; Mignonette Fottler's Eclipse from T. J. Grey Co., which received a report of merit; vase of roses from Eber Holmes; Carnation Gorgeous, bright cerise, from Peter Fisher, which were magnificent and awarded a report of superior merit. Mr. Fisher has 1,000 plants of Carnation Gorgeous and the variety is now in its fourth year.

The membership list was again augmented, there being eight new names added. The S. A. F. meeting in March came in again for some discussion. Everyone was pleased to see William Downs, the chairman of the entertainment committee, back in excellent health. He will speak at the December meeting on his European trip.

Various Notes.

The Halifax Gardens Co., of Halifax, Mass., is this season devoting half of its extensive greenhouses to cut flowers. Previously they grew vegetables exclusively. They have this season 50,000 carnation plants and 30,000 chrysanthemums. They are at present sending in a fine lot of carnations to 2 Park street to their salesman, Herbert E. Capers. Among others grown in quantity are White Enchantress, White Perfection, Pink Delight and Dorothy Gordon.

Littlefield & Wyman, the well-known carnation specialists of North Abington, have purchased the entire stock, together with the greenhouses, of E. T. Denham, who has retired. The greenhouses have been taken down and some of the material will be used. In spring the firm will start on an addition to their range. Some splendid carnations are now being picked, including good lots of several extra fine seedlings.

J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, among his other specialties, is bringing in extra fine flowers of Kate Broomhead and Bonnaffon chrysanthemums to 2 Park street.

A recent call on H. M. Robinson & Co. found that enterprising firm up to the ears in business. On the three floors of the new building recently acquired a large stock of chiffons, vases, fancy baskets and other florists' sundries is to be seen.

William H. Elliott has a fine lot of the pretty single white chrysanthemum, Anna, in his show windows. This makes one of the most charming of pot plants. The demand for roses is brisker, Mrs. Aaron Ward being eagerly snapped up.

W. S. Phelps, of Marlboro, shows some high grade chrysanthemums at 2 Park street. His flowers of Winter Cheer, Timothy Eaton, Yellow Eaton and Bonnaffon are noteworthy.

Thomas Pegler, at C Park street, is handling splendid Alice Byron chrysanthemums from Willow Hill Greenhouses and equally good Nagoyas from R. D. Kimball, of Waban.

The T. J. Grey Co. reports bulb business as away ahead of previous records. They have practically cleaned out their entire imports and have been compelled to buy large quantities on this side to make up late orders. T. J. Grey says that the mums seen at Morristown were marvelous.

J. T. Butterworth says that his crop of Cattleya labiata is just coming in finely now, when the bulk of growers have few flowers left. He has been besieged with orders from New York and other cities for his flowers, which are always of A1 quality.

C. A. Sanborn, of Woburn, is sending to E. J. Rogeau, at C Park street, the finest single violets seen this season, equal to midwinter quality. His pansies also are hard to beat.

Henry Penn, on Bromfield street, had an attractive show window November 12. A large display of vases and silver cups to be awarded at the Boston Terrier Club's exhibition were arranged on green velvet; as a background were superb vases of Bonnaffon chrsyanthemums. In the store itself was a splendid assortment of everything good in both cut flowers and plants, and business was, as usual, brisk.

G. W. Hillard, proprietor of the Exeter Rose Conservatories, Exeter, N. H., a well-known grower of Chatenay, has a good light sport of that popular rose. The flower is delicate pink in the center, the outer petals being almost white, the color being pleasing. Mr. Hillard's flowers are handled by J. S. Manter at the Boston Flower Exchange.

Frank P. Putnam, of North Tewksbury, is a new grower, whose flowers are already making an enviable record. He has two fine new carnation houses and no better flowers than his are seen in the markets.

Paul E. Richwagen is first in the market with a fine lot of pink antirrhinum, handled by E. J. Rogeau, which sells on sight.

Mr. Noyes, of Winchester, and Dobbins & Shannon, of Woburn, are handling single violets at 2 Park street, which are of gilt-edge quality. At present violets are quite scarce and all shipments are quickly bought up.

John W. Foote, of Reading, who for some years grew Fair Maid carnations as no one else could grow it, is having equally good success with Pink Delight. He is also a specialist on Bouvardia Humboldtii, one of the most popular of the choicer flowers seen on the market.

Quite a number of local growers were present on the evening of November 15 to see A. S. Parker, of Stoneham, installed as master of his Masonic lodge. W. N. Craig.

Five Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful a branch of the business that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Business was rather quiet here last week, few weddings or funerals of any consequence contributing to the general conditions. There is a plenitude of everything, with the exception of violets, which are not up to the usual supply, although sufficient to meet the ordinary demands. Chrysanthemums are now on the top of the popular wave and exclude almost everything else. A few roses are moving, and carnations, which are better in quality and quantity, find a trifle easier sale than ten days ago. There is no change in prices.

Horticultural Society.

The annual exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, held November 10 and 11, was a big disappointment. It is evident that a thorough reorganization must be made before the exhibitions are brought back to the plane they occupied a few years ago. The exhibits were conspicuous for their absence, and, outside of that made by Mr. Farquhar, gardener for Frederick S. Peck, of Barrington, there were not twenty-five blooms in the hall. A few pots of hardy mums, a few vases of carnations, ten or a dozen pots of tuberous begonias, half a dozen made-up table pieces and a lot of apples, unattractively displayed, made up the show, benched in the vestry of a church, in lieu of the magnificent exhibitions in the largest hall in the city ten years ago, when there were not half the number of growers now in this section.

A large specimen of Celosia plumosa from the estate of Nelson W. Aldrich, and a collection of chrysanthemums, were a feature. There is much dissatisfaction among growers of flowers of all kinds hereabouts in that all restrictions have been thrown aside and private gardeners and commercial growers compete in all classes. The judges were: James Hamilton, of Warwick; Frederick C. Green, superintendent of parks in this city, and Miss A. F. Holland, on flowers, and James E. Draper, of Worcester, on fruits.

Various Notes.

E. J. Johnston received a large invoice of palms from abroad last week. They are in fine shape.

There was a slight scarcity of yellow mums November 12, owing to the unusual demand from one of the large drug stores of the city, which distributed them free to its customers on the occasion of an anniversary sale.

Henri Petri is now in the employ of J. Kopelman & Co., whose increasing business has necessitated the adding of three to their regular force.

Woonsocket Hill Nurseries, C. W. Morey, proprietor, report an unusually busy fall on outdoor work, and numerous bookings for shrubs and trees for the spring.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Business is improving. The shortening of stock and the increase of demand have made the market firmer than at any time during the last fortnight. Some lines clean up readily, while others which were almost a drug on the market begin to hold their own. The increase in shipping is pronounced. This means that many buyers have about exhausted their house or two of mums and are now turning to the larger markets for supplies.

Chrysanthemums are, of course, the leading flower. At times the supply of choice white seems a little short, but the many consignments arriving at almost every hour relieve the tension and keep the prices normal. Major Bonnaffon and Dr. Enguehard are the leaders.

Roses, too, are coming in more slowly. The Beauties, Killarneys, Tafts, Brides and Richmonds are of the best quality. The pink varieties move quickly, while white, especially the short, sometimes hardly cleans up in a day's time. The demand for Beauties is fair and prices are about normal for the season.

Other lines of stock are growing in importance and favor. The supply of New York double violets scarcely equals the demand. The locally grown singles are off-crop for a few days. What is true of the doubles is also true of valley. Longiflorums, antirrhinums and sweet peas are offered. Carnations are in diminished supply and the prices are going up. The green goods market is active, with a sufficient supply in all lines.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Society was held at the club rooms November 14. The attendance was small. The following flower show committee was appointed: Ed. Forter, R. Witterstaetter, William Murphy, E. G. Gillett and Max Rudolph.

The bowling club will meet next Monday evening, November 21, at Finke & Craig's alleys.

C. E. Critchell has been finding a steady call for New York double violets.

William Murphy has sent men to the woods to look up holly and laurel. He expects to handle both in carload lots.

E. G. Gillett attended the Indianapolis show November 11. He has been receiving sweet peas from John E. Nellest, of Grand Rapids.

Miss Claire Murphy returned last week from California.

William Speck and party visited Richmond, Ind., November 13.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Olinger have returned from the Chicago show. While there they called on relatives at Evanston and Aurora.

Mrs. Henry Schwarz is home from her visit in Birmingham, Ala.

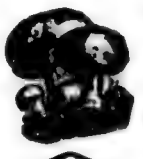
Morris Meyer, formerly with A. Sunderbruch's Sons, has accepted the position of foreman at the Bloomhurst Greenhouses.

Ed. Dennler celebrated his twenty-first birthday anniversary November 12. Among other guests were his fiancee and prospective relatives.

S. W. Carey, Urbana, O.; D. E. West, Jamestown, O., and the Covington Seed Co. are shipping good mums to C. E. Critchell.

Tom Windram, of Cold Springs, Ky., is fortunate in having a large bench of Mrs. Jerome Jones that will be due at Thanksgiving, and another bench of Jeanne Nonin that, judging from their present stage of development, will be about ready for Christmas.

William Murphy has an order for 1,000 choice mums for the local retailer who has the decoration for the wedding of Miss Lena Herrmann, daughter of Garry Herrmann, of baseball and Elk fame.



Visitors: Martin Reukauf, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and C. P. Dieterich, of Maysville, Ky.

BEST TOMATOES FOR FORCING.

I should like to know which are the best tomatoes for greenhouse culture. Where can I get the seed? R. M.

There are several good varieties of tomatoes suitable for forcing. The Comet is considered the leading all-round variety by a majority of growers. It is not so early as some other varieties, nor as large as others, but it is a well shaped, medium sized, very prolific variety, and does not seem to take the diseases as quickly as some others.

We give below a list of the forcing varieties and a description of each:

Our Extra-Selected Private Strain
GRAND RAPIDS LETTUCE
has been evolved by years of patient effort and selection until we have it now at the top-notch. We sell hundreds of pounds annually to the most critical trade, and it gives uniformly best results. Plant it for big profits from your greenhouse. Oz., 10c; ¼-lb., 35c; lb., $1.35 postpaid. We have many other fine strains and specialties for market gardeners. Watch this space for further news or write today to Desk R for wholesale price list.

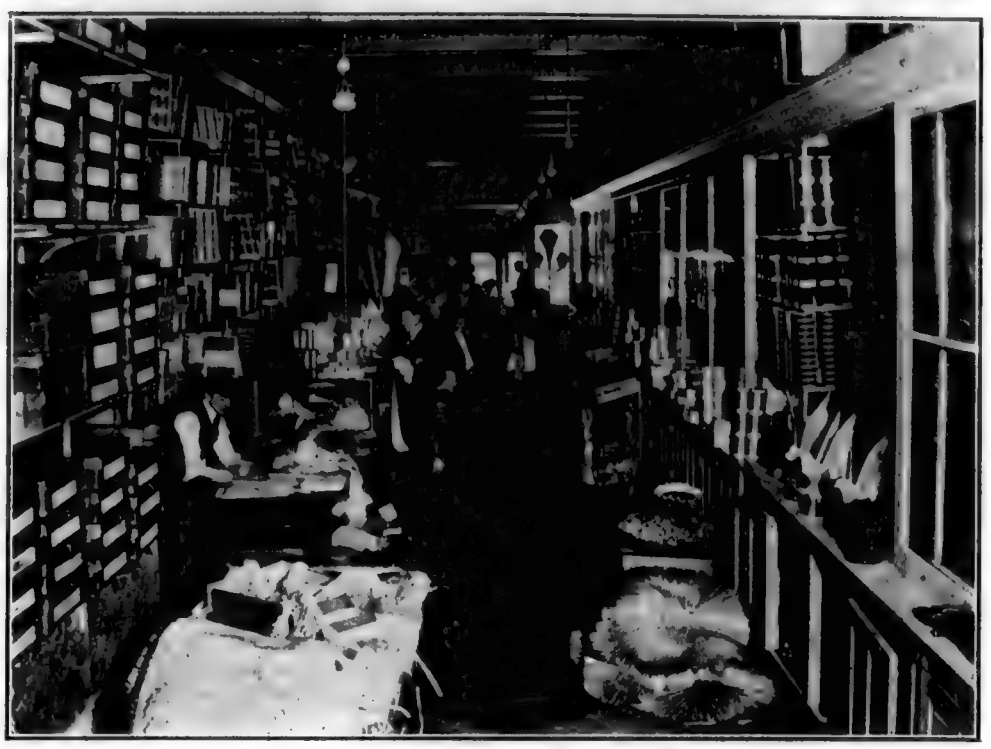
Stirling Castle, early, very small, others better.

Sunrise, earliest, smallest, but most prolific.

Winter Beauty, early, fair sized, very good.

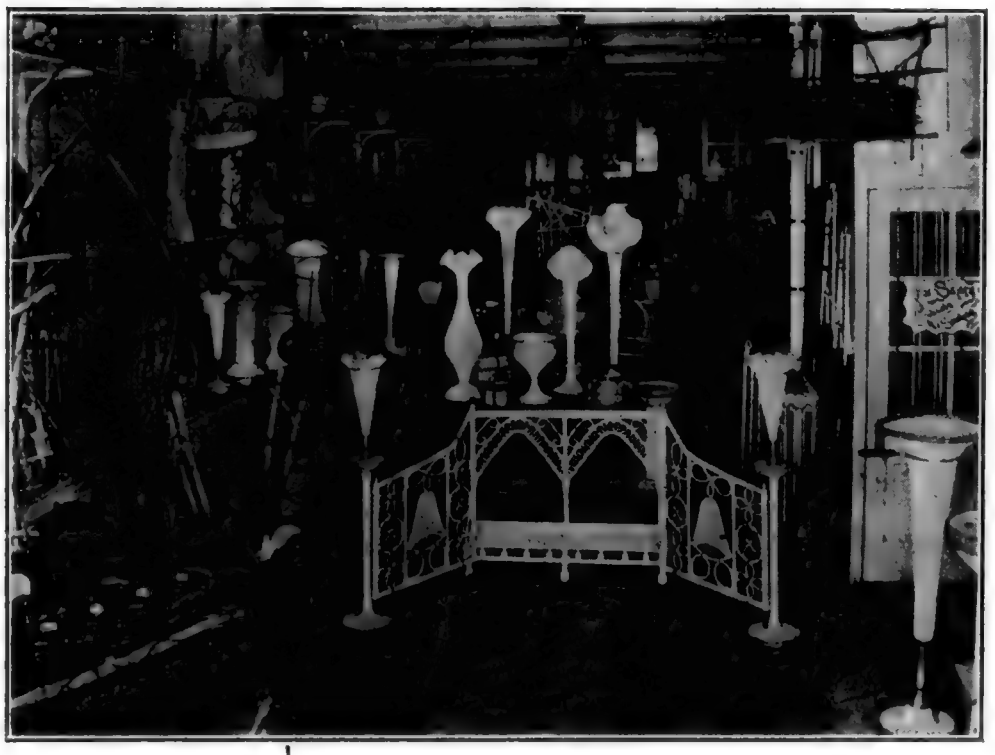
Holmes' Supreme, also early, fair sized, very good.

Comet, somewhat later, smooth, medium size, rather dwarf and stocky in growth, solid fruit, good keeper and shipper, requires about three or four inches more space than most varieties, very prolific.



Frogmore Selected, slightly larger than Comet, fruit rather peach shaped; a trifle later than Comet and will not yield as many pounds per plant, but is generally a favorite wherever grown, on account of its rather peculiar shape and good size.

Lorillard Forcing, good size, good shape; not among the earliest, but a good cropper.



Sutton's Best of All, very fine, large fruit; not so early or prolific as Comet, but is grown with good success by some growers.

There are other varieties, but these are the foremost. The common outdoor varieties are not suitable for forcing. They are larger fruited, but do not yield enough per plant to pay as well. All forcing tomatoes are bright red. They take better than the pink or purple shades.

Any of the larger seed houses can furnish the seed. If they have not in stock what you want they should get it for their customers. Look over the advertisements in The Review before ordering.

SPRINGFIELD, O.

Club Meeting.

The Springfield Florists' Club held its monthly meeting November 14 in the office of the Leedle Rosary, with an unusually good attendance of members and guests. The selection of this place of gathering was timely in that the hosts, Messrs. Charles C. Leedle and Arthur C. Leedle, were able to make a highly creditable display of chrysanthemums as well as an excellent showing of roses.

The paper of the evening was read by Charles O. Youngstrand, of Reeser & Youngstrand, on the subject of "Advertising," which he is thoroughly qualified to handle by reason of his experience in former years as a newspaper man.

Upon adjournment of the regular session, a buffet lunch of sandwiches, cakes and cider was tackled with a zest, the florists agreeing that these items of refreshment hit the right spot. The houses were then inspected and the growing stock found to be in splendid condition, it being freely conceded that for a company so young, very rapid strides had been made in the growing of cut flowers on a wholesale scale which has not heretofore been attempted in Springfield.

As a side trip, the inspection parties passed over to the range of the Leedle Floral Co., to which three new houses were added this summer and are now well filled with rose plants in 2½ and 4-inch pots in some 200 varieties. Here a new Kroeschell boiler has just been installed, and a considerable interest was evinced in the method of pipe connections by means of which either or both of two boilers may be operated in connection with the hot water system, while one of them may be operated on the auxiliary steam system.

THE DES MOINES SEED CO.

The Des Moines Seed Co., just established at 409 to 411 Fifth street, in East Des Moines, Ia., will take the place of the seed business which has for more than twenty years been conducted at that place by E. J. Hohberger in connection with his hardware business. The president and manager is K. H. Guthrie, who has been a resident of Des Moines for about twenty-five years. He was brought up on a farm; later for a number of years he conducted a place devoted exclusively to fruit farming and the raising of pure bred poultry, and was quite successful; leaving that work, he entered the employ of the Iowa Seed Co., being with them for about fourteen years and leaving that company to start in business for himself under the name of the Guthrie-Lorenz Co., of which he has been manager for the last three years. He has just sold out his interest in that company to go into this new venture. Mr. Guthrie is also secretary of the Des Moines Poultry Club, and of the Iowa State Poultry Association.

The Market.

Perfect fall weather, the strike settled, election out of the way, the opera season begun and the horse show in full blast—so opens the week, with the most encouraging outlook for many moons.

The quality of all kinds of cut flower stock is growing better daily. Apart from the continued flood of chrysanthemums there is no reason why the improvement should not continue steadily until the holidays. These, however, still dominate the market, and from present indications there will be enough and to spare until Thanksgiving. November 12 the Princeton football enthusiasts took all the yellow mums in sight and Yale raised the price of violets to $1. Next Saturday Yale will doubtless repeat and Harvard will absorb every mum with a tinge of red. The local supply is enormous. Prices for the best have risen, many of the wholesale houses handling a grade of flower that brings $3 to $4 a dozen. Medium sizes of splendid quality have sold as low as 8 and 10 cents, however, and at times the surplus forces prices far below their real value, and to half the realization of other years.

Violets are commanding good prices, but the shipments have been light, largely because of the express strike, which now seems to have been finally settled. The Rhinebeck section, however, is doing an immense shipping business direct to other cities and at present the signs point to no oversupply this season for the New York market.

Valley holds at 3 to 4 cents for the best. Lilies hold firm at improved quotations. Orchids are scarce and 75 cents to $1 each has been asked. In fact, the demand could not be satisfied. Gardenias, too, are more popular than ever, and the best of these bring $4 to $5 a dozen.

Carnations have risen, as they deserve to, when the grand stock now arriving is considered. There will be no better. All kinds of roses now are at their best. Prices have advanced gradually. Beauties are not abundant.

Club Meeting.

The attendance reached about 200 at the club's November meeting, half of the number of the fair sex, who never before showed warmer appreciation of a fine lunch, a good musical program and a splendid travel lecture by John T. Withers.

President Miller was in the chair. W. J. Stewart read the resolutions of his committee on the death of Lyman B. Craw. F. H. Traendly reported progress for the bowling club.

The nominating committee, of which Charles Weathered is chairman, announced as the candidates for the various offices for 1911: For president, John B. Nugent, Jr., and Joseph Manda; for vice-president, Harry A. Bunyard and J. H. Fiesser; for secretary, John Young and J. H. Pepper; for treasurer, W. B. Rickards, Jr., and A. R. Kennedy; for trustees, F. H. Traendly, C. H. Totty, Charles Weber, I. H. Hendrickson, J. A. Rassbach and H. Weissman.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. exhibited the new roses, Melody and Double Killarney, grown by Robert Scott & Son, of Sharon Hill, Pa. They were in fine condition and attracted much favorable comment. To each the award committee gave a preliminary certificate.

The resignations of Messrs. Henry L. Jones and L. W. C. Tuthill were accepted with regret. F. H. Wiltshire and J. S. Slimon were nominated for membership, and the following were elected: M. C. Ford, William Taat,

Why not plant your Sweet Peas outdoors this Fall, and get the benefit of the very earliest start in the Spring? Beds properly prepared now with well rotted manure, and the seed planted at a depth of 4 inches, with a light covering of hay or any suitable material, will more than pay for the experiment.

Mr. and Mrs. Einsman celebrated the sixteenth anniversary of their wedding at the Florists' Club's banner meeting November 14.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Roses are now plentiful, but they are only of fair quality. American Beauties are not so plentiful; the demand seems greater than the supply. The supply of carnations is greater than in previous years at this time. The carnations are mostly shipped in from Chicago. The market for chrysanthemums has been fine. As there is a good supply of these, they form the chief decorations for weddings and receptions.

Good violets are scarce as yet, but the growers promise a good crop soon. Cosmos is fine this year; however, there has been only a fair demand for it.

New Firm of Vegetable Growers.

W. H. Sawvel and H. Jones, two enterprising gentlemen of Kansas City, have built, this fall, ten greenhouses, each 29x150. Their purpose is to grow lettuce, tomatoes, sweet peas and cucumbers. Three houses are now planted to lettuce, and 15,000 rhubarb clumps will be planted under the lettuce benches, to be forced this winter. In one house are sweet peas, which were started in pots and are now six to eight inches tall and in healthy condition. Six houses will be devoted to tomatoes for one crop; then two of these houses will be planted in cucumbers.

Over 1,000 loads of manure and earth have been hauled to fill the beds in these houses. All the beds are solid, on the ground, except the lettuce benches, which are raised to accommodate the rhubarb.

The houses are located between two hills at Fifty-eighth street and Bennington avenue, northeast of Swope park. The proprietors own twenty-seven acres, on which the houses are built. The houses are up-to-date. All have iron posts, with a good stone wall all around the outside. Two 100 horsepower boilers are now being installed. A large brick smokestack is now under way and will soon be ready for use. Their water supply is pumped from a large creek that never goes dry. A considerable force of men is employed and the pay roll runs from $500 to $600 per week. No money is spared in the effort to build everything in good and substantial style. Next summer the houses will be planted to chrysanthemums.

Mr. Sawvel owns seven acres adjoining this plant and has been thinking of covering this part next summer with glass also. If he carries out his plan, there will be carnations and American Beauties planted in them. We all join in saying, "Let the good work go on," and we wish these two men success.

Various Notes.

E. T. Heite & Son, Merriam, Kan., are now harvesting their early mums. They have 70,000 planted and find a ready sale for all of them. All are ordered before they are cut. They had quite a large supply of 5-inch and 7-inch potted chrysanthemums, which are already sold out. The firm is now transplanting lettuce, which will take the place of the chrysanthemums as fast as they are sold.

Samuel Murray has one of the nicest cut flower shops in the city. It is large and roomy and nicely arranged. His location is a good one.

A visitor is Sam Seligman, with Wertheimer Bros., New York.

the general public seems at the present time to be more interested in the next governor than about the prices of cut flowers. Funeral trade has been brisk for the last ten days, and it has been well divided among the various shops. As a consequence white stock, with the exception of mums, is rather scarce. Extra good roses are seemingly an impossibility at this time. There is plenty of short stemmed and second quality stock and with this the retailers have to fill their orders. Carnations are getting up to the mark and another week or two will find them even better. Violets for the first time this season are really plentiful and of good quality. Princess of Wales, which is practically the only variety sold here, costs the retailers 75 cents per dozen bunches. A few Paper White narcissi are in season and valley is in good supply and moves nicely. Advance orders for big mums for the Stanford-California football game show that all the good red and yellow varieties will be used up.

Various Notes.

C. E. Lilley, of Santa Cruz, is shipping quantities of Five-finger maidenhair to the local dealers. This is the finest variety of the native adiantums.

John Meyer, formerly gardener to M. H. De Young, of San Rafael, Cal., is now a resident of Oakland.

C. C. Thorpe, proprietor of the Monroe Nurseries, of Vallejo, Cal., is spending a few days in San Francisco.

The farmers from the mountain counties are beginning to visit the retailers in the interest of the Christmas berry crop. Some samples shown in town from the neighborhood of Vacaville are of extra color and size.

The Thorsted Floral Co., of Oakland, is giving its premises a general overhauling. New mirrors and white and gold trimmings are among the improvements noted.

Herbert G. Taylor, for years in charge of the propagating and ornamental department of C. C. Morse & Co. at their Hayward nurseries, has severed his connection with that firm and is at present residing at Fruitvale.

The May Seed Co. has opened a department devoted to poultry supplies and has given a large part of its store to the display of fancy fowls and kindred interests. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

THE apple crop is estimated as 43.5 per cent of a full crop.

CUTLER & DOWNING, nurserymen at Benton Harbor, Mich., will soon occupy the new brick building on Territorial street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, for an office and stock room.

C. H. WEBSTER, formerly in the nursery business at Centralia, Ill., is now establishing a nursery at The Dalles, Ore. He has purchased a small tract of ground there, and will at once erect on it a suitable residence for himself and family.

NURSERY inspection officials of Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana will meet at Fort Smith, Ark., December 15, to discuss and formulate, if possible, a system of uniform laws and regulations for the inspection of nursery stock, trees and shrubs.

AFTER being at Reading, Mass., for sixty years, J. W. Manning, the present proprietor of the well-known Reading Nurseries, has been compelled to move his entire equipment to North Wilmington, Mass., to a much larger place. The rapid growth of the business made this necessary. Floramead Nursery contains a wealth of trees, shrubs, fruits and flowers and will soon become as famous as the older nursery was for so long a term of years.

POT GROWN TREES AND VINES.

Some of the nurseries offer pot grown trees, vines and shrubs. Will you kindly advise the process by which these are grown? Are they grown in pots right from the time they are propagated, and are the pots sunk in the ground while the stock is grown? Also, at what time are perennials potted up to be in shape for sale as pot grown?

H. H. G.

In a few cases the vines and shrubs are grown in pots from the start, but more frequently they are lifted, potted, plunged outdoors in soil or cinders, and grown in the pots a single season, in order to become well established. This applies to such plants as roses, clematis, ampelopsis, lilacs, English ivy, bignonias, climbing honeysuckles and wistarias, in addition to Azalea mollis and a variety of flowering shrubs used chiefly for forcing. One advantage of this pot grown stock is that it can be planted at any time with perfect safety, and as no roots are injured when setting them out, the plants start much better than when lifted from the field.

Perennials potted up are either seedlings or from cuttings. In the case of herbaceous phlox, cuttings are potted off in spring, while with delphiniums and all varieties easily raised from seed, the young plants are potted, kept in coldframes and shaded until established, after which the sashes are removed. If plunged in these frames, the plants will grow better, and any which are to be carried over winter for spring sales will merely need a coating of dry leaves over them and the sashes to keep out rain and snow. These pot plants, of course, cost more to grow, but customers are generally glad to pay an enhanced price, especially when they can secure and plant them with success at a time when it would not be safe to plant field grown stock. C. W.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Last week was only a continuation of unsteady conditions which have prevailed for the last month. Plenty of stock of every description is available, especially mums, which are abundant everywhere. In reviewing this season's production of these flowers, it is safe to say that the quality has not been up to the standard of the last few years, a higher percentage of medium-sized blooms being grown than usual. This probably accounts for the immense numbers that have been moved since the season began.

Counter trade has only been fairly good and as long as we have mild weather, which permits the selling of flowers on the street, it will not be any better. Every day marks a noticeable improvement in carnations and most growers expect good crops for Christmas. The same conditions apply to roses, which are in fine shape and look as though they will give good crops. Paper Whites are to be had in small quantities.

Greens are more plentiful and hardy ferns are getting poorer and badly frosted.

Various Notes.

R. A. Vincent, of White Marsh, made a flying trip to New York to attend the flower show there. His firm made several exhibits of its pompon mums, of which they have over 30,000 planted in seven large houses, comprising over 100 varieties. Their two new houses are ready for the glass, which will be rushed in before bad weather sets in. They intend to use the houses for geranium stock, of which they have an enormous stock on hand ready to be shipped on short notice. Q.

The Market.

Trade has been excellent of late. Flowers are quite plentiful. Mums are in all their glory and have the deck mostly to themselves. Mums retail at $1.50 and $2 per dozen, with a few specials at $2.50 per dozen. Carnations are looking fine; some elegant blooms retail at 50 cents per dozen. Roses can be had, of fine quality, at $1.25 and $1.50 per dozen, retail. Killarneys are good. Snapdragons retail at 75 cents per dozen. Violets sell fairly well at $1 per hundred blooms; sweet peas at $1 per hundred blooms.

All outdoor flowers are now gone, one or two heavy frosts having finished them.

Various Notes.

All the uptown stores are making nice window displays. Wm. P. Peirce has had some elegant displays of mums, carnations, ferns, etc. He reports funeral work as especially good last week. He is still cutting some big mums at his greenhouses.

E. H. Chamberlain had some fine, well done Jerome Jones last Saturday. These found ready sale at a good price.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, has some fine Whitmani ferns and table ferns, which are in good demand.

H. A. Jahn is cutting immense quantities of short white mums and lots of carnations.

Recent visitors were: S. Green, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. Brown, of the Dennison Mfg. Co., Boston, Mass. W. L.

You'll Need More Palms for Winter---Save Money by Ordering Them NOW

Have you a large enough stock of palms to see you through the winter? Better be real sure, because the palm is getting to be more popular every year as a winter house plant, and the demand will no doubt be heavier this year than ever before. If you haven't already laid in a good supply, you're likely to run short before spring—palms, you know, can't be shipped safely in the winter.

We're still making a number of freight shipments, but it will soon be too cold for anything but express—which is an expensive and quite unsatisfactory method. If you get in your order right quick, though, we can still take care of it; if you neglect ordering now, you'll be pretty certain to regret it before spring.

Telegraph your order, or phone or special delivery it—send it some way—and we'll see that you get the best selection of clean, healthy, vigorous, home-grown palms possible to secure, and that you get them quickly!

The Market.

There has been a brisk demand for flowers for the last two weeks on account of a number of large weddings, receptions and openings. Mums are fine and sell well at from $2 to $6 per dozen. Roses are not much in demand; the $2 and $3 grades sell the best.

Orchids have a ready sale at $1 each, but violets are scarce, owing to the warm weather. Carnations, as usual, sell well.

Various Notes.

The opening of the new 16-story building of the City National Bank brought a big demand for flowers Saturday, November 12. Mums and plants were used in abundance from top to bottom of the structure, in addition to many baskets and vases of other flowers.

The Omaha Florists' Club held its regular meeting November 10 at the bowling alleys, with a good attendance. After a good lunch a bowling contest of three games was played, but the scores were so evenly matched that it was decided to have another trial before announcing the results.

Mr. Hess, of Hess & Swoboda, attended the Minneapolis flower show last week.

A HOUSE OF ARAUCARIAS. WE HAVE THEM IN ALL SIZES.

AZALEA INDICA.

Now is the time to force Azalea Indica for Christmas. What varieties will you force? Surely the ones, the early varieties, that I know I can get in in time for Xmas. There is Deutsche Perle, one of the best early double whites. We have plants full of buds, at 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Simon Mardner, you know this variety well. It is an early, deep, double pink variety, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeneana, one of the old standard, well-favored, large, double, variegated varieties, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. How about Apollo? This is a deep, single red variety, always full of buds, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Didn't you ever hear of that earliest of all varieties, Mme. Petrick? This is a variety hard to beat, pink, double flowers, full of buds and never fails to bloom. A child can bring this variety into bloom for Christmas. It is very scarce and high in price this fall in Belgium. You must have a few of them anyhow, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Easter Varieties. For Easter forcing we have only the well known standard American varieties, such as Mme. Van der Cruyssen, pink (very scarce this fall in Belgium), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Niobe, double white. We have a large stock of this, but mostly in large sizes, $1.00, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00; some, but a limited quantity, at 50c, 60c to 75c. Deutsche Perle, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Helene Theleman, light pink, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. President Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Schryveriana and Empress of India, large, double, variegated, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Professeur Wolters, 70c, $1.00 to $1.50. Simon Mardner, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Vervaeneana and Apollo, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00; dozen or 100 at same prices.

Remember! Small azaleas are scarce this year in Belgium, therefore I had to buy mostly large sizes.

Dracaena Bruanti, 25 to 30 inches high, perfect green foliage from bottom up, 6-in. pots, 40c to 50c.

Latania Borbonica, 30 to 35 inches high, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Araucaria Excelsa, raised from top cuttings only (no seedlings), 2, 3, 4 to 5-year-old, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 15, 18, 20, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca. 6-in. pots, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4, 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 and 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50; 4-in., 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 4-in., 25c.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 3 plants in 6 and 7-in. pots, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. This is a special bargain, seldom offered.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3-in. pots, 15c, 18c and 20c.

Ficus Elastica, rubber plant, 6-in., nicely staked up, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, 40c, 50c to 75c.

Pteris Wilsoni, 6-in. pans, nice and bushy, 25c.

Asparagus Plumosus, 2½-in., 3c; 3-in., 5c.

Our Ferns are very fine this year and I can give very good value to make room for my large importation of Azaleas. Boston, Scottii, Whitmani and Scholzeli, 5½ and 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in., large, bushy plants, 75c to $1.00. Special to close out—Scottii and Whitmani, 4-in., 15c; fine to grow on. Our ferns are all pot grown—not lifted from benches.

Ferns for dishes, big assortment, 2½-in. pots, $4.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100.

Nephrolepis Todeaoides (London fern), 2½-in., 5c; 3-in., 7c.

Asparagus Sprengeri, 2½-in., 3c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown, 6-in., 25c, 35c to 40c; 7-in., 50c. Only pot-grown, will force successfully for Easter.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This is another of our specialties. We have a secret in growing them to perfection, only known to us, giving them a rich, deep color; stand shipping well, traveling 2000 to 3000 miles without the least bit of injury if properly handled. We have a big house full in No. 1 condition, 6 to 7-in. sizes, in bud and partly in bloom, ready for immediate sale or for the holidays. Everybody knows that last Christmas we had the best Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in the market. They were cracker-jacks, indeed! We have the deep pink and the light pink (Lonsdale) varieties, 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00; 7-in. pots, $1.25 to $1.50. 3-in. pots, if transplanted soon, will make good 4-in. pots for Xmas. If you have room order now, because they are always scarce at Xmas.

Begonia Erfordii, newest improved strain. This variety is always in bloom during the whole winter, Xmas and Easter, 4-in. pots, in bud or bloom. 20c.

Begonia Rex, 4-in., 20c.

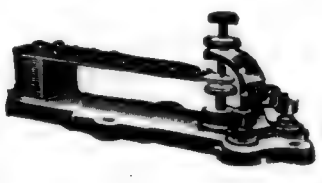
RESIDENCE AND GREENHOUSE.



I am installing a round, Rival hot water boiler in my residence and wish to run the pipes to my greenhouse, which is twenty feet east of the residence. The greenhouse is 9x17 feet, and seven feet to the ridge, with one foot of glass all around in the sides. I should like to know what size of flow and return to use and what size and number of pipes to use in the greenhouse. The coldest weather in this section of Pennsylvania is about 15 degrees below zero, and I should like to keep the greenhouse temperature at 50 to 60 degrees. How should I run my pipes to the greenhouse? They will be buried about one foot. I am using the Honeywell system, with a generator attached.

V. E. C.

There should be no difficulty in heating the greenhouse from the heater in the cellar of the dwelling, provided the top of the heater is sufficiently low to permit giving the flow pipe a slight rise. Use 2½-inch pipe for the main flow and return. Cover them with asbestos packing and run them through 8-inch sewer pipe, unless it will be cheaper to build a cement conduit. This could be used for the return as well as the flow, and should be about fifteen inches wide and eight inches deep, and covered with cement slabs, 12x18x2 inches.

Carry the flow pipe straight east from the boiler to the center of the greenhouse. Then, if the house is sufficiently high to give head room, carry the pipe up to the ridge and run it with a slight fall to the north end. Then drop down under the end bench and divide into two 2-inch pipes, each of which should feed a coil of four 1½-inch pipes under the side benches. At the south end of the house connect the coils to a 2½-inch pipe leading back to the boiler. If the flow pipe cannot be carried under the ridge, run it on the west plate around to the middle of the north end. All pipes should run downhill, with a fall of one inch in ten feet, after the flow pipe has entered the greenhouse.

The Market.

For the last two weeks stock has gradually been getting scarce, and just now tea roses, especially in pink and white, and Beauties of all grades, are at a premium. The extremely warm weather that we have had this fall has brought flowers of all kinds into bloom in great profusion, and many of the retailers under contract, and the stores supplied by their greenhouses have been compelled to dump a great deal. This has caused the growers to pinch back their tea roses, and while it makes a shortage now, it brightens the prospects for a large crop during the holidays.

The outlook for mums for Thanksgiving is poor. Most of the late varieties have come earlier than usual, and it now looks as though there would be

HOW? Because it is an accurate, fully tested thermometer, showing the correct temperature at all times, and combines a device which will ring a bell at your bedside when the greenhouse gets either too hot or too cold. Just the protection you have wanted all these years.

We guarantee that results will be obtained at all times. This device has been subjected to the severest tests in our laboratory for over two years, and at the same time has given entire satisfaction, under all conditions, to many users in the trade.

All you have to do is to set the pointers at the highest and lowest temperatures you want and the thermometer will do the rest. It will ring a good, loud bell when either point is reached, and saves all worry over trouble from sudden temperature changes.

few left at that time. Yellow mums have disappeared quickly, especially on Saturdays. There have been several big football games on that day, and it seemed that everyone in the grand stand either carried or wore a yellow mum.

Violets could be sold by the thousand if they were obtainable, but the supply is quite limited. The weather is against the violet man. One or two cloudy days last week improved the color, but they are still far from being good. Some of the retailers had violets shipped from New York last week, but by the time they arrived they had lost their color and fragrance, and were in an almost unsalable condition.

Carnations are of fine quality, but the supply is greatly in excess of the demand. However, they are likely to sell well for Thanksgiving on account of the scarcity of mums.

Various Notes.

The Colorado Florists' Club held its monthly meeting Tuesday evening, November 8. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Emil Glauber; vice-president, C. R. Root; secretary, H. J. Berry; treasurer, Bernhard Boldt; trustees, J. C. Buckman, J. A. Valentine and W. H. Grimes. Mr. Green, a clever magician, entertained the members with an interesting sleight-of-hand performance. The usual refreshments were served, after which the meeting adjourned until the second Tuesday in December.

George H. Cooper, for the last six years employed as designer by the Park Floral Co., has opened up an attractive store at 330 East Colfax avenue. Mr.

Cooper will conduct the business under his own name.

Frank Sauerwald, recently manager for the Colorado Springs Floral Co., and also for the Pikes Peak Floral Co., of Colorado Springs, Colo., has taken up with the Park Floral Co. the position made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Cooper.

N. A. Benson is treating his friends to a ride in his new seven-passenger Buick, which he recently purchased. It is rumored that Emil Glauber will follow suit in the near future.

A new store has been started at 325 Sixteenth street by the Misses A. and C. Culp, whose greenhouses are located at Littleton, Colo.

Several Denver florists sent exhibits to the flower show held Wednesday and Thursday, November 9 and 10, at the Antlers hotel in Colorado Springs. J. A. Sked staged the Park Floral Co.'s exhibit, and looked after it during the show. J. A. Valentine and E. P. Neiman rode down in Mr. Valentine's machine and attended the show.

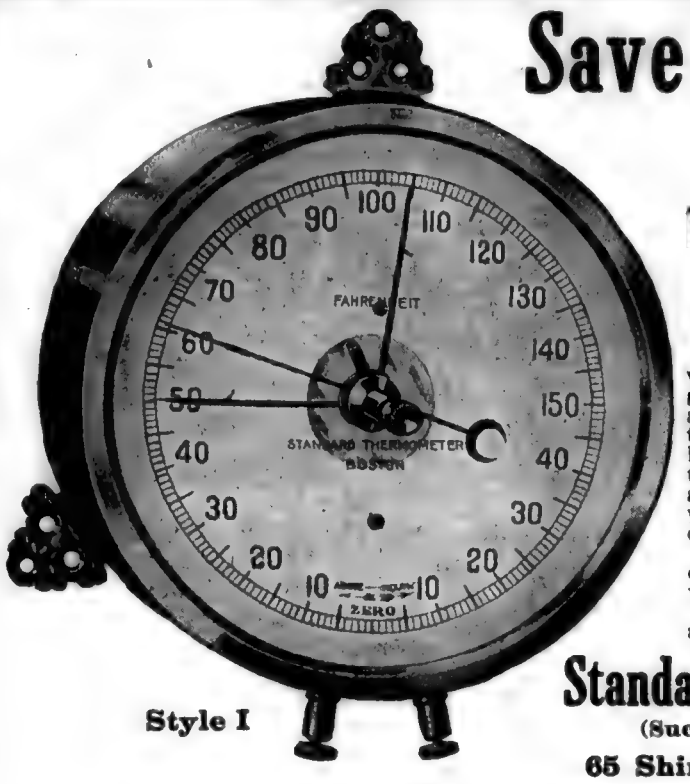
Cards are out announcing the marriage of E. S. Kennedy and Miss Dorothy E. Gross, Saturday evening, November 5. Mr. Kennedy is president of the Alpha Floral Co., and he has the congratulations and best wishes of all his friends.

The annual flower show of A. C. Sinram was held Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 10, 11 and 12, at his Tremont street store. A large number of visitors were impressed with the attractiveness of the store, the variety of bouquets, and the table decorations, while the sweet music of an orchestra added to the charm.

W. C. Walter has just completed the erection of a fine office and store building on his greenhouse property. Many fine residences are being built near his plant, and his retail trade is increasing every day.

Visitors in town last week were N. E. DeGolier, of Loveland; S. Knudsen, of Boulder; C. A. Espelin, of Fort Collins; A. Gardner, of Greeley, and Ed. Johnson, of Colorado Springs. These gentlemen visited the different greenhouses and selected their plant stock for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

"Engagements" is the title of the memorandum book the Park Floral Co. is sending to its customers this week. It is a dainty little book, and one which is sure to please the recipient.



C. L. Gross, formerly with the Alpha Floral Co., recently purchased the stock and good will of F. X. Goeschl, whose store was located at 139 Broadway. Since the purchase, however, Mr. Gross has taken a larger store at 131 Broadway, where he is doing business under the name of the Gross Floral Co.

Preparations are being made by the Park Floral Co. for a flower show to be held at the Broadway store and conservatory Thursday and Friday, November 17 and 18.

The elaborate decoration at the opening of the Gas and Electric building Saturday evening, November 12, was furnished by the Elitch-Long flower store, as were also the carnations that were presented to the ladies.

M. R. J.

Gold Spring, N. Y.—J. S. Cunningham says he has no kick coming, as outdoor work has been better than ever and indoor stock has sold well, with a promising season ahead.

The Market.

Last week was an unusually busy one for the retailers. Flowers of every variety were in good demand. Roses and carnations are of excellent quality. Mums as a whole are not up to the standard of other years, but many fine pompons arrive and sell readily; in fact, every chrysanthemum of good quality is easily sold. There was a shortage of valley last week, just when it was in special demand for wedding and debutante bouquets.

Various Notes.

A number of the younger set were entertained at the home of Theodore Mitchell November 9. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell were married recently and as a token of the esteem in which they are held the boys presented them with a handsome clock.

Norman Sullivan spent several days in Chicago last week, viewing the mums at the Coliseum.

Many compliments were received by B. Schroeter last week on the beautiful display of orchids in his windows.

E. A. Fetters says time is money and therefore he has just purchased a typewriter. Business has been good at 114 Farmer street so far this season.

The changeable weather got the best of J. F. Sullivan, laying him up nearly all of last week.

The stork brought a little girl to the home of William Berridge, representative of the Kenneth Anderson Co., last week.

Another new flower store was opened in this city last week, in the Brossy building, corner of Woodward and Warren avenues. James Taylor, of Mount Clemens, is proprietor.

Fred Pautke will entertain the members of the Detroit Florists' Club Monday evening, November 21.

The Flower Shop, at 21 John R. street, although still in its infancy, is rapidly breaking into society. Their debutante bouquets are quite popular.

The motor car of J. Breitmeyer's Sons reappeared on the streets November 14, dressed in a new coat of paint and varnish. The body and gearing are finished in a delicate gray, with the moldings in white and the whole set off in gold, making a most artistic car. This firm has placed an order for a new delivery car, which will be in service soon.

Albert Stahelin was married Thursday, November 10, in Grand Rapids, and when last heard of was spending his honeymoon in Chicago. H. S.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

Chrysanthemum Show.

The chrysanthemum show in Toledo was a Success—yes, a Success with a capital S. It was held in the store of S. N. Peck, on Summit street. Mr. Peck made a little social of the occasion and treated the members of the Florists' Club and their ladies to coffee and doughnuts.

The first prize, for the best six chrysanthemums, was awarded to Harry Heinl for his Dolly Dimple, all of which were superb specimens. This is a variety which was sent out this spring by Fred Dorner, and is of a light sulphur yellow.

George Bayer had some elegant Major Bonnaffon, and also, as novelties, Mrs. Wm. Wincott and Oroba.

J. L. Schiller displayed the variety sent out by Elmer D. Smith last year, which is a splendid color and well worth growing. This is known as Mrs. W. E. Kelly.

Ten dollars was given to Mr. Heinl for his Dolly Dimple.

Emil Kuhnke was given $1 for his Red Intensity.

S. N. Peck received $1 for his Baron Victor Reille.

John Barrow received $1 for his Golden Glow.

All the leading florists were there in full force, and their products showed such careful cultivation that it was difficult for the judges to make proper discrimination. The judges were John Gratopp, Henry Miller and Charles Jordan, the latter of Wauseon, O.

Various Notes.

Timm & Wirz, two hard working young fellows, full of ambition, have bought Joseph Sigrist's greenhouses on Monroe street, and the prospects are splendid for their doing a good business. They have six good houses, which they plan to fill with bedding plants and the various seasonable flowers for the retail trade. They are now growing carnations and chrysanthemums. Mr. Wirz, the junior partner, is a good hustler and has been for the last six years with John Barrow. Mr. Timm has also been for a long time with one of the local florists. These young men are both worthy fellows, and we extend them our good wishes.

CUSTOMERS' CRITICISMS.

Making Profitable Use of Them.

Remarks which come unexpectedly over the counter may be unwelcome at the time, but may be turned to good account. Of course, the man behind the counter is supposed to know what's what. But science and art are not yet full-grown and it requires tact to take an unfavorable criticism in a courteous manner, especially when it is thrown out with a sarcastic fling. Yet, to keep an ear out for these things is good policy, not only for the sake of your popularity with these very persons, but also to keep in touch with the general tone of public taste and demand.

This does not mean that we should keep on a level with the public taste, for that would mean no advance, but the purpose is to lead skillfully to the appreciation of better work and higher ideals. If we are going to "evolute," we must start where there is common knowledge and understanding, and always keep the line of fascination in touch with the game. Keep your ear to the ground, not to follow, but to discover how far you can carry your constituency on your next progressive leap.

Replying to Criticisms.

Shall reply be made to a criticism thus volunteered on the part of the customer? If the customer is incorrect in her statement and is in the mood to discuss and receive information, yes, and you may thus gain her confidence and respect; and if you are sure of your ground, yes. But the discussion will not be found profitable if it partakes much of argument and is not mutually agreeable. If the customer is fussed or hurried, no. If her point is well taken, do not defend your side of the case; take her criticism as your dose, without squirming. If uninformed on the point at issue or uncertain of your ground, no.

Now, aside from the discussion of the subject, how about its future value to the dealer? The idea which the customer contributes by his or her criticism may or may not be accepted. If it does not appeal to you at first as significant, weigh it well; then, if you conclude it cannot be valuable to you, forget it. If there are possibilities bristling out of it, adopt and develop it and add it to your Thanksgiving list. Some of these tasteful suggestions, and even the flings, may be valuable of themselves, or will suggest valuable things as we pocket our pride and think over them.

Criticising the Centerpiece.

Now for a few of those criticisms which come mostly from the intelligent flower buyer, and which are not intended as a benefit to the dealer, but as a demand on the customer's part for better service or more for the money. There is not one which is made more frequently by the hostess at home, or by the exacting hotel manager, than this: "You make your centerpieces too large. They encroach too far on the space needed for the service on the table." That is too often true. Besides, they are often too high, for which there is no excuse whatever, as in trade circles this is the most frequently discussed of all our faults. One can scarcely read an article which touches on table decorations where this caution is not thrown in. The height of the centerpiece must conform to the style of service. A reception table centerpiece may be high, but not heavy. A luncheon, dinner or banquet table centerpiece must be low.

A Plain Rule.

The rule is as plain as the nose on your face: Where the guests sit at the table it should be low—below the eyeline across the table. If the guests do not sit at the table you may have tall decorations. It is beyond charitable explanation why so many florists seem determined to disregard this first principle of table decoration.

Do not use long-stemmed American Beauties, no matter how handsome, for a dinner table. It would be just as sensible to hang the soup spoons above the heads of the guests. It is not your opportunity to display 3-foot stems and other gaudy things, but rather the daintier and less showy flowers and plants.

"But," some one interrupts, "suppose the customer wants these and doesn't know the difference?" Then tell him the difference, unless you are unable to speak the language of your locality. "But there may be no opportunity to discuss the case, and there is nothing else good to be had." Then choose the less of two evils and cut the stems to reasonable lengths, leaving a few handsome stems long, to lie flat on the table, if its size permits.

The Width of the Centerpiece.

Neither must the piece be too wide. I have seen centerpieces so wide that the foliage extended over the silver. It is not surprising that many of the most refined people will not allow a made-up centerpiece on their dining table, but prefer a vase or bowl of their own arranging. Some florist, in his anxiety to make a show, has overstepped his opportunity to make a true decoration instead of a market display, and milady has formed her opinion of florists for all time.

If it is your first work for a customer, it would be well to have an understanding as to the exact space to be allowed to the centerpiece and to keep strictly within bounds. Unless it is a narrow table, it is best to allow twenty-four inches for service all around the edge of the table.

But, suppose the customer is the "loud" kind, and must have what, in your opinion, amounts to a vulgar show? Then get in your show in brilliant coloring, but always with correct combinations.

Was Not "Stunning" Enough.

Once I had an order for a decoration on a long luncheon table and arranged a series of three narrow plaques of medium sized poinsettias, with scarlet and green garlands, two ribbons connecting them. The effect, when complete, however, was not sufficiently "stunning" to suit the hostess and I was ordered back to double the quantity, although the added amount really made too heavy a decoration, both for that occasion and for my reputation, decoratively speaking. Although this does not often happen, yet I would rather be ordered to put on more than be requested to take off some.

The error of using too much material is so often committed that it has become almost an axiom of good policy to pile on as much as the customer will stand for and charge accordingly. But, if a good price can be obtained, why not allow a fair proportion for "knowing how" and for accessories? It is just as valuable to know where to stop as to know where to begin. This is applicable not only to table decorations, but to any kind of designing. In funeral work, many a time, just as good a price can be had for a piece which attains reasonable size through free and loose arrangement, rather than a great amount of stock fairly piled together.

Formal, but Graceful.

Another complaint heard from customers is that formal arrangements are too formal, too stiff. People outside of the counter, who have any artistic sense at all, know that a design, even if it is formal, need not be ungraceful. There are few designs that are more formal in their make-up than a gates ajar, and yet what possibilities of graceful decoration it presents! The more formal and mechanical the outline is made, the better; the more solidity and weight it has, the better; but that much is only the piece fairly started. Relieve the formal parts by groups of growing effects and trailing garlands, and nobody will ever say it is stiff.

The trouble is that our work has become too conventional, one style prevailing for all pieces. The discerning public is tiring of it now. Even boxes of assorted flowers are often sent out like factory-packed candy or lead pencils. Touch the long, regular lines of the rose or carnation stems with a dainty bunch of small flowers, or a cross line or two of contrasting color or style of foliage.

The Favorable Criticisms.

But what about the favorable criticisms received over the counter? We have all been gratified by the generous expressions of appreciation given us over the wire or across the counter. How can we turn them to advantage? If the person who gives our work favorable comment expresses a preference for any one flower or variety, why not make a mental note of it and afterward a pencil note of it, and when at some future time a box of flowers is to be sent to her, include the favorite flower or color if possible? Use some well expressed thought, given you in this way, in your advertising or write-up—impersonally, of course. And the comfort and encouragement—let them spur us on to better achievements each day.

A Design for the Dolliver Funeral.

OPEN HOURS LIMITED BY LAW.

As is well known, in English cities a large number of shops handle the two lines, fruits and flowers. About 100 gentlemen, representing some of the largest retail fruiterers and florists of London, met recently and effected an organization of their trades. The new organization will be known as the London Retail Fruiterers' and Florists' Association. Resolutions were carried declaring that the Shop Hours bill as at present drafted was entirely unworkable and unacceptable to the London traders in fruits and flowers; that any amelioration of the working hours of shop assistants could be better made by restricting the number of ordinary working hours per week, than by enforced closing of shops; and that florists should be placed, with fruiterers, in the list of exempted trades.

DOLLIVER DESIGNS.

The accompanying illustrations show the work of E. E. Nordwall, of the North Floral Co., Fort Dodge, Ia., called for by the funeral of the late Senator Dolliver. The display of floral tributes at the Dolliver funeral was the largest ever seen at Fort Dodge and the character of the work as a whole spoke well for the progress of the floral art.

PICTURES SPEAK LOUDEST.

The Jackson & Perkins Co., of Newark, N. Y., has hit upon a new and excellent scheme for improving the selling qualities of the replies made to inquiries. A set of letter-heads has been prepared showing the articles about which the greatest numbers of inquiries are received, so that when a prospective buyer writes to know about hydrangeas the answer comes to him on a letter-head that shows a block of the stock, the one who asks about roses gets a picture of roses with his answer, and so on. In speaking of the innovation Secretary John Watson said:

"We believe in pictures. Pictures speak louder than words. They give a more immediate, more definite idea of the stock than any number of adjectives, and pictures are bound to be fairly truthful, too. Nothing is so effective in selling goods as first-class illustrations. Now, it occurred to us that if the illustrations used are made to represent the identical stock offered—the particular plants that one wants to sell—then the pictures become doubly effective.

"We are using a number of different styles of letter heads. When a customer writes in to ask about roses, and we are able to reply on a letter head that shows at the same time a good halftone of the very plants that we are offering, it goes a long way toward getting an order. You see, we are not showing him a picture of just roses, a hand-me-down illustration, or a halftone out of last year's catalogue, but we are presenting him with a view of our block of rose bushes out of which we expect to fill his order. Great scheme, isn't it? It brings the business. One of the bright young men in our office says that these picture letter heads can be improved upon in one respect only, and he is working on that problem now; that is, moving picture letter heads.''

THE GRADUATE.

[Gleanings of an interview with Charles Henry Fox.]

The sentiment associated with the idea of presenting the high school or college graduate with a bunch of flowers at commencement is gaining in popularity and merits intelligent cultivation. The photograph is of a graduate with a bunch of Chatenay roses. The idea in the arrangement is simplicity, the avoidance of pretense or show; a careless, natural effect should be the aim, nothing studied, with only a simple bow of ribbon to set off the flowers. For commencements that come in May bunches of daisies and of sweet peas are popular, each by itself—a combination of flowers or of colors is apt to destroy the effect desired. For June commencements American Beauty roses are satisfactory; their lasting qualities are an important point on days that may be extremely warm. Phil.

LONG CAST-IRON GUTTERS.

Can cast-iron gutters be used in lengths up to 300 feet without expansion joints; also wrought-iron channel bars? We have no trouble with 100-foot lengths of cast-iron, but would like to know if we should be liable to have trouble with greater lengths.

S. B.

Cast-iron gutters and wrought-iron channel bars are all right, although I would not use the latter in commercial houses.

TWO OF A KIND.

We are in a quandary concerning a matter in connection with our greenhouses, and will esteem it a great favor if you will help us to get the experiences of other persons under similar circumstances, through the columns of your paper. Our houses are located about three-quarters of a mile south of a large cement plant. The cement dust from the plant spreads out and is carried by the wind in such a way that it forms a coating over our glass, effectually shutting out the rays of the sun. May we recover damages or force the cement company to remove the cement from the glass? Truitt's Greenhouses.

Chanute, Kan.

Recently there has been erected a large cement plant about one-half mile from my greenhouses, twelve in all, and the dust that escapes from the tall stacks completely covers my greenhouses, so that it shuts out all the sun and light. Have you known of any similar cases? If so, could the florist get any redress? I have started legal proceedings against the cement company. Any information on cement or smoke on anything that comes near it would be highly appreciated.

R. W. Allen.

The Review will be pleased to print the reply of anyone who has had an experience in any way similar.

RED SPIDER.

We have the red spider in our house of violets and sweet peas. Is there no other way to kill them but to spray them? Is fumigation better? If so, please state what to use. S. H.

Any fumigation which would have effect on the red spider would probably be disastrous to both violets and sweet peas, neither of which crops will withstand heavy fumigation. Pressure of water directed through a fine spray nozzle is the best way to fight spider. In the case of the sweet peas, the under surface of the foliage can be readily reached, but it is otherwise with violets. Pick off and burn the leaves worst affected and do not in future allow the atmosphere of the houses to become arid. Syringe plants especially which are nearest to the heating pipes. Some growers have found that a heaping tablespoon of salt to eight quarts of water syringed on the foliage once a week helps to ward off the attacks of the spider, but I put most faith in a good pressure of clear, cold water. C. W.

TO REMOVE LIME WHITEWASH.

Please tell us how to get lime whitewash off the glass. We had a workman who put it on to stay. In all our forty years of greenhouse work we never had any trouble of this sort till now. A. W. & S.

A good way to remove the whitewash is to thoroughly soak it with concentrated lye and then use a wire or hard-bristled scrubbing brush. If the lime was put on in a hot condition, it may require more than one such application to remove it entirely. Ribes.

GREEN FLY AND MILDEW.

I have a house in roses, such as Maryland, Bride and Maid. I planted them July 18 and they did finely until a few days ago, when the leaves began to turn yellow and fall off. They are suffering from both green fly and mildew. I have smoked them with tobacco stems twice a week, but the pests are still on the plants. Will you kindly let me know what to do to get rid of them? I have been firing at night and maintaining a temperature of 65 degrees at night and 80 degrees in the daytime. I am a beginner in rose culture. H. S.

To exterminate green fly it is only necessary to use some good tobacco preparation, either in the form of spray or as a fumigant. Tobakine, Nicofume or Nicoticide, when used as a spray, should be in the proportion of one-half ounce to one gallon of water. If used as a fumigant, painting the pipes with the liquid without dilution will do the work.

To kill mildew, take air-slaked lime, one part; flowers of sulphur, three parts; mix to the consistency of paint; paint your pipes with this every week.

A temperature of 65 degrees at night is too high for these varieties. Reduce the night temperature to 58 degrees and the day temperature to 75 degrees, if possible. On cloudy days the temperature should not exceed 65 degrees. Keep the ventilators a little open whenever possible, even when firing. Ribes.

ROSE CUTTINGS OUTSIDE.

I am planning to start some rose cuttings outside. What is the best time to put them in? Is it too late here in Walla Walla, Wash.? Is it advisable to start them in the greenhouse and plant them outside next spring? Do they need covering in winter? If so, what is the best to cover them? How large must I take the cuttings?

W. W. F. C.

Cuttings of roses can still be taken in your section with success in the open. A light covering of leaves, weighted with brush to prevent blowing away, should be put on as soon as the ground freezes. Cuttings for outside work should be from eight to ten inches long. To raise them in the greenhouse from wood from outside, the cuttings should be taken before the bushes have had time to ripen and shed their leaves.

Cuttings from wood from indoor stock can be inserted in sand at any time from now on to March 15. These cuttings should be from half-ripened wood and have from two to three eyes. Give them a temperature of 62 degrees in the sand, with a house temperature of 52 degrees. Never allow them to become dry. Ribes.

FEEDING ROSES.

I should like to ask whether roses should be fed as early as this. The varieties are Bride, Maid and Richmond. They were planted in June and have received one inch of top cultivation each week since then. The soil is heavy loam, one-fifth part manure. One hundred pounds of steamed bone, per bench 100 feet long, were applied before planting. The plants have three to six branches, sixteen to twenty-four inches long, but do not grow as we think they should. J. T.

Stock such as you describe is now sufficiently strong to stand feeding. This can be applied in the form of a mulch consisting of one part good fibrous loam and two parts decomposed cow manure, if available. Sheep manure can be substituted for cow manure. Feeding can also be applied with benefit in the liquid form; in such form it is quicker in its action, being more easily assimilated. Ribes.

TWO NEW ROSES.

Under this heading an article appeared in The Review of October 13 describing Melody and Double Killarney grown by Robert Scott & Son, at Sharon Hill, Pa. So well do these two new varieties promise that the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. has decided to offer the young stock to be distributed next March with their favorable recommendation. This means that the Pennock-Meehan Co. believes that both Melody and Double Killarney have merit that entitles them to be ranked with White Killarney. Samuel S. Pennock took flowers of both varieties to the New York Florists' Club meeting November 14, where a preliminary certificate was awarded to each variety, the chairman of the club's committee on novelties, Charles H. Totty, promising that his committee would see the roses growing at Sharon Hill and make a further report. Edward J. Fancourt, secretary of the Pennock-Meehan Co., said that Alexander Montgomery, of Natick, Mass., and William Nicholson, of Framingham, Mass., had seen Melody and Double Killarney growing and had heartily commended them. With such powerful backing for the yellow and the pink rose, a fair trial is assured by all wideawake rose growers. Phil.

SWEET PEA BUDS DROPPING.

What is the cause of our sweet pea buds turning yellow and dropping? The houses are well ventilated and kept at a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. The plants seem to be perfectly healthy, but the buds do not mature. Is it advisable to use nitrate of soda on sweet peas to make them bloom? If not, what is good? F. B.

The average night temperature, when the sweet peas are flowering, should be 48 to 50 degrees. I would not let it go as low as 45 degrees. Not knowing whether your plants are on beds or raised benches, or the condition of the soil, it is difficult to say whether or not this has some bearing on the buds dropping. A too dry condition, too much moisture at the roots, or imperfect drainage would each help to cause the trouble you have. Allow the soil to dry out fairly well between waterings. Loosen the surface soil so that it does not have a baked or slimed-over appearance, and ventilate freely on all possible occasions when the temperature rises over 55 degrees. On cloudy days the temperature should be 56 to 58 degrees, while with sunshine it can run up to 65 degrees or even more.

I would not advise using nitrate of soda on the peas, either now or later. They should not yet need feeding, and as you state the vines are perfectly healthy, lack of plant food is not the cause of buds falling. A little later in the season a top-dressing of pulverized sheep manure will do the plants good. Loosen the soil after applying it, so that the manurial properties will wash in evenly and readily. A dressing of fine bone is also beneficial, but this I would not apply until the middle or end of March. You will find sheep or cow manure better and safer than nitrate of soda. The latter is a quick acting stimulant, but its effects do not last as do those of the other foods, and there is also more danger of seriously harming the plants when applying it.

OUTDOORS AND IN.

Is there any remedy for the diseases that cause outdoor sweet peas to have a mottled appearance and become somewhat deformed, and which later appear on the vines in the same way and eventually kills the plants?

What varieties of sweet peas, red, purple, pink, mauve and white, would you recommend for planting among violets some time in January, to come into bloom after the violets are finished blooming and discarded? S. B.

Change of soil each year will keep your vines healthier than if you plant successive seasons in the same soil. I do not know of anything you can do once the plants show this mottled or diseased appearance. Cover your seeds two to three inches deep. Sow early and rather thinly. If seedlings come up thickly, thin them out four inches apart each way. Do not hill up the rows, as is often advised in catalogues. This only causes a lot of stem-rot and wholesale dying of the plants. Try starting one or two seeds in 4-inch pots in coldframes about the end of February and plant out a foot apart in the rows. These will give you an early and continuous crop of longer-stemmed flowers than you will get from sowing directly in the open.

Good varieties to sow among your violets in January will be Countess of Spencer, rosy pink; Helen Lewis, orange pink; Mrs. Routzahn Spencer, soft pink; King Edward VII, bright red; Navy Blue, purple; Frank Dolby, mauve; Dorothy Eckford, white; White Spencer. The Spencer or waved varieties, which are unsuitable for early forcing, will do well sown from January onwards, and command a higher market price than the old type. C. W.

A LATONIA LADY.

Mrs. Thomas Jackson is one of the well known florists of Latonia, Ky. The portrait is from a snapshot made as she was leaving the greenhouse with an armful of flowers. Mrs. Jackson has for many years sold a part of her stock in the Jabez Elliott flower market in Cincinnati, and through her unfailing courtesy and reliability she has won the confidence of all who see her for their floral wants, as well as the respect of others engaged in the trade.

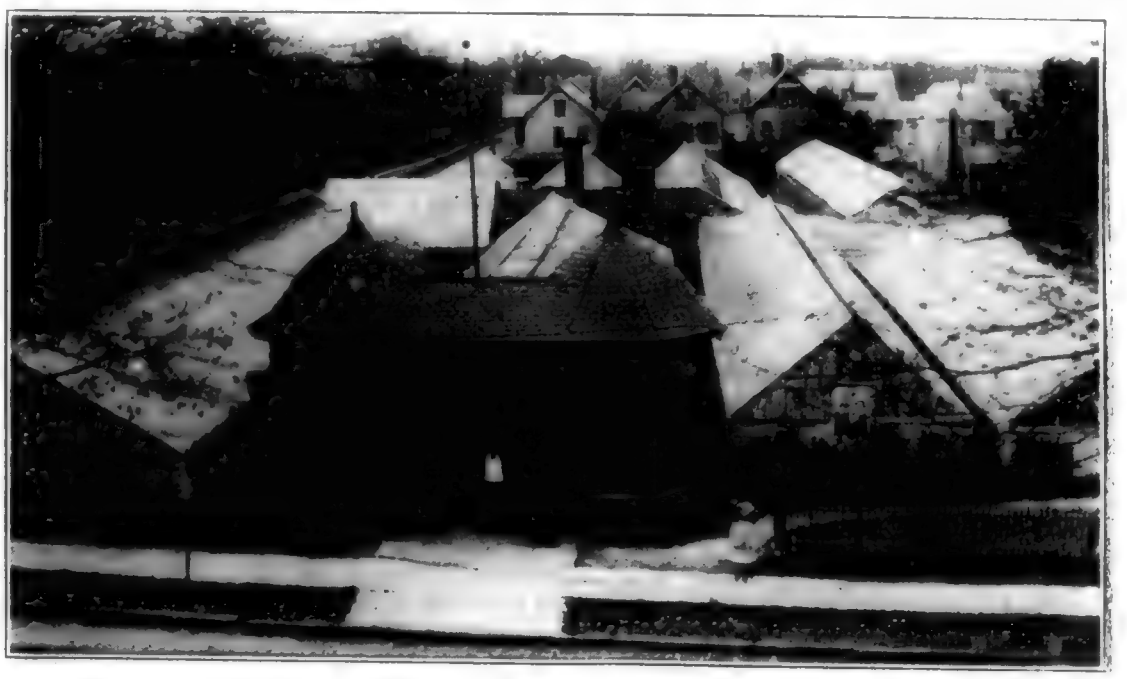
HYACINTHS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Kindly inform us just when to bring in hyacinth bulbs to force for Christmas. The bulbs were potted October 1 and are well rooted in coldframes at present. A. O. N.

You do not state whether the bulbs are Roman or Dutch hyacinths. If the former, allow them five weeks in an average night temperature of 60 degrees and they will be all right for Christmas. The tops should be sprouted a couple of inches before housing. As the flowers expand, give them a cooler house. Dutch hyacinths can not be successfully forced for Christmas and I would not advise your trying to get them in flower at that time. They must be well rooted and have growths at least two inches long when placed in heat. It is also necessary to keep them dark for at least two weeks, to draw up the shoots; otherwise the flower stems will be short. C. W.

CINDER COVERING ON BULBS.



In answering my question, I wish C. W. had told us how deep he covered his hyacinths with cinders and if glass or any other covering was needed on top of the cinders. J. M.

If the bulbs are in a coldframe, cellar or pit, four inches of covering of ashes will suffice. If outdoors they will need a heavier coating, say six to eight inches, and additional protection later in the way of leaves, straw or hay, with board shutters over it to exclude frost. By all means get your bulbs under cover. It should not be a warm place, and fire heat is better absent. I know many growers who continue to stand them outdoors and bury with soil or ashes, with other protective material. The delights of digging out these bulbs in zero weather with a foot of snow on the ground are so many that I will not recount them, but am now well satisfied to stand the bulbs out of reach of snow and frost. They grow just as well and can be easily and comfortably handled any time when needed. C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

MUMS FOR DECORATION DAY.

Can I grow mums for Decoration day? If so, when should I bench them to have them blooming a week before Decoration day? I wish to grow the first earlies, such as Golden Glow and October Frost; or are some others better? C. F. B.

Getting chrysanthemums into bloom in the spring is not a new trick by any means. The writer had such plants fully sixteen years ago. There is usually little or no demand for them at that time, however, and it is not generally done, for that reason.

Rooted suckers potted off now are the ones to use, if you want to try it. Not all the varieties will set buds so early and you will have to experiment with the varieties of today to find out which to use. The old variety Eugene Dailledouze could be depended on to a plant to set buds when handled that way. Golden Glow will set buds any time of the year, if propagated accordingly. If you will cut away the old plant and let the suckers come without moving the plant, you will get a lot of blooms early in the spring.

A. F. J. B.

EFFECT OF UNSUITABLE WATER.

Will you kindly tell me why my fine lot of chrysanthemums proved a failure? I bought fine stock from two mum specialists. I am located in Georgia and grow all my plants in the open. I prepared my ground well in March, as we have to start the plants here before the ground gets hot. I planted them deep and cultivated them well. In July I gave them a top-dressing of old, well-rotted cow manure. In August I put on a light top-dressing of guano. Up to this time I had as fine a prospect as I ever had. A few plants showed rust, but not to any great extent.

I began watering in August, with a hose. I used city water on them, which we drink, but it seems to have a great amount of alum in it. The foliage began to turn black-spotted and dry. I feared to use the second coating of manure, but there were no buds, except false ones, until the second week in September. By that time the stems were almost bare. All the foliage turned black and died. After the buds were as large as walnuts the stems directly under the buds dried up and the buds died. On others the buds drooped down on one side to the stem and turned black. Some began to open and gave promise of fine blooms, but soon turned dry and died.

Was the stock at fault? Were the plants diseased, or was the trouble caused by the manure or water? Would you advise the use of the plants as stock plants for next year? Please give directions for growing good, large blooms in the open field, and tell me how to get early buds and blooms. The plants listed in the catalogues to bud August 25 do not bud for me until September 10 to 15. R. D. M.

The trouble in this case would seem, unquestionably, to be caused by the water. R. D. M. says that until August there were splendid prospects of a successful crop. The top-dressings at that time, of cow manure and guano, would not do any damage, unless excessively heavy, and this does not appear to have been the case. The failure could not be due to poor stock received from the growers, as the plants began to grow splendidly and showed fine prospects.

Any water that contains alum is certainly bad for vegetation, particularly for soft-leaved plants, such as chrysanthemums are when growing. If R. D. M. can not procure any different water, I would suggest dispensing with it altogether and growing the plants according to the dry system—that is, by persistent cultivation instead of watering. Outside the water, I see no reason in this case for being unable to grow chrysanthemums and get a splendid lot of flowers.

Charles H. Totty.

BLOOMS FEW AND IMPERFECT.

About the first week in last June we planted a solid, center bed, in a new greenhouse, to mums. Only about three-fourths of the glass had been put in on one side of the roof at that time. The remainder of the glass was put in about the middle of September, so that the plants were practically in the open air during the summer months. They have, in general, done poorly, though other conditions seemed favorable to them. A considerable percentage of them came blind, especially in the early sorts, and all varieties show many imperfect flowers. They all made slow and short-jointed growth, flowering unusually late. Would the fact of their being uncovered all summer be responsible for these shortcomings? I am now located in eastern Canada. Farther south I have grown mums outdoors entirely through the summer, but never tried it so far north as this.

J. M. & S.

In all probability, the cause of these plants doing so poorly is the fact that they were exposed all summer. Many insects attack the plants when they are grown outside, the worst ones being the tarnished plant bugs. These little insects puncture the stem of the plant and cause it to run blind. They appear also under glass, but not to anywhere nearly the same extent as they do when the plants are exposed to outside conditions. Chas. H. Totty.

A DOZEN GOOD, LARGE SORTS.

I wish to plant twelve different varieties of mums and I know you are in a position to recommend the dozen different sorts. They must be all large ones, as I have plenty of the smaller sorts. In fact, I have plenty of each kind, but wish to keep up my stock. I am located in Missouri. A. J. B.

The following varieties are all large and will give a good selection of colors:

Florist's Booth at a Texas County Fair.

The Bowling Contingent of the Omaha Florists' Club.

White—Mrs. David Syme, W. M. Moir, Mrs. Norman Davis. Crimson—Pockett's Crimson, Leslie Morrison and Pockett's Surprise. Pink — Miriam Hankey. Yellow—F. S. Vallis and Mrs. J. C. Neill. Bronze—Rose Pockett and Mrs. O. H. Kahn. Mrs. H. Stevens and C. H. Totty, salmon and chestnut scarlet, respectively.

These can all be bought now at a reasonable figure, as they have passed the novelty class. Chas. H. Totty.

BUDS ROT AND WITHER.

Under separate cover, I am sending some plants of Golden Eagle. Will you kindly tell me the cause of the buds rotting and not growing after forming? This is the only variety that I have any trouble with. The plants have grown well and, as far as I can see, are quite healthy. The terminal bud was taken. The buds, after forming, seem to rot and wither up. I tried some without disbudding, but then all of the buds rotted. The plants have some thrips on them, but only a little. There are Bonnaffons on one side of them and Golden Chadwicks on the other, and both of these varieties are in good shape.

In another house I have a few Golden Eagle that were started later and they are acting the same way. I shall lose seventy-five per cent of both lots. If possible, I should like to know the cause of the trouble and a cure for it. I am located in southern Massachusetts.

E. L. J.

E. L. J. seems to be up against a proposition that is difficult to solve. Had any other varieties gone in the same house, I would have said it was a question of culture, but where Bonnaffon and Chadwick come good there should be no reason why Golden Eagle should not come good also. It would seem to me that the only thing for E. L. J. to do is to get along without Golden Eagle and stick to some variety that he knows will do well with his soil and conditions.

Personally, Golden Eagle never amounted to anything with our cultural treatment, but that does not alter the fact that it grows finely through the middle west and seems to be a valuable variety in that section.

A TEXAS FAIR BOOTH.

Corsicana is the county seat of Navarro county, Texas. Navarro is only an average of the 206 counties in the state and is itself about as big as the state of Rhode Island, so that there still is plenty of room in spite of the rapidity with which that section has been filling up the last few years. In that part of the country the county fairs are held a month or so later in the season than they are in the north and east, but the florists cannot at that time do much in the way of showing cut flowers; they make their displays with plants. The accompanying illustration shows the county fair booth of the Corsicana Greenhouses, run by Mr. & Mrs. Clowe, which, by the way, is unique as a firm name in this trade. There were in the display twenty-five varieties of ferns, including practically every one of the Boston sports and sports from Boston sports, that ever has been put on the market. Every plant was propagated by the exhibitors.

THE OMAHA BOWLERS.

Those Omaha florists are a husky bunch, believe us, but if you are from the neighboring state of Missouri (where they are said to be tiring of the changes rung on this joke) you can have the evidence of your own eyes; all you need do is look at the picture. These are the Omaha bowlers. They haven't broken training since the only time the S. A. F. met west of the Mississippi, which was twelve years ago, and are looking forward to the time when the florists' national tournament will again be pulled off in their territory.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Poinsettias.

Now that the bracts on poinsettias are developing, the plants are benefited by a higher temperature; 60 degrees at night is about right. Of course they will do 5 degrees lower and higher, but 60 degrees is a good safe figure. This is the time that judicious feeding is most effectual. Always avoid heavy doses. It will cause the foliage to yellow just as much as will careless watering. Weak doses applied twice a week are much to be preferred to stronger applications at wider intervals. Weak nitrate of soda water or Bon Arbor, a teaspoonful of each to a 12-quart can of water, are good foods to green up the foliage. Do not allow any stems to become bent. Use short stakes to straighten any which do not stand erect. Avoid fumigating with tobacco stems, or you will lose a lot of foliage. Poinsettias are much damaged by heavy smoking.

Gardenias.

We are arriving at a critical time of the year with gardenias, more especially those intended for midwinter flowering, and, of course, a large proportion of growers like to get a good number of flowers in the cold months, while prices are high. Cold weather necessitates more fire heat. Those who can give their benches a little bottom heat now have an advantage. The roots of gardenias love to be warm. The soil dries out better and the percentage of dropped buds have always been found materially less than on plants in solid beds, or in benches lacking bottom heat. It is now easy to syringe too much. Two thorough sprayings a week will keep the plants clean and prevent the constant drip consequent on daily hosings. Nothing approaching sogginess in the soil must be allowed, or buds will fall in showers. When water is applied, let it soak the soil thoroughly. Let it dry out well before giving any more. If the soil is porous, as it should be, there will be no trouble with surface scum.

Keep a moist atmosphere and a night temperature of 68 to 70 degrees. Ventilate, when the thermometer is above 75 degrees, a little at a time. Do not allow the temperature to run up to 85 or 90 degrees and then rush on a lot of air. There is no surer way of spoiling your plants. Plants in pots, which show the need of a little feeding, should have a little soot water to keep the foliage dark green, and a sprinkling of Clay's fertilizer once in ten days will keep them toned up nicely.

Eucharis.

Whether in pots or benches, eucharis should by this time be started if a Christmas crop is wanted. If the plants have been kept cool and dry for some weeks, they will respond quickly to a brisk bottom heat, and after the first soaking watering it almost seems as if the flower spikes appear by magic. Eucharis are less grown than their merits would seem to warrant. A few pots or a small portion of a bench with heating pipes below it planted with them will give a lot of flowers, and no matter whether for cutting for vase use, or in design work, they are one of the most chaste of all white flowers.

Tuberous Begonias and Gloxinias.

The flowering season for tuberous begonias and gloxinias is past. Too often as soon as the flowers disappear the plants are thrown under the benches on their sides to rest. This treatment is all wrong. After flowering, watering should be continued for some time and only gradually withdrawn. The reason many growers lose their tubers in winter from dry rot is owing to the drying off being so abrupt. In order that the tubers should not occupy too much space, the soil can be shaken away when they are quite at rest and the tubers packed in dry sand or cocoanut fibre refuse. The begonias will winter all right in a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees, but the gloxinias are better if kept 10 degrees higher. Achimenes are best left in the pans or pots they have flowered in until at some convenient time in winter they can be picked out. Fancy caladiums, which, if not at rest, probably soon will be, are not always wintered successfully. They like a warm, dry shelf or shed with a temperature which holds to 60 degrees at night; in a low temperature most of the tubers will decay.

Lilies for Christmas.

The buds on both Harrisii and Formosa longiflorums which are wanted for Christmas must now be well advanced; nothing less than two inches in length will flower in time, unless forced very hard. Maintain a brisk, moist heat, 65 to 68 degrees at night, and use the hose freely among the plants. A spraying with nicotine or fumigation will keep that arch enemy, green aphis, in check. Quite a few Formosa lilies will this year be out for Christmas. This is a beautiful lily and it is too bad to find that growers are this season having more disease than usual on it. This is due, no doubt, to too early lifting and shipping of the bulbs. They arrived earlier this year than ever before. The desire to get bulbs in early is no doubt responsible for a large part of the disease seen everywhere. Improperly ripened bulbs cannot be expected to make a healthy and natural growth.

Astilbes.

Astilbes will arrive toward the end of the present month. Soak them well in a tub of water when unpacked. They generally arrive on the dry side. Leave outdoors or in a coldframe, where they can get one or two good freezings before doing any potting up for forcing. Astilbes must have a complete rest before they can be successfully forced. Do not omit the beautiful pink variety, Queen Alexandra. from the list. This is now much more moderate in price. This sort will not force well early, but for Easter and Memorial day it is the finest of the family. The white varieties, astilboides, floribunda and Gladstone, are much to be preferred to the old Japonica. While botanically these are astilbes, the name spiræa dies hard and it seems doubtful if the new name will find acceptance in this generation in the trade any more than codiæums will for crotons.

Spanish Iris.

The present time, just before the ground freezes up, is when Spanish iris should be planted outdoors. When set out too early, they frequently make considerable growth before winter. While this growth is rarely injured, even in severe zero weather, it is better to plant the bulbs a trifle later, so that they will not send any shoots above ground until spring. These irises are perfectly hardy, unless planted in ground where water stands, and are fine for cutting. The English iris can also be planted now with advantage. This class immediately follows the Spanish section and is also excellent for cutting.

SLOW TO BLOOM.

My carnations are just beginning to bloom. They were planted about the middle of August, some of them earlier, and grown in a temperature of 50 degrees at night. For some reason they seem rather slow, though they have good, stiff, long stems. When would you feed them? What kind of feed would you use and how often? Any general information on feeding would be greatly appreciated. W. H. D.

Without knowing more about what varieties you are growing and how they have been treated since they were housed, I can not tell whether your carnations are coming along as they should or not. Varieties like White Perfection and Victory should have been blooming for at least six weeks, unless the plants were topped back unusually late after being benched. Beacon and the Enchantress varieties sometimes are a little slow in coming into crop if they fail to get away in good shape after being housed.

If your plants are in good condition, as you say they are, then I would advise you not to experiment with them too much. Let them come along naturally, and you will find they will repay you with quality. However, you might with safety raise the night temperature to 52 degrees.

If you think they will stand some feeding without causing the blooms to come soft, you might give them a light sprinkling of sheep manure, say about a good handful to each row across a 5-foot bench. Repeat this about every month or six weeks, substituting wood ashes in equal amount about every third time. Watch the texture of the blooms right along, and at the first sign of softness stop the feeding. A light mulch of half rotted cattle manure would also be beneficial, and would perhaps be the safest at this time.

There is a great deal of danger of overfeeding until after the turn of the new year. After, say, the middle of February or the first part of March, that danger has passed and feeding may be practiced with comparative safety.

A. F. J. B.

A VARIEGATED ENCHANTRESS.

Please tell me whether anyone has a variegated Enchantress carnation. I have a plant of Rose-pink Enchantress which has one large, fine rose-pink bloom and one large variegated bloom, besides three large buds which are not showing color yet. The variegated bloom is as white as snow and beautifully marked with rose-pink stripes which go the entire length of the petals. Will someone tell me the best way to use this plant in order to produce as many cuttings as possible? I had thought of cutting off the rose-pink blooms as close to the base of the plant as possible and saving each flowering stem of the variegated bloom.

L. M. B.

There has not been registered with the American Carnation Society any such sport from Enchantress as you describe. Inasmuch as priority is recognized in all such matters, you might well consider that your sport is eligible for registration, providing you get your registry here first.

I would not advise you to cut away the pink portion of the plant, as you suggest, unless most of the plant proves to be variegated. To cut away one-half or more of a healthy plant would have a tendency to weaken it. A better way would be to leave the variegated blooms on until they wilt, then cut them off with short stems and tie a tag on the stems which bore the variegated blooms, so you could afterward take off all the cuttings that grow on them. In this way you can rob these stems without weakening the plants.

There is a good demand for such a variety as you describe, as the white variegated class lacks a variety which can be considered first-class and profitable. A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE ON BASSETTS.

I am sending you a sample from my bench of O. P. Bassett carnations, which were planted early in July in good soil. Most of the plants are affected with the disease. Other varieties in the same house, and under the same treatment, are doing finely. What treatment shall I give them?

R. F. C.

The spots on the specimen forwarded are quite common with this variety. They are caused by the disease known as stigmonose, which is brought on through the punctures of sucking insects, such as aphis and thrips. The only remedy I know of is the selection of cuttings, and keeping the plants clean of all insects. It might require several seasons to eliminate the disease entirely, but, with care and persistence, it can be done.

A considerable number of growers had trouble with this carnation last year, many of the plants being worthless by midwinter. As a result it was dropped by some growers, while others selected cuttings from healthy plants to try again. Our plants were the same way last season, but we propagated a few hundred cuttings from healthy plants and what we planted in are now in fine condition. If the variety were a trifle freer in blooming, we would consider it a splendid sort to grow. It grows strongly and roots like the proverbial weed. A. F. J. B.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

P. M. De Witt, of Bridgewater, Pa., has registered the following new carnation: Pennsylvania, Boston Market x Harlowarden; color cerise, a little lighter than Mrs. Lawson; size of flower, two and one-half to three inches; free from all disease; vigorous in growth; long, wiry stem; blooms all winter and seldom splits the calyx; very fragrant and one of the best keepers.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The week has been a busy one, for all the retail stores have had about all the work they could do and the commission houses have been called on for as much stock as they could supply. Flowers of all kinds are of good quality and selling briskly at good prices. Valley has taken a jump, not being equal to the demand. Sweet peas are offered in small quantity. Greens are being used largely.

Trade Exhibition.

The Florists' Club's trade exhibition was held November 18 in the large quarters of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange. The committee in charge was swamped with a great variety of flowers and plants. Frank Danzer, John Davidson and Theodore Mitchell acted as judges. A summary of the exhibits and their exhibitors follows:

Fred Miesel—Begonias, poinsettia plants, Bostons and primroses. This collection was awarded a premium as a whole.

John H. Davidson, gardener to Mrs. Helen Newberry, of Grosse Pointe—A collection of exceptionally fine mums. He was awarded first prize.

Thos. Browne—Timothy Eaton and Golden Wedding mums which it would be hard to beat.

Chas. Plumb—Well grown plants, including begonias, poinsettias, various kinds of ferns, hydrangeas, etc.

B. Schroeter—Collection of commercial plants, awarded first prize for cyclamen.

J. Breitmeyer's Sons—Fine collection of commercial plants.

Louis Rush—Ferns and begonias.

Beard Bros.—Collection of commercial plants, including some fine ferns.

Robert Klagge—First prize on peas, Rhea Reid roses and cosmos. Also some splendid Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond roses and mums.

Fred. Breitmeyer—Canadian Queen and Perle roses, winning a first prize. His snapdragons and carnations also were above the average and he showed some fine adiantum and single violets.

Gus Taepke—A collection of exceptionally fine mums, also stevia.

Otto Stoll—Chrysanthemums.

Theo. Dameron—Awarded first premium for assortment of mums.

J. E. Smith—A splendid lot of Eaton mums.

M. Bloy—First premium for Begonias Pink Maud Dean, Golden Wedding and Chadwick.

Fred Pautke—New white pompon mum called Mrs. Helen Newberry. New forget-me-not, considerably darker and a better keeper than the common variety.

Elmer D. Smith & Co., of Adrian, Mich., received honorable mention for a collection of mums, including such varieties as Thanksgiving Queen, Adonis, President Roosevelt and Golden Eagle.

Robert Craig Co., of Philadelphia, showed some fine cyclamen plants and was given honorable mention, plants or flowers from outsiders not being in competition with those grown by club members.

Not all the members of the club were on hand, but there was a fair representation. Many employees not club members also took advantage of this opportunity to compare stock. J. C. Muller, representing Julius Roehrs Co., was a visitor.

Club Meeting.

At the club meeting November 21 Fred Pautke gave an interesting talk on sweet peas as an indoor crop. He gave hints on culture and marketing and said that good peas are an exceptionally profitable crop.

Three applications for membership were received.

Resolutions of respect were drafted on the death of Henry C. Fruck.

Various Notes.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has added magnolia, oak, statice, etc., to the stock of florists' foliages.

B. Schroeter has put on some more store help. H. S.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business here is quite satisfactory and there is every reason to believe that it will continue so. The demand seems to be steady, and while there are days when business is not quite up to the mark, it usually happens that the following day makes up for it, and the general average is what counts, after all.

There have been a good number of weddings, which have used up a great quantity of stock, and it is always the best stock, too. The average price of all varieties of flowers is gradually moving upward, with every prospect that the prices obtained at Thanksgiving will be good. There has also been a great deal of funeral work, of which large sprays of mums have formed a great part.

Thanksgiving day is now upon us, and we are ready to welcome it. The last few years have developed this day into one of the best of the year. Prices are not raised so high as to be out of reach of the average buyer, as at Christmas; as a consequence great quantities of flowers are handled at good prices and they go into the homes of the middle class of buyers. Thus Thanksgiving day is a day of general satisfaction all around and we look forward to its coming with a great deal of pleasure. Everything points to its being a record breaker this year.

The supply of stock for this market is much the same as reported last week. Beauties are somewhat scarce and violets are not equal to the demand. The prices of both roses and carnations are advancing.

Various Notes.

At the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, November 14, some good mum seedlings were shown, which were grown by Henry Fischer, one of our best growers of seedling mums. The committee appointed to look after novelties, and award them a certificate of merit, gave these the following average: No. 1, a white incurved, 87 points, commercial scale; No. 2, a large white, 60 points; No. 3, a light pink, 80; No. 4, a dark pink of the Amorita type, 85; No. 5, a white, 72 points.

James Hamilton, of Mount Washington, has finished and planted his new concrete house with roses, which are doing finely. He has been cutting some extra fine Dorothy Gordon carnations.

The park board is removing all the shrubbery on several of the large squares. It makes a decided improvement, as the bushes were old and some of them were badly infested by scale. The beds are being put in shape for the planting of pansies and bulbs. About 50,000 pansies are to be planted.

Q.

ALBANY, N. Y.

The second annual flower show, held by the Albany Florists' Club in the state armory, November 10 to 12, was well attended and enthusiastically admired.

The judges were W. G. Saltford, Poughkeepsie; Alfred H. Wingett, Lenox, Mass.; Edward J. Norman, Lenox, Mass.; Thomas J. Totten, Saratoga Springs; J. R. Fotheringham, Tarrytown, and Dale S. Carpenter, Cohoes. The exhibits were numerous, and the work of determining the awards occupied nearly all of the first afternoon and evening.

The prize for the best decorated florist's booth was awarded to John J. Berberick, Second avenue, who now owns the handsome silver cup donated by the Florists' Club for this competition. The booth of W. C. Gloeckner the judges thought especially attractive. It was fitted up elaborately and tastefully for a wedding, with the wax figures most lifelike.

F. A. Danker was awarded eleven first prizes, including first on mantel decorations and first on best vase of twenty-five white chrysanthemums. The last named prize was declared by the judges a sweepstake, and a label was attached to the exhibit setting forth that the flowers were the best group of twenty-five in the show.

Alfred Simon, gardener for Charles Gibson, Albany, received a diploma for a fine group of plants arranged for effect.

First prizes went to Alfred E. Whittle for choice roses, W. C. Gloeckner for choicest specimen plant, Frederick Goldring for ferns, Henkes Bros., of Watervliet, and others.

The gardeners and superintendents of the large private estates in Lenox received a number of first prizes. Alfred Loveless won the Danker cup for a beautiful collection of orchids. He was also awarded a diploma for chrysanthemums. One of the largest and handsomest collections of chrysanthemums ever seen in this city was that placed on exhibition by A. J. Jenkins, gardener for S. P. Shotter, Lenox. The Marston & Seaman cup for the best vase of 100 carnations went to F. Heeremans, Lenox.

POLLWORTH TAKES TO WOODS.

Immediately after the Milwaukee flower show C. C. Pollworth took to the woods, although there was nothing about the exhibits of this firm that seemed to call for hasty departure. The fact seems to have been that he was on his annual hunting expedition and in search for bouquet green. The accompanying illustration shows his success in the first undertaking, but seems to give little promise for the latter. The deer arrived safely at Milwaukee and a venison lunch will be served at the next meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club.

OBITUARY.

Robert M. Snow.

Robert M. Snow, who for many years conducted a business as a florist in Greenfield, Mass., died at Springfield, Mass., and was buried November 14. Since the death of his wife, a year ago, Mr. Snow had lived with his daughter, Mrs. Alice S. Howe, in Springfield.

Rudolph Jahn.

Rudolph Jahn, 40 years of age, died November 18 at his residence, 4659 Sheridan road, Chicago, and was buried at Graceland cemetery on Sunday afternoon. Mr. Jahn removed to Chicago from New York, where he had been a retail salesman for leading New York and Brooklyn stores. Finding employment with O. J. Friedman, Mr. Jahn at length married Frances Butler, who had for years been in charge of Mr. Friedman's office work. Under the name of the Butler Floral Co., they opened a retail store on Dearborn street, subsequently establishing branches in other parts of the city. The business went into bankruptcy in the early part of the present year.

Armaldo E. Covell.

Armaldo E. Covell, for more than ten years engaged in the florists' business at Barrington, R. I., died November 19 as the result of a paralytic shock that he suffered the previous Wednesday. He did not regain consciousness after he was stricken. He was born at Syracuse, N. Y., son of Edward and Eliza Covell, and was 56 years of age. When a young man he removed to Rhode Island and took up his residence at Barrington, where he purchased considerable land and built a fine home. Soon after becoming settled he engaged in the manufacturing jewelry business, for about twenty years, in the city of Pawtucket, R. I. He devoted much time to the improvement of his lands at Barrington, erecting a range of greenhouses, which for many years he conducted merely for amusement. Finding that his health was failing and desirous of outdoor pursuits, he engaged in the florists' business, about ten years ago, and was successful. He was prominent in the Masonic fraternity, being a past master of Washington lodge, of Warren, R. I., also holding office in Royal Arch Chapter of that town. Besides a widow, four sons and a daughter survive him.

Anthony Reitz.

Anthony Reitz, a pioneer florist of Montgomery county, Ohio, died November 16 at St. Elizabeth's hospital, Dayton, O. Death was caused by asthma, from which the deceased had been a sufferer ever since early childhood. In former years he was employed by the Highland Floral Co., of which H. M. Attick was proprietor; this position he held until the company sold out the business. His next place of employment was with the Heiss Co., and after the death of J. B. Heiss he went to H. H. Ritter's place, where he held a responsible position until his health failed and he was obliged to go to the hospital.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Pittsburg, Pa.—An automobile delivery car, operated by H. L. Blind & Bro., caught fire on the street November 4, but the blaze was extinguished before much damage was done.

Dighton, Mass.—The greenhouses of Charles S. Chase were slightly damaged recently by fire, caused by an overheated boiler. Since then, Mr. Chase has installed a new boiler, to take the place of the old one.

La Crosse, Wis.—The La Crosse Floral Co. made an excellent record at the Minneapolis flower show, November 9 to 14. Out of twenty-three entries, the firm captured nineteen first prizes and one certificate of merit.

Red Bank, N. J.—W. W. Kennedy & Sons had a large display of jardinieres and fern dishes, comprising about 300 pieces, at the fall show of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society, at Asbury Park. This exhibit was one of the most interesting features of the show.

New Hamburg, N. Y.—Alex A. Laub reports good returns from his commission men, regardless of the express strike in New York, which compelled him, with many others, to make special deliveries. He says the extra expense was covered by better prices, owing to the scarcity of stock of the highest quality.

Hinsdale, Mass.—Fred A. Woodard, who has been shipping ferns from the vicinity of Stamford and Searsburg, Vt., to L. B. Brague & Son, of this city, reports that he has attended to the shipment of about 4,500,000 ferns during the present season and expects to ship another 500,000 before snow stops the work.

New London, Conn.—S. J. Reuter & Son had one of the most prominent and most attractive exhibits at the show held by the New London Horticultural Society, in the town hall. The Reuter display consisted of R. F. Felton mums artistically arranged in art baskets, Mrs. Partridge mums in bronze green baskets, H. C. Frick mums on a large antique pedestal, and carnations in green toneware vases.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—Commercial florists were well represented at this city's first annual chrysanthemum show, held in the ball room of the Antlers hotel, November 9 and 10, under the management of the proprietor of the hotel, W. S. Dunning. Among the exhibitors were: The Park Floral Co., of Denver; the Antlers greenhouse, Pikes Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs Floral Co., F. F. Crump, Broadmoor Floral Co. and Schmitt Greenhouses, all of this city, and Fred Hall, of Montclair.

Pontiac, Ill.—W. J. Miller & Son will open their new greenhouses, on East Payson street, December 10.

Onarga, Ill.—A. L. Perring and William Edwards, of the Mosbæk Greenhouse Co., went to Chicago November 8 to attend the flower show in the Coliseum.

Mishawaka, Ind.—Finch & Sprague recently invited the public to a special display of chrysanthemums and other flowers in their store. S. W. Sprague attended the big flower show in the Coliseum at Chicago.

Mansfield, O.—Charles Dow, who had been superintendent of Central park for seven years, resigned that position November 1, in order to engage in business for himself, as a florist. His many friends in the city join in wishing him success in his new field.

Webb City, Mo.—J. E. Meinhart recently made a trip to the eastern states, and went from there to Leavenworth, Kan., where he was formerly in business. Later he continued his journey by calling at St. Louis and Chicago, reaching Chicago in time to attend the big flower show.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Julius Eger, proprietor of the Schenectady Florist Shop, at 735 State street, celebrated the second anniversary of the founding of his business November 11 and 12. He started in a modest way in a corner of a store on Union street and his trade has developed so rapidly that he is now occupying one of the best stores in the city.

Worcester, Mass.—Among the florists who won prizes and distinction by their exhibits at the annual show of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, November 10, were Edward W. Breed, of Clinton, president of the society; Leonard C. Midgley, proprietor of the Worcester Conservatories; H. F. A. Lange, C. D. Mackie, J. E. Draper, W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverly, and James Nicol, of Quincy.

Nevada, Mo.—G. P. Kaupp & Son held their annual chrysanthemum show at their greenhouses November 10 and 11. The new office, just completed, was finely decorated, music was furnished by an orchestra, and chocolate and wafers were served to visitors. It was a grand success, having been well advertised, and was largely attended, hundreds of visitors coming both days. The mums were at their best and visitors were delighted. This show has been an annual feature of this firm for a number of years and they find that it pays well; in fact, they report that sales are enough larger at the time of the show to more than pay expenses. Good carnations now bring 60 cents at retail and mums sell at from $1 to $3 per dozen.

Fall River, Mass.—F. Lothrop Ames is planning to erect a greenhouse, 25x100, on his estate on Washington street.

Omaha, Neb.—J. J. Hess, of Hess & Swoboda, accepted an invitation to act as one of the judges at the Minneapolis flower show, held November 9 to 13.

Chatsworth, Ill.—Thomas Pepperdine, of the Chatsworth Greenhouses, went to Chicago November 9 to attend the flower show and the florists' banquet.

West Medway, Mass.—The boiler house at Charles M. Smith's greenhouses, on Winthrop street, was destroyed by fire on the night of October 23. As a result, his stock of plants was also badly damaged, if not entirely ruined.

Des Moines, Ia.—W. K. Fletcher says: "After the driest summer on record here and a shortage of about twelve inches of rain, I cut the finest crop of dahlia blooms ever seen in this section of the country." Some of Mr. Fletcher's stock was shipped to Chicago and was among the best in that market.

Hillsboro, O.—One of the chief attractions in the flower department at the recent fair was the display from the greenhouses of Simon J. Hider. Hundreds of his flowers and plants were arranged, tastefully as well as conspicuously, in circular form on shelves in the center of the hall, where they did good service both for the fair and for Mr. Hider.

Hartford, Conn.—The annual show of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, held here November 3 and 4, brought out a long list of exhibits of chrysanthemums and other flowers, fruits and vegetables from many private estates and amateurs. Among the commercial growers who won distinction and prizes with their exhibits were Walter Angus, of Chapinville; George G. McClunie, of Hartford; Terry & Peck, of Bristol.

Washington, D. C.—F. H. Kramer's annual chrysanthemum show, beginning on Monday, November 7, and continuing till the following Sunday, included among its attractions a first class orchestra, which gave daily concerts from 3 to 6 in the afternoons and from 7 to 10 in the evenings, closing with two sacred concerts on Sunday. The establishment was recently enlarged by adding a conservatory, which extends from the store on F street to E street, and during the show the whole of this building was brilliant with special illuminations, the effect of which was enhanced by the use of fall foliage and other decorations. The foliage was brought from the Kramer nursery at Anacostia, which covers forty acres, with 100,000 square feet of glass.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Special convention and National Flower Show, Boston, Mass., March 26 to April 1, 1911.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

The total paid attendance at the Milwaukee flower show is given as 23,300, producing a gate receipt of $13,200. That's a pretty fair record for a city with a population of only 373,857. Almost seven per cent of all the people of the city paid admission to the flower show.

The dissolution of the Imperial Window Glass Co., the combination of the factories that use the human blower, which has been forced by the government, has thrown the glass trade into confusion. It is said the factories that blow glass by hand cannot be profitably operated under previous wage scales and that all such are shut down except a few that are conducted on the coöperative basis.

Wholesale cut flower dealers who do a shipping trade make frequent report of important mail orders that are not received until after the time for shipment has passed, and scarcely a week passes that The Review does not receive on Thursday morning advertisements and other matter intended for publication in the issue just coming off the press. People who write letters that fail of their purpose if not delivered by a certain hour should inform themselves on train schedules—but, most important, they should act in time; no use mailing a letter after the last train has gone; better, instead, mail it in time for the train before the last one.

COURSE OF THE MARKET.

Probably there are exceptions, but not many will question the statement that the average wholesale price of flowers so far this season has been below the values of other years; it has been said by so many people in so many different places that it must be true. This much conceded, the interest centers on the reason for it.

In this trade the reason usually advanced in explanation of the autumn prices is not poor business; it is the increase of glass and weather conditions that kept the markets continuously supplied with stock not intended to be marketed until later.

But in other lines business was undeniably dull in summer and early autumn, and is only now assuming normal volume. A few months ago one could hear on every hand that the automobile was ruining all else; then, just as the subject was becoming threadbare, it was discovered that the automobile boom had burst and that the real reason for slack business was the high cost of food—men in all sorts of occupations explained the lack of demand in their own lines by pointing to the sums required to procure the necessities of life; a patent medicine manufacturer located in the Chicago wholesale cut flower district even has told his florist friends that the cost of provisions was cutting down the consumption of pills. He marveled that the flower dealers were so busy.

Perhaps florists have been affected more than they suppose by extravagance in the purchase of motor cars by those who scarcely could afford them, and by the high prices of food. But for the automobile it must at least be said that those who become accustomed to the expenditures necessary to maintain a car are hardly likely to look upon the price of flowers as high; and the market values of almost all foodstuffs have been falling, steadily for weeks and rapidly of late—the law of supply and demand has been getting in its work.

Increased supply in the flower business always has resulted in increased demand, and it seems not improbable that conditions have been shaping themselves for an exceptionally active winter season for florists.

TO MAKE SURE.

Quite a few subscribers send $2 instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of The Review, while now and then one wishes to make sure of receiving every issue for the next five years:

I do not want to miss a copy of The Review and enclose my check for $5 to pay for five years, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914 and 1915.—John V. Bohrman, Louisville, Ky.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Thanksgiving, never to be regarded as in the class with other flower holidays, made a new record this year. Nothing like it ever before has been experienced.

The long stretch of cold, cloudy weather which preceded the feast day was the principal factor in upsetting calculations. A good demand had been figured on, largely due to the warm weather early in the season, which hurried along the chrysanthemum crops; it had been calculated that chrysanthemums would be much less abundant than in other years. Perhaps they were through the country, but it was not the case in Chicago. The chrysanthemum was more abundant than any other flower in the three days preceding Thanksgiving. If there was any difficulty in filling orders it was because train time was too near. However, the demand was so strong that better prices were realized than have been obtained for chrysanthemums in any recent Thanksgiving. The early crop of mums undeniably brought low prices; perhaps the Thanksgiving returns will give the growers better satisfaction. On the whole, they seem to have had an average season.

The cold, dark weather reduced the supplies of roses and carnations, not only in this market, but all over the middle west. The result was that a greater number of orders than had been expected found the market much shorter of stock than anyone had anticipated. The scarcity was particularly felt in carnations. Prices were high, but they did not average nearly so high as one might think from the protestations of the buyers. The fact was that when the business opened the demand far exceeded the supply, but as buyers found out what prices were asked they turned their attention to other flowers and the week's average will by no means compare with the top prices asked November 21; growers who expect it will be sadly disappointed.

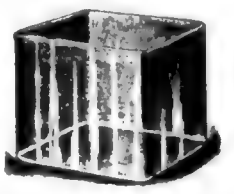
The dark weather seemed to improve the color of Beauties; better stock than that offered this week would be difficult to picture. But the dark weather knocked the color out of Killarney. Roses shared in the active Thanksgiving demand, but there was no shortage of the special grade. The principal call was for the medium stock and of this there was not enough to go around; short roses also were scarce. Richmond was in good supply with many houses and sold excellently. Coupled with the Thanksgiving demand was a good call for white for funeral work, so that everything cleaned up nicely.

The receipts of violets have been light for weeks and the quantity available for Thanksgiving was much less than had been expected. At the end of last week and the first part of the present week the price was forced to hitherto unheard of levels for Thanksgiving; $2 per hundred was paid in a few instances, usually by one wholesaler to another, the stock being billed out at exact cost. Retail buyers refused to pay the price except in cases of special necessity, so that $1.50 per hundred was more near the market price. Singles sold almost as well as doubles. A not heavy demand served to force the price of cattleyas above previous quotations; values ran from $7.50 to $12 per dozen. Valley was equal to the demand. There were plenty of Easter lilies. Some fancy bouvardia sold on sight.



Nearly all the wholesale houses state that their volume of business for Thanksgiving was far ahead of any previous year, but most of them would have preferred to see the supply larger and prices easier. When the market is forced into a sudden advance the retail customer makes an awful kick, not understanding that in many cases the goods shipped him might have been sold for more money if offered over the counter. At the same time the growers obtain an exaggerated idea of what stock is bringing, doubtless figuring their gross return on the top price paid in some special case. In this particular instance the market continued brisk for a longer period than it usually does before a holiday, but the averages obtained on the week's shipments were far below the top price.

Various Notes.

Charles Mulder, son of John C. Mulder, was killed in a tunnel accident November 16 and buried at Mount Greenwood cemetery last Saturday. The young man, who did not care to follow his father's business, drifted into electric railroading and was employed as a motorman by the Illinois Tunnel Co. His motor left the rails and the cars rolled on him. The accident occurred at Clark and Taylor streets. He leaves a wife and baby, besides his father, mother, a brother and two sisters. At the funeral his parents' home was filled with flowers, many from friends in the trade.

The physical demise of R. Jahn is reported in another column.

M. Hoffenberg, who has owned and operated a flower store at 1543 West Twelfth street for about four years, has formed a partnership with J. Hellman and recently opened the Boston Flower Store at 547-B East Forty-seventh street, in the building where formerly was located the Warwick Flower Shop. Mr. Hoffenberg says he will continue to run the Twelfth street store under his own name.

C. W. McKellar says he does not remember a season in which gardenias have sold as well as they have in the last few weeks. He thinks it is because of the scarcity of cattleyas, which caused retailers to offer gardenias instead.

John Kruchten says that fancy bouvardia has been a splendid seller, but that many buyers would only take white so he would give them some of the pink.

At Park Ridge the men of the town are having a dieting contest, some of them trying to reduce their weight and others seeking to gain. Louis Schelt, who weighed 150 pounds at the start, wants to put on flesh, while W. H. Ahrensfeld, who weighed 160, seeks to reduce. Both are retired florists. If still active, they would be more concerned with the physique of their plants.

W. A. Starrett, of the Chicago Carnation Co., has been off on account of illness, but A. T. Pyfer makes an efficient shipping clerk, on occasion.

Kyle & Foerster say the only stock that could be called an abundant supply for Thanksgiving was green goods.

Wietor Bros. had a fine lot of W. H. Chadwick for Thanksgiving.

Mrs. E. Morton, owner of the Park Flower Shop, recently moved her store from 233 East Fifty-eighth street to lighter and more commodious quarters, almost across the street, at 206. Here she is able to make a much better display and finds business improving in consequence.

Richard F. Gloede, of Evanston, says that the installation of a new boiler and piping, to take care of the additions made last summer, has kept him busy for some time. He also states that redecorating the store and office is on the program for the near future. Business has b en good with Mr. Gloede this fall and he expects a big holiday trade.

E. C. Amling says that he does not recall a season in which Beauties and roses sold so well during the height of the chrysanthemum season.

Joseph Mendel will receive a salary of $7,200 a year as county commissioner.

Harry Manheim s ys that November 21, 22 and 23 each was above the best previous record for sales with Hoerber Bros.

Peter Reinberg has returned from his hunting trip in the southern part of the state.

The president of the Poehlmann Bros. Co. says that Thanksgiving might easily have been mistaken for Christmas this year; in all his experience he had seen nothing like the number of orders received the first three days this week.

C. L. Washburn, president of the State Florists' Association, reports that the annual meeting will be held at Urbana, February 8 and 9, in conjunction with a big meeting of the State Horticultural Society and all the allied organizations of Illinois. The exhibition will be a feature, as usual.

Carl Thomas, of the A. L. Randall Co., says that one of their growers already is cut out of his crop of stevia.

the growers of any particular item of stock, and they do not tell the growers who the buyers were, but Kennicott Bros. Co. pursues a different policy with George Bayer, of Toledo. A large part of his stock each Thanksgiving is ordered shipped direct to the retailers. Mr. Bayer is famous for his Bonnaffons. This year the shipment on the night of November 22 was the largest on record. It amounted to more than half a carload.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. reports that landscape work is heavy this fall. The new auto delivery car used by this firm is giving great satisfaction and is considered a good investment. It is one of the machines of the Chicago Motor Wagon Co.

At E. H. Hunt's it is said the supply department is busier than ever before at this date.

Vaughan & Sperry say November is making a new record for them.

Winterson's Seed Store reports being practically cleaned out on Dutch bulbs; attention will now be given to Christmas goods.

Harry Van Gelder says he sold over 10,000 Bonnaffons a day for three days before Thanksgiving.

The Market.

Business was excellent last week, and judging from the run the wholesalers had, everybody must have been busy with work of all kinds. There were a number of weddings that used up a great deal of good stock, and transient trade was unusually good.

Monday, November 21, the market opened with Thanksgiving prices, with little stock coming in and the demand strong on everything. The market all of last week was pretty well cleaned up daily, with a good shipping demand, and it looks as if all the shippers to this market are holding back for the big day, Thursday.

The crop of Beauties and of other roses has fallen off considerably of late. The few that come in are of good quality. Chrysanthemum blooms are becoming scarce. Some fancy Eaton, Chadwick, Golden Wedding and Jones are still coming in, but the rest are a thing of the past for this season. The wholesalers are asking fancy prices for the best of them this week.

Carnations are becoming extra good in quality and the demand is so strong that consignments are cleaned up early each day. Violets are bringing top prices and there are not any too many in the market; orders have already been placed for about all that will come in. Paper Whites are now coming in and a few Romans. Lily of the valley is fine and there is plenty of it.

Prospects for Thanksgiving are bright, with stock of all kinds scarce and prices high.

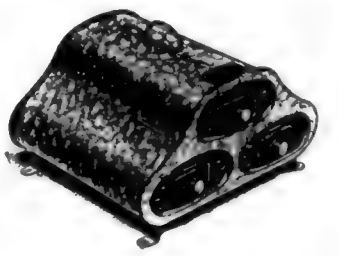
Various Notes.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, called on the trade last week. He reports an excellent trade in plants. He is working his way east from here.

"Billy" Smith had to do jury duty all of last week and is glad that it is over for a year, at least.

Charles Kuehn has fully recovered from his illness and is now down to business all day, as usual.

Henry Kahrs is again in the employ of Grimm & Gorly, at the Washington avenue store. Francis Gorly, buyer for the firm, says trade with them has been excellent of late in all lines.



The Brix Floral Co., at Fifteenth street and St. Louis avenue, has been making a pretty show of cut mums of late. This stock is from the firm's Mead avenue greenhouses. Mr. Brix reports trade satisfactory. Pot chrysanthemums, of which they had a great number, sold well this season.

Ammann & Johann have a most attractive store over on the east side, and Mr. Paul, their manager, says business was good last week.

December 5 the Retail Florists' Association will hold its monthly meeting. Secretary Weber says he hopes all members will attend this meeting, as it is important.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society held a special meeting November 22, to hear reports of the recent flower show and arrange to pay all prize money. Judging from present reports, the show was not a financial success.

John Held, on Tennessee avenue, is cutting some grand blooms of Golden Wedding, Chadwick and Golden Chadwick. This stock is being handled by Charles Kuehn. Mr. Held also had a good run on mum plants among the trade.

Henry Ostertag, of Ostertag Bros., says they have been unusually busy of late with decorative work. Plant trade has been exceptionally good with them.

E. W. Guy, chairman of the club's trustees, says the members of the club were much impressed with the social feature of the club's last meeting, and that he will advise that all meetings, beginning with January, have some social features at the close.

The chrysanthemum show at Shaw's Garden attracted large crowds all last week, both day and evening. The collection includes many pompon and anemone varieties, in addition to the standard sorts. Many of the older kinds are also to be seen. The large tent in which the show is held is well lighted at night. Weather permitting, the show will continue throughout this week. J. J. B.

The Market.

The week before Thanksgiving was rather quiet in cut flower circles. Supplies fell off materially, but the demand was quite light. The present week started with rather more activity and prices November 22 were decidedly firmer. All indications point to an adequate supply of cut flowers, with the possible exception of violets, which are in light crop. Prices on both singles and doubles have varied from $1 to $1.50 per hundred for the last week. Growers are all complaining that their plants are producing lightly just now. Chrysanthemums still are abundant, but the present week should see the bulk of them sold. Bonnaffon remains the leader and probably as many flowers are seen of this old favorite as all others combined. Nagoya, Shrimpton, Intensity, Maud Dean, Chadwick, W. T. Brock, White Eaton, Yellow Eaton and Mrs. Jerome Jones are other varieties seen. The Eatons do not sell as in previous years and some growers will drop them another season.

Roses are not overabundant and are selling better. A good Thanksgiving crop of these is forthcoming, and, thanks to the colder and more seasonable weather, the quality is much improved. Some excellent Beauties, with long stems, are seen. Killarney and White Killarney are fine. Mrs. Aaron Ward remains a prime favorite. Of Chatenay one or two growers are sending splendid blooms. Bride and Maid are slow to move. Kaiserin is getting scarce. Carnations are coming with longer stems and will be in good supply for the holiday this week. Crimson and scarlet varieties have of late sold exceptionally well.

A few Roman hyacinths are coming in and Paper Whites are more abundant. Stevia is coming from several growers. Valley seen is of moderate quality only and sales have been rather slow. Lilies are selling well. Callas as yet are scarce. Some nice pink antirrhinum is seen, also ten weeks' stocks. The latter does not sell well. Mignonette of good quality is to hand, while the supply of marguerites is rather larger.

Gardenias are selling quite well, as are cattleyas. C. labiata is getting scarce, but C. Percivaliana and even a few C. Trianæ have appeared. There is a good supply of cypripediums and other seasonable orchids, and these are being displayed in more stores than ever before. Green supplies are abundant, of excellent quality and the demand for them has been quite good.

Plant trade has braced up considerably. In flowering plants, azaleas, camellias, Primula Sinensis, P. obconica, Daphne Indica, Lorraine begonias and chrysanthemums are the sorts mostly seen, while Christmas peppers, berried solanums and Otaheite oranges are also a good deal seen. For fern pans there has been a good call.

Various Notes.

At Horticultural hall, November 19, E. B. Dane, of Chestnut Hill, showed an interesting table of orchids and secured these awards: Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ, carrying sixteen flowers, first class certificate; Oncidium crispum, carrying eight fine spikes, first class certificate; Cattleya labiata x Maronii and Laelio-Cattleya Timora x Cattleya Loddigesii received honorable mention; Cypripedium Dante magnificum received a silver medal and Cypripedium Tityus a first class certificate. Other plants shown included Acineta Loddigesii, carrying a raceme of fifteen flowers; Vanda cærulea, with a grand spike of twenty-one flowers, and Cypripedium William McKinley.

The following officers were elected at the annual election of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society November 19: President, Charles W. Parker; vice-president, John K. M. L. Farquhar; trustees, Edward B. Dane, J. A. Pettigrew, Wilfrid Wheeler, S. M. Weld; nominating committee for 1912, Judge C. W. Hoitt, J. B. Shurtleff, General F. H. Appleton, H. E. Fiske and F. W. Damon. There being no contest for any of the officers, a light vote was cast.

William Sim is now picking about 100,000 violets weekly. He is restricting himself almost entirely to Princess of Wales. The new variety, Boston, has been entirely dropped. He has a small batch of the new anemone-centered variety, Cyclops. He is now picking sweet peas of excellent quality from one of his 360-foot houses.

R. & J. Farquhar are planning to center their nursery and greenhouse business at Dedham, where they have plans prepared for a splendid block of modern houses fitted with every convenience, including tracks for hauling plants to and from the houses. Their plant, when completed, will be one of the finest in the east.

November 19 Edward MacMulkin had an attraction in his big show window in the form of a miniature football field with players, representing the rival Harvard and Yale teams, which attracted considerable attention.

Kidder Bros. are picking 12,000 violets a week, the quality being superb. They state that plants are producing sparingly so far this season. Other violet specialists have the same complaint.

S. J. Reuter, at C Park street, has a fine lot of Chrysanthemum Dolly Dimple, a pale yellow reflexed variety, also W. T. Brock and splendid Nagoya. The latter is a popular deep yellow in Boston.

A recent call on Duncan Finlayson, at the Larz Anderson estate, found all the greenhouses well stocked with finely grown winter-flowering plants. In the carnation houses May Day looked fine, as did Winsor, Beacon and Enchantress. The roses grown are chiefly Killarney and White Killarney. Calanthes were unusually fine and a number of the vestita section were already in bloom. It is a wonder more of these orchids are not grown commercially for the Christmas trade. Among cypripediums, Harefield Hall and insigne Sanderæ were represented by several strong flowering plants each. Lorraine begonias were extremely well grown. J. Newman & Sons, at their Tremont street store, had some pretty baskets arranged with cattleyas and cypripediums November 19. Their lily of the valley is the best we had seen. They were, as usual, busy with funeral work.

S. J. Goddard finds the single white chrysanthemum, Anna, effective in floral designs. He is growing a variety of both singles and pompons and finds them useful in his increasing retail trade. His carnations are in heavy crop for Thanksgiving.

William Patterson, of Wollaston, who makes bulbs quite a specialty, is in the market with excellent Roman hyacinths. He is also cutting quantities of stevia.

Wax Bros. in their windows make a specialty of big bunches of pansies and single violets, for which they find a ready sale. They carry a fine line of choice flowers, such as cattleyas, valley, Beauty roses and gardenias, and business with them is good.

Philip L. Carbone, at his up-to-date Boylston street store, always has his window arranged in such a way as to rivet the attention of passers-by. He does not fill his windows with huge vases of cut flowers in a solid bank, as is too often done, but has more artistic ideas. His arrangements are always light and graceful. At present baskets of English ivy, hanging from the upper parts of the windows, are used to good advantage. Some beautifully flowered specimens of Erica melanthera were noted last week. A fine line of hardy evergreens in pots and tubs is carried here also.

Anthony Riley, familiarly known as "Andy" for over thirty years to exhibitors at Horticultural hall, died November 11, in his seventy-third year. Interment was from the Ebenezer Baptist church and many hundreds attended. The deceased was a great favorite with the habitues of Horticultural hall and his genial presence will be much missed.

On a recent visit to the Arnold Arboretum I found the always genial Jackson Dawson busy superintending the packing of 800 varieties of trees and shrubs for Kew Gardens, England. Collections of the new Wilson introductions have been sent to over 100 estates to be tested. Thousands of seedling rhododendrons in pans and flats, all Chinese, were being well ripened up. These should give a wealth of additions to our flora, as many will undoubtedly stand our eastern winters.

Thirty cents on the dollar has been accepted by the creditors of W. E. Doyle in settlement of their claims. Total liabilities approximate $60,000. The stores on Boylston and Beacon streets are being operated as usual.

The scene of the accident was about three days' journey from Cheng-Tu, where medical assistance had to be procured. Mr. Wilson is now progressing favorably. His previous journeys have been singularly free from mishaps, but this accident serves to illustrate some of the dangers that explorers and collectors have to face in procuring new plants.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The week closing with the day before Thanksgiving has witnessed a remarkable change in the scene. There is activity everywhere—everywhere that the flowers hold out. Unexpected shortage has appeared in carnations. The flowers that are arriving are fine and prices have advanced, the ordinary and select grades approaching the fancy. Chrysanthemums are on the crest of the wave. The finest blooms of the season are in, and they bring the finest prices. Golden Eagle is the notable addition to last week's list. Chadwick, Bonnaffon, Eaton, Mme. Rosette, Maud Dean and Mrs. Jerome Jones form the bulk of the stock. All go well; so do good pompons and singles. Violets have been in great demand at excellent prices. Valley has joined the list of scarce staples. The supply is large and insufficient.

Roses are good and moderately plentiful, though most of the large growers are cutting few flowers. Cattleyas remain scarce. A few Trianæ have come. Callas are in the market. The miscellaneous flowers are more plentiful. Greens share in the activity. Shipping is brisk.

The Preferment of E. C. Jellett.

The November meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was noteworthy for two things, a change in the presidency and the success of an individual exhibitor over the field. The Reverend Francis Heyl, who has presided over the society's meetings since the retirement of Edward Neville, announced that he would not be a candidate for reëlection at the December meeting. His decision was accepted with regret. Edwin C. Jellett was the only nominee for the office and will therefore be elected at the December meeting to serve, let us hope, for many years to come. Mr. Jellett's advancement from the position of senior vice-president to that of president is a fitting recognition of the splendid work he has done for the society during its dark days as well as in its bright days ever since he has been a member. Mr. Jellett was one of seven members who met when the society was at its lowest ebb to decide whether to disband or to continue. To his unflagging efforts much of the good that the society has been able to accomplish is due, and under his leadership continued prosperity may be confidently predicted. There is a humorous side to the change that will come when Mr. Jellett leaves the floor to occupy the presiding chair. It has been a joy to the rank and file for many years when a friendly clash occurred, as it frequently did, between Secretary Redles and Mr. Jellett. One would make a statement blandly, the other would as blandly contradict that statement, and a lively tilt, always carried on in the best possible temper, would follow. Both knew a little more about matters horticultural than any of the other members, so that these debates were instructive as well as entertaining. Whether Mr. Jellett will feel that he can leave the presidential chair to one of the three vice-presidents to indulge in a tilt with his old antagonist, or whether he will feel that his position is judicial rather than that of an advocate, remains to be seen.

The four chrysanthemum prizes, two for plants and two for big flowers, were carried off by William Sibel, who also secured second on the pompons, a notable achievement.

Various Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report many visitors from other cities, including Mrs. Held, of Baltimore; Ralph M. Ward, of New York; Hugh P. Campbell, of Shamokin, and Mr. Zellensky, of Lynn, Mass.

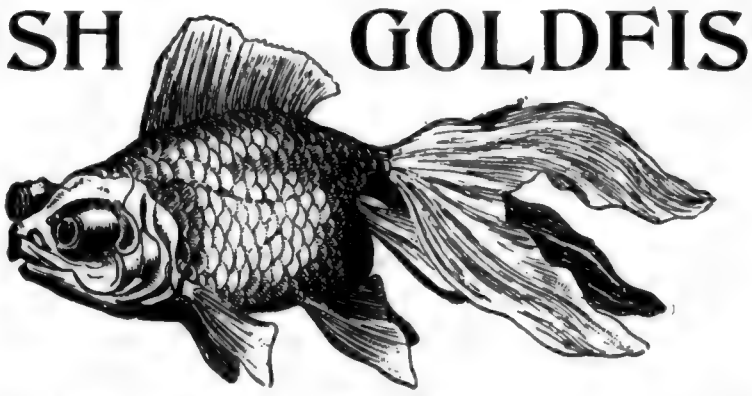
NEW YORK.

The Market.

The Indian summer continues. Finer weather than that of last week and the first part of this week cannot be desired. Shipments are light as the week opens and prices are steady or improving. Evidently some of the growers are holding back, as usual, for Thanksgiving. Business on account of the horse show had but small encouragement for the florists, but the football match November 19 absorbed everything in blue and red and lifted the price of violets to the top figures of the year. There now is no good reason why we should not have a successful and constantly improving season. The great harvest has insured general prosperity and the florists will enjoy a winter of old-time profit, unless all signs fail.

The flood of chrysanthemums shows no evidence of abating. The anticipated shortage for Thanksgiving has not materialized. For the best stock prices have hardened and all that arrive are quickly disposed of. Appleton, Bonnaffon, Gold Mine, Eaton, Golden Wedding, Chadwick, Maud Dean and Enguehard are the favorites among the older varieties. For some of the new ones the price of $6 per dozen has been maintained. From this height down to $5 per hundred, the best variety and quality the New York market has ever received makes its daily bid for recognition.



If there is any scarcity for Thanksgiving it will be of orchids, and of violets and gardenias there will be no more than the market will absorb. In plants for this holiday trade there are fine begonias and cyclamens, and any quantity of mums in pots, while the fern and palm supply is unlimited.

Many fine carnations are arriving, Alma Ward and Mrs. Ward still maintaining their supremacy. Beacon and Winsor are popular, also Enchantress and White Perfection. The best quality of the season now prevails and the selects were selling at 4 cents November 21. Violets slumped to 75 cents per hundred as the week began, which was natural after the great demand of Saturday. The New Haven retailers must have reaped a fat harvest. Cattleyas are worth $1 each and there is no sign yet of a supply sufficient for the demand. Cypripediums are abundant and sell at $12 to $15 per hundred. There is some bouvardia arriving. Roses now are at their best and prices are improving. Long-stemmed Beauties are rapidly approaching the 50-cent quality and the best of them may reach high tide for Thanksgiving; 25 cents to 35 cents was the Saturday quotation.

In other roses Killarney seems to be the favorite. Bride and Maid are extra fine. Some grand Richmonds arrive daily. The few arrivals of the new roses are spoken for before shipment. Callas, narcissi and hyacinths have begun their bid for favor. Lilies are in greater demand and valley holds at 4 cents for the best. Adiantum and Croweanum now are perfect. Smilax is overabundant. Asparagus of all kinds sells readily.

Various Notes.

Large sales of bulbs, hardy roses, evergreens and ornamental stock for the retailers have been offered at the Tuesday and Friday auctions, but prices obtained for bulbs especially are far below wholesale values. Roses have held well at $10 per hundred and better. Bay trees sold at half the wholesale prices. The attendance at the auctions is growing as the weather becomes more seasonable. If New York maintains its reputation as a mild winter resort, there will be auction sales of plants until Christmas.

Joseph J. Levy has a convenient store at 56 West Twenty-sixth street and has added a large ice-box to his other facilities.

Conrad Schultz, of Westerly, R. I., one of J. K. Allen's growers, was his guest last week while visiting in New York.

H. E. Bates, sales manager for the King Construction Co., of North Tonawanda, N. Y., was a recent visitor.

David Adam, formerly with J. M. Thorburn & Co., is now managing his retail business at 389 Jackson avenue, Jersey City.

Hugo H. Jahn, of Brooklyn, says he has never been so busy, his decorations averaging seven a week. A pall of violets, using 15,000, was one of his recent orders. Like several enterprising Brooklynites, he picked up some good bargains in ferns and palms last week at the New York auctions.

Kessler Bros. say the demand for the new fern, Dreyerii, has been encouraging.

Twenty-eighth street now boasts of subway conveniences, the entrances having been completed, and Jersey connections are perfect.

William H. Kuebler's florists' supply department in Brooklyn is growing and larger quarters seem a necessity.

B. Rosens reports a wide demand for artificial poinsettias and other holiday specialties.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., handled an enormous lot of violets November 19 for the football enthusiasts.

Abraham Moltz has fully recovered from a severe attack of the grip.

Kervan Co. moves into its four-story establishment this week. The entire second floor has been converted by means of cork walls, cement and a cold storage plant into the most practical and unique preserver of its kind in the trade. Four hundred boxes of smilax can be stored at one time.

C. C. Trepel has completed the enlargement of his stores at Loeser's and Bloomingdale Bros.' and doubled their capacity. The amount of business accomplished by this genius is little short of marvelous.

Bowling.

The match of New York with the Astorias is contemplated for the evening of December 1 at the Long Island alleys. Prizes for the next regular club meetings Friday evenings are promised by W. E. Marshall and G. Myer. The scores November 18 were:

mer, Wertheimer Bros. show with great delight the letter of a florist in Memphis, whose store was flooded and much damage done. His ribbon stock was ruined, except the sprinkleproof ribbons and chiffons, which were unharmed, though the boxes were destroyed. They say they are exporting considerable quantities of these goods.

M. C. Ebel, proprietor of the Aphine Mfg. Co., has given up his other business in this city to give his full time to the insecticide at Madison.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The weather last week was slightly crisper than previously, with the result that chrysanthemums, which are about the only flowers that find ready sale at present, are moving a trifle more freely. Orders for the Thanksgiving holidays, however, give evidence of a good week's business. A number of weddings during the current week are expected to bolster up the general conditions materially. Violets are more plentiful than a week ago, but are not seen in such quantities as was the case a year ago. Prices remain about normal, but the next few days will see a slight stiffening for Thanksgiving.

Various Notes.

O. H. Williams has been elected a member of the town council of Johnston.

Eugene McCarron is cutting some fine orchids, which find ready sale among the residents in his vicinity.

William E. Chappell is busy with numerous small decorations and cut flowers for weddings and teas.

William Appleton, who was reported extremely low last week, has been more comfortable during the last few days.

Owen Dolan, 30 years of age, employed in the city forester's department, fell from a tree on Benefit street, this city, and died a few hours later at the Rhode Island hospital.

The two new houses which A. M. Powell is erecting on Brook street are nearing completion.

William C. Pratt & Sons are erecting two houses at Long Meadow. Each is to be 100 feet in length and will be used for carnations.

Visitors: Mr. Johnson, representing the Albert Dickinson Co., of Chicago; William J. Stewart, of Boston, and James F. Mulchy, of N. F. McCarthy & Co., Boston. W. H. M.

APHIS ON LETTUCE.

Will you please tell me the best method of keeping green aphis down in my lettuce house? I have fumigated with tobacco stems twice a week and have had the smoke thick enough to curl some of the leaves, but this does not seem to be effective. W. E. G.

I think that you would be pleased with nicotine paper. This is more powerful than tobacco stems, but does not injure the foliage. It is made of heavy brown paper, soaked in a strong mixture.

Are you sure it is green aphis? Steady, light fumigation once or twice a week with stems ought to keep them down, unless they have become extremely numerous. H. G.

TOO COOL FOR CUCUMBERS.

We have some cuke plants that turn yellow and die when about two inches tall. The seed was sown in 2½-inch pots of half soil and half sand, and kept at a temperature of 50 degrees. Can you give a remedy? M. B.

The temperature is 20 degrees too cool for cucumbers. They will not stand a night temperature of less than 65 degrees, and 68 to 70 degrees is better. If you can not maintain the temperature they require, it would be better not to try to grow them, as they can not possibly do anything.

Start the seed in flats and transplant as soon as up. Use clean, new soil. One-half sand is all right for the seed; one-fourth sand would be better for them to be potted into after they are sprouted. Keep them just moist, not overwatered. Above all things, keep them warm and light. A temperature of 85 degrees is not too warm on bright days. H. G.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Market conditions have greatly improved within the last two weeks. The demand is good and stock is shortening up on account of the cloudy weather. Especially is this true of carnations; more of them could have been profitably disposed of. The supply of roses and stevias is equal to the demand. Mums are quite plentiful and move fairly well.

Violets are not nearly so plentiful as they were in former seasons. Of green goods there is enough to go around. Lilies, which were on the decline for some time, are again holding their own.

Various Notes.

Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, who came to see the flower show, found an old friend who showed him around during the day, winding up at a rehearsal of a singing society. He expressed himself as well pleased with all he saw and promised to visit us again during the Saengerfest in 1911.

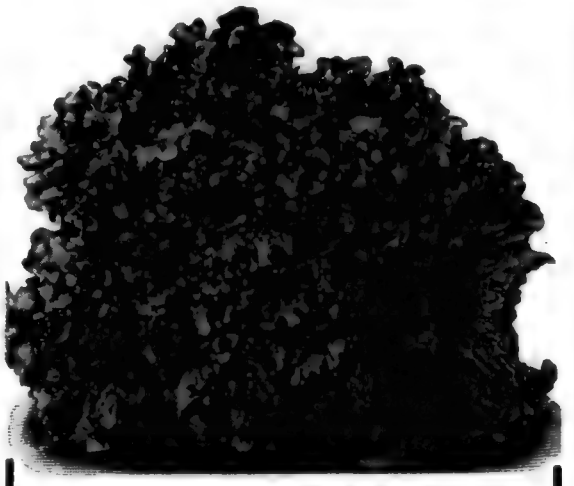
The Holton & Hunkel Co. is still cutting large quantities of roses, which are equal in quality to those which reaped premiums last week.

The cut mums of the C. C. Pollworth Co. are all of a better quality this season than ever before. They have some fine Golden Wedding, Eaton, Chadwick and Balfour.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. has been kept busy for the last two weeks with funeral and wedding work.

J. M. Fox & Son report a busy week in the decorative line.

The A. Currie Co., which was organized a short time ago, opened a store at 130 Wisconsin street and is now ready for business.



At the meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, December 1, officers for the year 1911 will be elected. E. O.

Double Glass Sash

Use Sunlight Sash

side by side with ordinary Sash this Winter

See how much bigger and sturdier the plants under Sunlight Double Glass Sash will be. See how little care they require—how they save time and labor because you never have to cover them.

The double layer of glass does it Between the two layers of glass is a ⅝ inch transparent blanket of dry, still air—a perfect non-conductor, keeping in the heat, keeping out the cold. Since the sash are never covered the plants get all the light from sun-up to sun-down.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

One day's sunshine and ten days of cloudy November weather tells the condition of stock at the present time; it can't help but be a little scarce. But it all may go to help to increase the supply for the Christmas trade, which calls for much more stock than Thanksgiving. Tnanksgiving seems to be a day of feasting more than a time for flowers. Groceries are high, is the complaint, and after the wants of the inner man are supplied, if there is 50 or 75 cents left, that goes for a table bouquet. These are the general conditions in this locality. So the florist does not, naturally, look forward to one of those rushed-to-death seasons.

The day of chrysanthemums for the 1910 season is drawing to a close, and there is only a limited supply. The dark weather affected carnations most, and, as usual, the call for them came in from every direction. Roses, while not overabundant, have been equal to the demand. Callas and giganteums are coming in freely and are moving satisfactorily; likewise valley and narcissus. Greens, and especially home-grown smilax, are a little short in supply.

Business, on the whole, while nothing to boast of, was not so bad, though the complaint is general that funeral work orders dropped off considerably last week.

vember 15 and some of our florists got the fever. George W. Bartholomew was one of a party of four autoists who went to Mudlick, O., for a day's hunt. He came home with a good supply of cottontails and quail, which he and his neighbors enjoyed for a few days. Ray and Herbert Bartholomew and Roy Ewings, of the Miami Floral Co., spent their day in hunting at Alpha, O. They also came home with a good supply of game.

The Dayton Floral Co. has just received fifteen cases of azaleas, palms, bay trees, boxwood, etc. The shipment arrived in splendid condition. The shipment also contained some orchids, which they intend to grow as an experiment. Warren G. Matthews, the proprietor, says trade has kept up satisfactorily.

"Funeral work has dropped off somewhat in the last week, but otherwise trade has been good," says H. H. Ritter. "We booked some nice advance orders for Thanksgiving and also for corsage bouquets to be worn at the charity ball. We have also been exceedingly busy this fall, planting shrubbery."

"Trade out my way, while it comes in slowly, has been quite good," says Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs.

M. Anderson spent a few days in Cleveland last week, where he has opened a branch store on Euclid avenue.

The Heiss Co. has this year grown more chrysanthemums than in previous seasons and finds it was a good thing; enough own stock has been cut to supply the demand, and the supply will run the store for the next ten days.

Recent visitors are William MacLachlan, of Fort Wayne, district agent for the Morehead Mfg. Co.; Charles Schwake, representing Charles F. Meyers, New York; John Rhinehardt, of Bellefontaine, and Lawrence Krodel, Jr., with W. C. Beckert, Pittsburg.

Mrs. B. Haschke reports that her new red chrysanthemum, which she has named for her only child, Gerald Haschke, and which was exhibited at the Chicago flower show, scored 85 points. This entitles her to a certificate of merit. Mrs. Haschke has already received more orders than she is able to fill.

Mrs. E. Young seems to have had a corner on the funeral work last week, as she was kept exceedingly busy along this particular line.

M. & L. Johnson are well satisfied with the condition of trade. Miss Lucy

NORTH AUGUSTA, S. C.

Boatwright's Floral Co. made a fine exhibit of mums at the annual Georgia-Carolina Fair, at Augusta, Ga., from November 7 to 12. The design prize of $15 was won by the firm, as well as twenty-two other blue ribbons.

This design was unique and beautiful, representing an old spinning wheel, wrapped in yellow ribbon. The wheel itself was made of the small yellow mum blooms and banded with yellow satin ribbon. The bottom was covered solid with the yellow blooms of mums. Laced between the wheel spokes and the leg of the wheel was greenhouse smilax. The whole affair was then mounted on a large platform, covered with yellow Porto Rican mats.

The booth for the Boatwright exhibit was built of rustic work and supplied with furniture of the same style. The firm's outside mums, 800 in all, were killed by a recent frost, though covered with heavy canvas. All blooms exhibited by them were grown under glass, and the Silver Weddings were "the finest yet." Their exhibit of imported baskets was also fine.

TWO SPLENDID N

WITH the introduction of every new rose the questions arise in every grower's mind: Shall I buy now grown? Is it an improvement over what we now have?

After critically examining the rose from all sides, as a commercial flower, color, fragrance, a free bloomer, whether a good strong healthy grower, whether a winter bloomer or simply a f thoroughly convinced that it is a better rose than existing kinds, it is not hard to determine the quantity to

All of the foregoing points we claim for Melody and Double Killarney and feel no grower can bound to be money-makers to all buyers, especially the first year buyers.

Melody grows much better on own roots than grafted.

Melody, own root, $6.00 per dozen; $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000. Grafted, $5.00 extra per 100. 2½-inch pots, delivery during March. Orders filled strictly in rotation. Orders for cut blooms in quantity on short notice, $10.00, $12.00 and $15.00 per 100.

We quote Robert Scott & Son's description of Melody.

NEW IRISH ROSE MELODY

"The freest flowering winter-forcing Rose yet introduced. Melody is a yellow pedigree seedling of Messrs. Alex. Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland, and is the fourth rose they have given us for winter forcing, their former introductions being Killarney, Liberty and Mrs. Jardine.

"Melody has a strong willowy growth, unlike any other forcing variety, with rich glossy foliage. Flowers are of perfect form, of a beautiful yellow shading, shading toward the center to deep apricot yellow, and very double. It will be particularly valuable to Florists from the fact that it produces such quantities of flowers in winter, when other varieties are apt to be shy. With us in Sharon Hill it is as free in winter as My Maryland is in summer, and from one two-year-old plant last December we cut 26 flowers, and from the same plant on the next crop in February we cut 27."

net with wonderful success wherever we have sold the cut blooms oking many fine orders.

Killarney needs no introduction to the rose growers of this country.

Double Killarney has all its good points and in addition is a stronger grower, has far more petals and larger flowers.

We have already booked some very large orders. In placing these orders our customers (the most successful growers in the country) felt they were making no mistake, as it would most certainly supersede Killarney.

Double Killarney, own root, $4.00 per dozen; $20.00 per 100; $40.00 per 250; $150.00 per 1000. For grafted, $10.00 extra per hundred. 2½-inch pots, delivery during March. Orders filled strictly in rotation.

We quote Robert Scott & Son's description of Double Killarney.

DOUBLE PINK KILLARNEY

"This novelty originated in our own place. Some years ago we had a white sport from Killarey, and after working it up to a house of 1700 plants we sold cut flowers from it. One of these plants ported back to pink, but instead of the ordinary Killarney we found that the habit of growth was much ronger and the flower had from 10 to 12 more petals than Killarney, some having as many as 35, and ere a shade lighter in color. Every Florist who has seen this sport likes it, as it is a better shipper and larger flower than Killarney."

We extend to all prospective buyers a cordial invitation to go out to Sharon Hill and see these vo sterling roses growing.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

THE Robinson Seed & Plant Co., Dallas, Tex., has surrendered its charter.

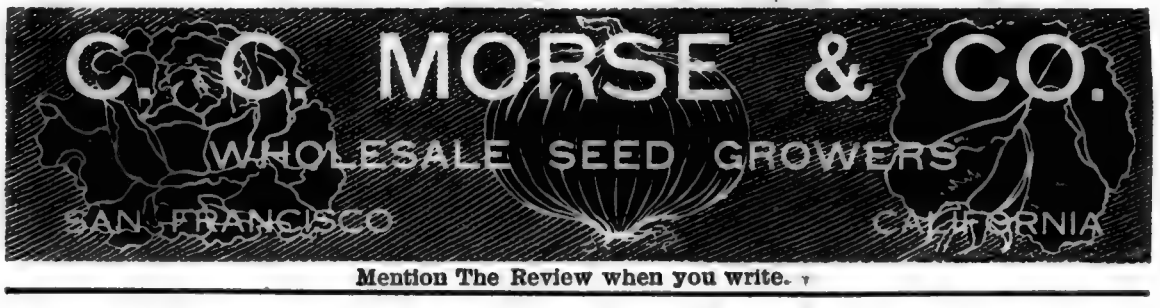
SOME of the seed growers think it won't be necessary to travel to sell the 1911 crop.

NOW is a fine time to go over the mailing lists, if not already checked up, and kill the cards of those who have not ordered since 1907.

THE seed trade in the south has been and is good; in the southwest the seedsmen have had something doing almost constantly all summer and autumn.

MANY Holland bulb growers' travelers ate Thanksgiving dinner in the west this year. Not so long ago they were content to make a start after celebrating Christmas at home.

NOW that the bulbs are pretty well cleaned up, a good many seedsmen will turn their attention to Christmas greens for a month before taking up the real business of the year.



H. NELIS, of F. Nelis & Sons, Beverwijk, Holland, who has come to America to establish a permanent office, is at present visiting the trade in the west, with headquarters at Campbell, Mo.

WHILE some seedsmen are rushing their catalogues to catch the early orders, others are taking their time. One man says the book that's on top of the pile is as likely as any to land the business.

BELIEVING that seeds will sell themselves this year, some of the mail order houses are cutting out a part of their advertising in agricultural papers (most of them dropped the general magazines last year) and are holding down the editions of the catalogue.

Why not plant your Sweet Peas outdoors this Fall, and get the benefit of the very earliest start in the Spring? Beds properly prepared now with well rotted manure, and the seed planted at a depth of 4 inches, with a light covering of hay or any suitable material, will more than pay for the experiment.

CONGER, BELL & Co., of Sac City, Ia., have completed the erection of their new seed house.

CHARLES SHARPE & Co., Sleaford, England, who are introducing two new peas this season, say that the demand has been such that they are practically sold out and have had to decline American orders.

THE California seed growers, or their representatives, have begun their annual trips among the trade in the east, booking contract orders. The character of the reception they are receiving reminds them of old times, when the seedsmen were not the busy business men they have become in recent years.

BOUQUET GREEN.

C. C. Pollworth returned to Milwaukee November 18, after his annual trip to the north woods. At the request of The Review he has given the following statement on the bouquet green situation:

"I found four to ten inches of snow throughout the entire northern part of Wisconsin, where bouquet green is picked; consequently this will stop picking entirely and indications are there will be no more bouquet green picked this season.

"Heavy forest fires throughout the summer months likewise had a great effect on the supply this year. Some of the best bouquet green districts were burned over and shippers who formerly sent it were unable to get any this year.

"Even if the weather conditions were favorable now, little of it would be picked, for after the hunting season opens up pickers are afraid to venture into the woods to gather green for fear of being shot.

"Apparently there will be an extreme shortage of green this year, as there

If you knew what we know about Horseshoe Brand Japan Bulbs we would not do this advertising, for you would buy them without it.

If you knew about the kind of seed bulbs we plant; how they are planted; about the skillful cultivation and fertilizing, and careful harvesting and assorting, you might wonder why we take so much pains at such expense.

But when you analyze it you will see. These bulbs cost more than most brands, of course, but average so many more flowers per thousand than common bulbs, that they are after all the most economical to buy in the end. The principal reason is because they are planted deep down in the soil. By this method of planting, the bulb takes a year longer to mature usually and more fertilizer, but the quality is so much superior to the average "flathead" that it more than makes up for the additional cost of growing.

Up to the present time, we know of no lily bulbs equal to our Superior Assortment of Horseshoe Brand Giganteum.

was not enough green picked early in the localities where some of it could be had to anywhere near meet the demand. Therefore other decorative greens will have to be used for Christmas.

"We believe bouquet green will be getting scarcer from year to year in this state. Pickers are demanding more money for it right along, owing mostly to the large territory that is necessary to cover now to pick it, as it cannot be found in as heavy quantities as it was a few years ago in any one place, and bouquet green disappears as soon as the timber is cut away."

On page 18 a picture of Mr. Pollworth and a deer that he shot will give an idea of the quantity of snow in the woods. One may be quite sure green picking has ceased in that locality at least.

THE BRITISH NONWARRANTY.

In an English court a buyer of grass seed sued because half the seed, delivered in two parcels and sowed on separate farms, did not germinate. The seedsman, in addition to the nonwarranty, rested his case on the lack of evidence that the seed sold actually had been sold and the court found for the defendant. In commenting on the case the editor of the Horticultural Advertiser said: "In view of the agitation which is being fomented in some quarters to obtain an alteration of the law doing away with the nonwarranty clause, and making the seedsman directly responsible for the crop, this case has a peculiar interest. We have several times pointed out that in addition to the vagaries of weather and seasons, the seedsman might be made liable for a crop failure in cases where through ignorance—or worse—his seed had either never been sown at all or under such conditions that a profitable crop was practically impossible."

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There has been a steady improvement in business for some time, and the last week has been satisfactory in every way. Among the retailers, all are pleased with the business they are doing. Society has awakened and the number of social functions is increasing right along. There has been plenty of stock of all kinds and, with a fair demand, the wholesalers are in good humor. While prices are advancing, no exorbitant prices have been asked.

Various Notes.

One local florist has an advertisement which reads: "Something to be thankful for; no advance in the price of flowers for Thanksgiving."

There will be enough mums for this week, and that will about wind them up.

Charles Koenig has started his bulb-cutting season with some fine Paper Whites and Romans. He will keep cutting until spring.

Violets, for some reason, have not been as plentiful as usual this year.

John Walker, of Youngstown, O., was a visitor. Mr. Walker has purchased a farm out from the smoke district and will start a couple of houses this winter, Lord & Burnham construction.

P. J. Demas, of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, has returned from Greece after a four months' absence.

The retailers are all getting automobiles, while the wholesalers are buying push-carts.

Joseph H. Rice and Thomas Fricker, who are identified with the vegetable-growing interests of Ashtabula, O., were interested visitors at the greenhouses of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.

N. J. Hayman, manager of the Hayman Greenhouse Co., Clarksburg, W. Va., spent a day looking over the same place.

George Schomer, of Connellsville, has opened a store downtown. He formerly conducted his business at his greenhouses.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had the decoration for the consistory reception held in the new G. A. R. memorial hall.

Phipps Conservatory has several houses of Lorraine begonias, crimson and yellow cockscomb and part of a

The weather report says we have only had twelve minutes of sunshine in fourteen days. Great weather for growing cut flowers! Hoo-Hoo.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The usual symptoms of a busy day in the florists' business are apparent; the supply arriving at the wholesale houses is limited and, with the eagerness of the buyers and the large buying, prices rule strong. If the growers did not hold back all, or nearly all, they can until the last minute, they would fare better, I believe, than on the holiday. Then, although the buyers want all the stock they can get, they will not bite on salted stock.

Chrysanthemums are still the backbone of the market and will probably be so for a part of the next fortnight at least. Major Bonnaffon is still the leader, with White Bonnaffon, Dr. Enguehard, Chadwick and Jones close seconds. Beginning last Saturday, many were sold at about Thanksgiving prices. So far, the stock has generally been of good quality and this condition seems likely to continue, unless growers have held back their mums more than their stock shows. In fact, some say that their stock is later this year than in other years.

The size of the shipments of roses does not show a superabundance of that flower. Pink, red and Beauties are selling readily, while white ones clean up during the day. According to the prospects, there will not be the usual large supply for a fortnight to come.

Carnations are in special request and the supply is small. I believe this is due partly to the growers holding back for Thanksgiving, and partly, as the growers themselves say, to the fact that they are off crop. Other lines have also been comparatively scarce since the last writing. More violets and valley could have been used, but few Lilium longiflorum are to be had. Callas are beginning to come in. Limited quantities of sweet peas can be obtained. Green goods of all kinds are plentiful and in fair demand.

Various Notes.

Business in the Jabez Elliott Flower Market was nothing extraordinary, or even ordinary. Toward closing, many sacrifices were made in prices. Ed Fries, William Speck and Frank Schneider had flowers of all kinds. Louis Pfeiffer & Sons, Popp Bros. and William Sunderman displayed large numbers of chrysanthemums on their stands. Ed Schumann offered a fine line of potted ferns.

Many of J. A. Peterson's greenhouses are bowers of beauty at present. His large lots of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati are just coming into bloom. Mr. Peterson says that he is well prepared for the rush next month, when his force must pack these for shipping.

C. E. Critchell says that he has found a ready sale for the pompons from W. A. Linnemann, of West Pine Hill.

George Corbett's careful, painstaking methods in growing are exemplified in the large, well formed Chadwick mums and the carnations that he is consigning to the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co.

P. J. Olinger says that he finds Killarney roses in such demand that they hesitate in his sales office, when on the way from the greenhouse to the ultimate customer, only long enough to be counted and billed.

It is understood that some of the members of the Bloomhurst Bowling Club, of Lockland, have grown pretentious and have stated in an informal way that they could walk away from a picked team of the Cincinnati florists. I can assure them that they can have an opportunity to do so at any time they wish.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums being at the height of the season, the show windows and stores are aglow with this flower queen of the fall, replaced at times with great displays of roses and carnations. Business is picking up constantly, and many orders were placed with the leading florists for expensive bouquets of all styles for the opening of the French opera season, November 22. Several large receptions and dances to be held during this week will keep the florists busy and the society calendar just published indicates a season of unusual activity.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its regular meeting November 17, at Kolb's tavern, on St. Charles street. Although the attendance was small, the different features brought up for discussion kept the members highly interested throughout the session. A resolution was adopted and the secretary, C. R. Panter, instructed to communicate with the Florists' Club of Springfield, O., condemning the practice of some of its members, wholesalers of that city, selling their goods, either through agents or by catalogue, to the people at large of this city at the same price as they make to the local florists. Resolutions of regret for the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Abele, mother of Otto and Paul Abele, both former presidents of the society, were adopted and the committee on these resolutions was retained to draw up suitable resolutions of regret for the death of Mrs. Gustave Chopin, mother of Peter Chopin, another former president. A suggestion of Max Scheinuk, one of the younger but active members of the society, to purchase a blackboard for the use of the members to make known at each meeting stock for sale or wanted, was favorably received.

J. St. Mard exhibited a sample of home grown rose plants, demonstrating in his interesting remarks that they can be grown here just as well as elsewhere. He also showed some fine Col. Appleton mums.

Henry Rehfeld brought a branch of a Ponderosa lemon with four huge fruits, cut from a tree 4 years old and five feet high. This species is grown here now more commonly, on account of its decorative and other merits.

Ben Goertling showed some of the best yellow chrysanthemums seen this season.

The feature of the evening was the report of Secretary Panter on his trip to San Francisco, with stops at St. Louis, Omaha, Denver, Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City and Los Angeles, returning via Kansas City and St. Louis. He found that New Orleans is, from a horticultural and general commercial standpoint, in line with every city visited and in some respects even better. At Denver the beautiful Lorraine begonias of the Park Floral Co. attracted his special attention. On the Pacific coast he found Phœnix Roebelenii practically unknown. From Los Angeles he visited the place of Alfred Roeder, formerly gardener to the late Mrs. Ida Richardson, of this city, and was shocked to hear that the owner passed to the great beyond two months ago. He learned from Mrs. Roeder that she intends to maintain the nursery with proper help until an opportune time of sale. The sad news made a deep impression on all of the former friends and colleagues of Mr. Roeder. At San Francisco, the elegant, large flower stores won his admiration. The abundance of locally grown good flowers sold at those stores and at the flower markets at extremely low prices caused him to marvel. Here he found a great demand for all kinds of orchids.

It was decided to have a display of seasonable plants and flowers at the next meeting, December 15, which will surely arouse a great interest among the members of the society. R. E.

Shelbyville, Ill.—E. M. Harwood is building an additional house. He says that business has been particularly good this year, except for a short time in the early fall, when it was dull.

PACIFIC COAST.

Eugene, Ore.—Ruth Bros. have opened a flower store in the Titus block, on East Ninth street.

Elmhurst, Cal.—Domoto Bros. are adding another house to their establishment on Bowling avenue between Hawley and Yoakum avenues.

Portland, Ore.—Martin & Forbes have a new Buick auto truck, and the pictures of it which have appeared in the local papers are an indication of the double purpose which such vehicles serve, advertising the business while delivering the flowers.

Eugene, Ore.—Several florists of this city—the Patterson Sisters, Bushnell & Bushnell, F. J. Martin, Charles Kingwell, R. Rae and H. A. Newton—have united in opening a large flower store, or market, for their common use.

Pasadena, Cal.—D. W. Coolidge, of Coolidge's Fernery and Rare Plant Nursery, placed some splendid stock on exhibition at the fall show, held in the Maryland hotel. His display included, among other items, 120 varieties of ferns, twenty varieties of bamboo, and an interesting assortment of rare fruit shrubs and trees. Other exhibits also were good, and Otto Heutchey, president of the Pasadena Gardeners' Association, pronounced the entire show the best ever held here.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

The threatened rain did not materialize and instead the weather has turned rather frosty. If this continues with any degree of severity we may expect a lessened supply of hardy stock. Already gladioli, dahlias, coreopsis, gaillardias, sweet peas and almost everything that is grown outside, except narcissi and violets, are practically out of season. With the violets the weather has been playing havoc for the last week and the retailers have been having some trouble to get enough to fill orders, but these conditions will be changed suddenly when we are treated to a few more showers. The great football match between the Universities of California and Stanford on November 12 made a great inroad into the available supply of yellow and red chrysanthemums and from all accounts the trade was well divided among all the retailers of the bay cities. The success of the California team made an extra call for the yellow sorts and everyone was about sold out by nightfall. With other kinds of stock there is nothing worth mentioning, except to note that there is a tendency to a slight advance all along the line. This is made possible by the fact, already noted, that flowers are daily becoming scarcer and we are nearing Thanksgiving as well. Advices from the south say that the poinsettia crop is larger this year than ever before and if some unforeseen event does not happen the local men can have all the outside stock they want.

Various Notes.

The California State Floral Society held its regular monthly meeting November 11 at 240 Golden Gate avenue. A committee was appointed to prepare for the spring flower show and the report

The surest method of rooting Ficus elastica is that of mossing the tops. This consists of making a slanting cut with a sharp knife about halfway through the shoot, the cut being made about three leaves from the top, and then tying a lump of moss the size of an egg around the cut. If this operation is done in the spring and the moss is always kept wet, the roots are likely to appear through the moss in three or four weeks, provided the plant is kept in a warm greenhouse. The top may then be cut off and potted, keeping the young plant shaded and moist until it becomes established. W. H. T.

RHODODENDRONS IN ILLINOIS.

Please tell me whether rhododendrons can be successfully grown in central Illinois. If so, what varieties and what sizes should be planted? When is the best time for planting, and how should they be planted? Would southern-grown stock be satisfactory? I have a customer who wishes to plant some on his fine old place, if good results can be obtained. L. M. D.

Rhododendrons cannot be grown with real success in Illinois. The climate and soil both are against them. They can be kept alive by shading in the summer and removing to a cool house for the winter, but they do not form flower buds, and altogether are unsatisfactory.

A. M. Augustine.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Last week everybody reported an increased business and, with the scarcity of stock, prices were a little higher. Carnations are scarce at the present time, but mums and other stock fill in so that the demand for these is not so great. Narcissi are again on the market and sell well. Mums are much earlier this season and there is a shortage of the medium grade stock for Thanksgiving. Pot mums have sold well this year, as have the pompons.

Various Notes.

Buffalo has added another store in one of the rapidly growing business centers. This store was opened November 15 by John Cramer, who has been connected with this trade for many years.

Mr. Wise, now foreman for the William F. Kasting Co., at Erie, Pa., was a visitor last week.

The Florists' Bowling Club has called a meeting for this week at Meyer's alleys, where the bowling was held last year. This affair proved successful last year and gave the boys the one chance of getting together for a good time. The alleys are large enough to take care of a good crowd and no one need stay away for fear of cramped quarters. Joe Streit and Louis Neubeck will be on hand to take care of the boys and everybody will be sure of a good time.

Mr. Good, of Good & Halliday, has severed his connection with the firm.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—Charles Milburn, formerly gardener at the Clifton House, has gone to Falls Church, Va., to become gardener and florist at Hill Crest Farm, the property of A. M. Lothrop.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We have been having extremely dark weather and it has cut down the quantity of both roses and carnations, which, in spite of the queen of autumn holding sway, caused a panic in carnations, prices going up in the sky, and few flowers to do business with. The shortage is specially to be regretted, coming, as it does, right at Thanksgiving. Roses, while in good demand, are more plentiful. Chrysanthemums are pretty well cut out, but there may be enough to tide over the week.

Most bulbs are planted, and, if the quantity of lilies potted up is any criterion, there will be a heavy crop for Easter.

Violets are extremely scarce and in active demand. American Beauties are on the scarce list, while other varieties are plentiful. G. F. C.

TOLEDO, O.

Various Notes.

The busiest woman in Toledo this week is Miss Winters, at Bayer's greenhouses. She has her hands pretty full with cutting and shipping the best mums grown in the city. It surely is a real treat to see Mr. Bayer's houses—row upon row of Bonnaffons, also some late Chadwicks and pink and white Fricks and Convention Hall, and, in addition, a nice lot of pompons. He expects to have chrysanthemums for all of two weeks yet.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club it was decided that there be another exhibition, again in S. N. Peck's store, December 6. Prizes will be offered for the following: $3 for the best cyclamen exhibited by the grower, $1 for the second best; $3 for the best Chinese primrose, $1 for the second; $3 for the best begonia, Lorraine type, $1 for the second; $1 for the best cineraria in Toledo-made pot.

A novel Thanksgiving day display was in the window of Max Spanner, who had a large cornucopia, made on a frame and covered with yellow pleated paper, filled with yellow pompons with streamers of plumosus. The ceiling and walls of the window were entirely covered with birch branches. The display, as a whole, was very effective.

By this time the rush is over, and we sincerely hope that each and all the florists had a good holiday business, and truly had something to be thankful for.

BRIGHT SPOT (Zweifel). A grand new deep pink carnation. One that is sure to fill the want in the dark shade of pink that we all want. Won high honors wherever shown. Easy to root and handle in every way. $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

UTICA, N. Y.

The Utica Florists' Club held its annual show in Genesee hall on the evening of November 10, and the exhibits were creditable both in quantity and quality. The club holds an annual banquet and show in February, to which invitations to friends of the members are issued and at which there is usually a speech by some expert florist from outside the city. The show at this season of the year, however, is for members solely. An orchestra furnished music, and, in addition to enjoying this and inspecting the display of flowers, the members partook of a lunch, which J. C. Spencer and Dr. W. A. Rowlands dispensed in a generous way.

Several vases of roses, displayed by Brant Bros., of this city, attracted special attention. The collection included Killarney, My Maryland and Bride roses, all in a fine state of development. The same concern showed many specimens of chrysanthemums and carnations and had, as a whole, the largest exhibit in the room.

L. F. Goodwin, of Clark Mills, displayed carnations and ferns; C. F. Seitzer, chrysanthemums; R. Kilbourn, of Clinton, chrysanthemums and smilax; W. K. Dobler, carnations, and J. J. Williams, florists' supplies and designs.

An interesting display of prize chrysanthemums was made by A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., red, yellow and white varieties being included. The flowers were remarkably large, well formed and richly colored.

A HOUSE OF ARAUCARIAS. WE HAVE THEM IN ALL SIZES.

AZALEA INDICA.

Now is the time to force Azalea Indica for Christmas. What varieties will you force? Surely the ones, the early varieties, that I know I can get in in time for Xmas. There is Deutsche Perle, one of the best early double whites. We have plants full of buds, at 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Simon Mardner, you know this variety well. It is an early, deep, double pink variety, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeneana, one of the old standard, well-favored, large, double, variegated varieties, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2 00. How about Apollo? This is a deep, single red variety, always full of buds, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Didn't you ever hear of that earliest of all varieties, Mme. Petrick? This is a variety hard to beat, pink, double flowers, full of buds and never fails to bloom. A child can bring this variety into bloom for Christmas. It is very scarce and high in price this fall in Belgium. You must have a few of them anyhow, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Easter Varieties. For Easter forcing we have only the well known standard American varieties, such as Mme. Van der Cruyssen, pink (very scarce this fall in Belgium), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Niobe, double white. We have a large stock of this, but mostly in large sizes, $1.00, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00; some, but a limited quantity, at 50c, 60c to 75c. Deutsche Perle, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Helene Theleman, light pink, $1.00, $1.25. $1.50 to $2.00. President Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Schryveriana and Empress of India, large, double, variegated, 50c, 75c, $1.00. $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Professeur Wolters, 70c, $1.00 to $1.50. Simon Mardner, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Vervaeneana and Apollo, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00; dozen or 100 at same prices.

Remember! Small azaleas are scarce this year in Belgium, therefore I had to buy mostly large sizes.

Dracaena Bruanti, 25 to 30 inches high, perfect green foliage from bottom up, 6-in. pots, 40c to 50c.

Latania Borbonica, 30 to 35 inches high, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Araucaria Excelsa, raised from top cuttings only (no seedlings), 2, 3, 4 to 5-year-old, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 15, 18, 20, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, 6-in. pots, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4, 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 and 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50; 4-in., 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 4-in., 25c.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 3 plants in 6 and 7-in. pots, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. This is a special bargain, seldom offered.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3-in. pots, 15c, 18c and 20c.

Ficus Elastica, rubber plant, 5-in. pots, 25c; 6-in., nicely staked up, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, 40c, 50c to 75c.

Pteris Wilsoni, 6-in. pans, nice and bushy, 25c, 30c and 35c.

Asparagus Plumosus, 2½-in., 3c; 3-in., 5c.

Our Ferns are very fine this year and I can give very good value to make room for my large importation of Azaleas. Boston, Scottii, Whitmani and Scholzeli, 5½ and 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in., large, bushy plants, 75c to $1.00. Special to close out—Scottii and Whitmani, 4-in., 20c: fine to grow on. Our ferns are all pot grown—not lifted from benches.

Ferns for dishes, big assortment, 2½-in. pots, $4.00 per 100.

Nephrolepis Todeaoides (London fern), 2½-in., 5c; 3-in., 7c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown, 6-in., 25c, 35c to 40c; 7-in., 50c. Only pot-grown, will force successfully for Easter.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This is another of our specialties. We have a secret in growing them to perfection, only known to us, giving them a rich, deep color; stand shipping well, traveling 2000 to 3000 miles without the least bit of injury if properly handled. We have a big house full in No. 1 condition, 6 to 7-in. sizes, in bud and partly in bloom, ready for immediate sale or for the holidays. Everybody knows that last Christmas we had the best Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in the market. They were cracker-jacks, indeed! We have the deep pink and the light pink (Lonsdale) varieties, 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00; 7-in. pots, $1.25 to $1.50. 3-in. pots, if transplanted soon, will make good 4-in. pots for Xmas. If you have room order now, because they are always scarce at Xmas.

Greenhouse Heating.

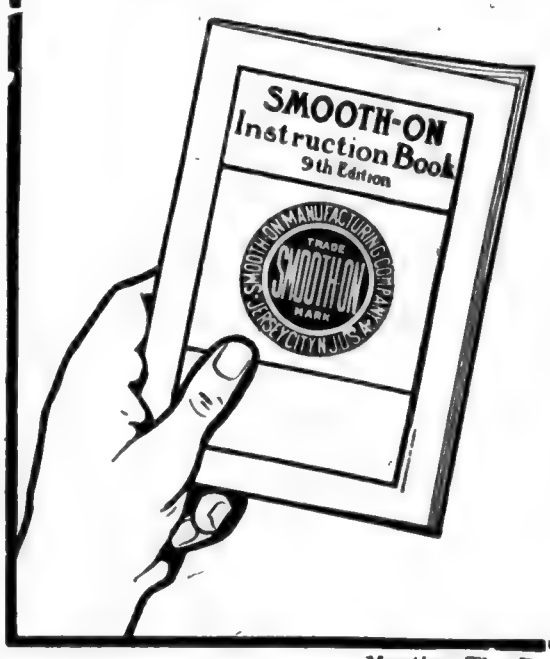
A 300-FOOT HOUSE.

Please tell me whether the following system of gravity, return steam heating would be satisfactory in a house 300 feet long: The bottom of the runs will be six feet above the water line of the boiler and the runs will rise an additional seven feet in the 300 feet. The main steam leader, of ample size, will extend across the end of the house and return back to the boiler, entering above the water line. The runs, single lines of 1¼-inch or 1½-inch pipe, will be tapped into the upper side of the return and extend the full length of the house, with an air valve at the extreme end. Angle valves will be used at the bottom of the runs, so as not to obstruct the circulation of steam and water.

This is an adaptation of the ordinary house system of steam heating, but we do not know whether single connection runs will drain properly without using larger pipe than 1½-inch. S. B.

There should be no trouble about using a system such as is described, provided 1½-inch pipe is used, but it would be better to use the lower pipe in each coil as a return, running the coils downhill.

PIPING IN OHIO.



I have two houses which I wish to heat with steam. They are on a hillside and run north and south. They measure four feet to the gutters and nine feet to the ridge. The west slope is nine feet; the east slope, fourteen feet. The south gables are glass and there is a potting shed at the north. There is no glass in the side walls. There are three raised benches in each house, arranged as follows: A 4-foot bench on each side and an 8-foot bench in the center, with a 2-foot walk between.

What would be the best way to pipe them for 60 degrees in zero weather? The two houses are connected, with no partition between them. I should like to install a boiler that would take care of four houses like the two described. What size of boiler would you advise putting in? W. F. M.

The data required are clearly given, except that the length of the houses is not stated. This is desirable for the proper adjustment of the flow and return pipes, and is absolutely essential for computing the size of boiler required. Supposing that the houses

Save Your Stock From Destruction

By a sudden cold snap or a rapid thaw

HOW? Because it is an accurate, fully tested thermometer, showing the correct temperature at all times, and combines a device which will ring a bell at your bedside when the greenhouse gets either too hot or too cold. Just the protection you have wanted all these years.

We guarantee that results will be obtained at all times. This device has been subjected to the severest tests in our laboratory for over two years, and at the same time has given entire satisfaction, under all conditions, to many users in the trade.

All you have to do is to set the pointers at the highest and lowest temperatures you want and the thermometer will do the rest. It will ring a good, loud bell when either point is reached, and saves all worry over trouble from sudden temperature changes.

are 100 feet in length, one 2-inch flow pipe and eight 1¼-inch returns will be needed. For houses 100 to 200 feet in length, use a 2½-inch flow pipe.

For four houses 100 feet long and of the width stated, the boiler should have a rating of twenty-five horse-power, with an increase of five horse-power for each twenty-five feet of additional length of the houses.

A WEST VIRGINIA HOUSE.

I have just erected a greenhouse, 28x 101 feet, and twelve feet high to the ridge. It is joined to another house on the north side and has three feet of glass in the south side. One end is glass; the other end is joined to the boiler house. The boiler is in a pit. The house is piped with a downhill system, for low pressure steam, using two runs of 2-inch pipe overhead, six runs of 1-inch pipe on the south wall, under the gutter, and five runs of 1-inch pipe on the north wall. The 1-inch pipe was used because I had it on hand.

How many air valves will be needed in this house and where should they be located? What temperature will this system of piping carry in zero weather? I have arrangements so that I can easily add as many more pipes as would be needed; I can add nine more if necessary. Is this system all right?

Please tell me the rating of my boiler in horse-power. It is a fire-box style or locomotive type of boiler and is twenty-one feet long, six feet high at the fire-box and four feet in diameter at the smokestack, with water under the ash-pan. It contains fifty-seven 3-inch flues, sixteen feet long. The fire-box is four feet long, three feet wide and three feet high. A. T. V.

Only one valve is required for each coil, provided the pipes are connected by headers at the lower end, and these valves should be in the side of the headers, about one-third of the way down from the top. The amount of radiation described is sufficient to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees. For 60 degrees add three or four more pipes.

The boiler described would be about eighty horse-power.

The Market.

Trade has been excellent during the last week and there is still a good supply of flowers to draw from. Mums are still the whole show, though the supply is shortening up a little. Carnations of fine quality are now to be seen, and they retail as yet at 50 cents per dozen. Mums sell at $1.50 to $3 per dozen. The latter price, however, is for something special, the average prices being $2 and $2.50 per dozen.

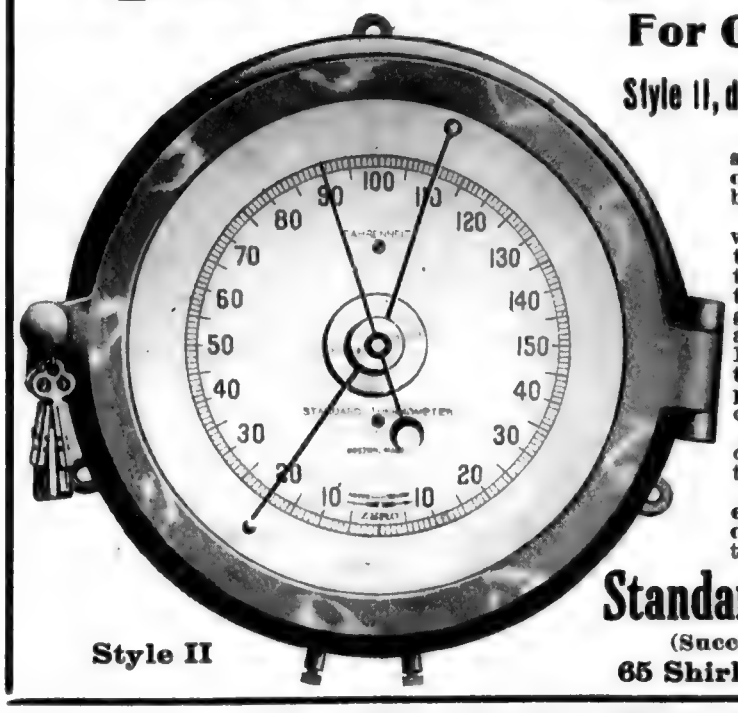
Roses bring $1.25 and $1.50 per dozen, retail. Violets now sell at $1 per hundred blooms, and sweet peas also at $1 per hundred. Some nice snapdragons are retailed at 75 cents per dozen, both white and pink, these colors selling the best. Candytuft and alyssum help out a good deal in funeral work. Small table ferns sell well; also nicely grown Boston and Whitmani ferns.

Various Notes.

During these days of the autumn flower, the mum, some nice window decorations are to be seen, a fine effect being produced with these and autumn leaves in their various beautiful shades.

R. H. Woodhouse reports business as fine. He is cutting lots of elegant carnations and some of his mums are a treat to look at. Last week he shipped two retail orders of fifty mums each to Boston parties at a fancy price. He will be "right there" with them for Thanksgiving. Of short white mums he is still cutting big quantities.

Manuel B. Sylvia was a visitor last week in Boston, attending the auction sale of nursery stock at N. F. McCarthy's. Nursery stock is in good demand at Mr. Sylvia's.



A. B. Hathaway is still cutting some nice sweet peas. He will force a lot of bulbs this winter. W. L.

The Market.

Business has been excellent lately and all of the florists have had their share. Mums have sold unusually well, probably because the quality has been above the average, and the price about $3 per dozen. Roses and carnations sell as fast as they are cut.

The weather is ideal for growing, cold, frosty mornings and nice sunshiny days, for which everyone is thankful.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. has been quite busy for several weeks, almost having to work night and day to keep up with its orders. They have been cutting lots of stock, still they have to buy a considerable quantity. A visit to the greenhouses found the roses growing nicely, some strong, healthy stems coming, which show the right treatment by Mr. Wallace, who has charge. The Beauties look good and the flowers being cut are on long stems and have that good Beauty color. The houses planted to smilax and other greens are in fine shape. Large lots of poinsettias and cylamens will be ready for Christmas. Thanksgiving will about finish the mums. The call for them being heavy, they are cut before developed, but a few Chadwick of immense size were seen. The carnations are in fine condition, especially the houses of Enchantress. White Perfection will be discarded this season and White Enchantress grown instead.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are kept busy right along. Of the 8,000 mums grown this year none are being wasted. The flowers are fine, it being hard to find any inferior ones at all. The growth of their business is evident when it is noted that only four or five years ago the sale of flowers from a few hundred plants dragged, and now they sell thousands. The roses and carnations are looking fine. They have been cutting quite heavily of Killarney.

J. C. Elsperman has been ill, being confined to his bed. Business has been good with him.

Ben Kramer has been busy, but found time to go hunting one day recently.

Business at the Zeidler Floral Co. has been good. Karl Zeidler and his son left last week with a party on a hunting trip in Mississippi. Mr. Zeidler goes as steward and few are his equal.

Nellie Goodge says business is improving.

Royston & Fenton have not enough roses to supply the demand.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Trade during the last two weeks has been good; probably the florists are reaping some of the harvest that ought to be theirs after the flower show. While this was not in any sense a commercial venture nor an advertising proposition, there is bound to be some benefit derived by those firms that made such a magnificent showing of plants and cut flowers.

Prices are generally a little higher than last year. In roses the most noticeable advance is on American Beauties; in 1909 these sold at $40 a hundred for specials, but the 1910 quotation is $40 to $50 for specials, $35 to $40 for fancy, $25 to $30 for extras. Radiance is quoted at $10 to $12. Chrysanthemums are also higher than in 1909. Whites, yellows and pinks are listed at $20, while a year ago the prices ranged from $15 to $18 for specials. Specimen blooms are held as high as $35 per hundred. The quotations on carnations are the same as last year, ranging from $2 to $4.

Lilies, violets and orchids vary only slightly from former prices. Rates on greens and foliage are in most cases identical with those of 1909.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association, Monday evening, November 14, was full of interest for the members, and the reports from the flower show were presented at that time. Everyone was interested in the report of the finance committee. This showed that the average daily attendance was above 6,000; that in spite of the heavy expenses connected with the show the receipts left a substantial balance above the expenditures.

A vote of thanks was tendered to all who had contributed to the success of the show, mentioning in particular Mrs. F. F. Thompson, Mrs. W. S. Kimball, W. D. Ellwanger, George Eastman, Hiram W. Sibley and the city park commission. The officials of the exhibition were also commended for the manner in which their work was performed.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

ADVERTISING A RETAIL STORE.

Builds Business Quickly.

It was Emerson, a Bostonian, and most famous of American philosophers, who once remarked: "Let a man write a better book or build a better mouse trap and, though he rear his domicile in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."

Perhaps, but Emerson himself had passed on to other worlds before the people of this mundane sphere had time to give him his full rewards, and it was not until the modern advertising men began to read his books that people really came to hear about him.

Another Bostonian, H. S. Rogers, of Penn's flower store, voices the modern philosophy when he says: "Few things will sell themselves nowadays; they've got to be pushed into public view." That's why the man who builds a better "mouse trap" usually has his store on Main street and fees the printer regularly.

Must Be Backed by Good Methods.

"Good advertising is a good thing," continues Mr. Rogers. "We have made a careful study of the results obtained and find that we get what we go after—sales. We are well satisfied that advertising has been a large factor in establishing our business and developing it to its present proportions, not forgetting that good advertising, unless backed up by a good store, good stock and good salesmanship, expends most of its power for naught."

You can't expect the ad to shoulder all your responsibilities.

"After we had been advertising occasionally in one of the leading Boston daily papers, we decided to start a series of ads that would bring our stock and our store conspicuously before the best classes in New England. We therefore selected the paper that had the largest circulation and contracted to take a good sized space daily for quite a period, entering into the proposition faced by all the doubts of success that precedent had inspired.

Concentrating the Effort.

"But we didn't go into it blindly; we considered all the available papers, basing our choice on circulation among the kind of people we wanted to reach. You always can pick the best advertising medium by noting the amount of advertising carried. The paper that prints the most advertising calculated to interest the same people you are after will always be the best advertising medium for you. That large volume of advertising is a summing up of experience paid for by men who want to get the most their money will buy.

"It seemed to us, and events have proved that we were right, that the one best paper was all that we needed to use. Of course there are some possible customers we do not reach, but are they worth while doubling the expense? We think not, and doubling the expense wouldn't reach every possible buyer; it would be necessary to use all the papers to do that—so we let it go at the one with the biggest circulation. When the solicitors for the others call we tell them frankly how we stand: We are using one paper, daily and Sunday.

"And we never use the same ad twice.

"Doubtless any advertisement is better than none, but the right copy is one important part of securing results. Retail florists of the better class once felt, and some may yet feel, that they sacrificed prestige when they went into the newspapers. It needn't be so. Advertising may be effective and yet be dignified. It will create prestige, not destroy it. Almost always, advertising, if written by the advertiser, will reflect the advertiser's personality, just as his store does. If prepared outside, care should be taken that the advertisement be in harmony with the character of the store. We are strong believers in the use of illustrations; every ad carries a cut and the name appears in the form of a trade-mark that also appears on boxes, tags and stationery.

Covering the Seasons.

"When we started our everyday series of ads we laid out a plan of daily changes of copy to cover practically all features of the stock and services of a flower store. As the principal feature of our advertising we selected the Penn shower bouquet. Having taken first prize for this particular style of bouquet at the two preceding Boston flower shows, in competition with some of the best florists in New England, we thought the publicity already received would make a good basis for advertising wedding flowers. The copy was written to exploit the flowers, the facilities and the service and we soon noticed a tremendous increase in this particular line of work.

"About a week before Memorial day we started a series of ads calling attention to wreaths for cemetery use. The advertisements were distinct and the results were equally clear-cut and readily traceable. It is worth while recording that out of 840 wreaths made up in anticipation of the demand, only five remained unsold at closing time on Memorial day.

"During the month of June we dealt again with the shower bouquet, occasionally changing to commencement bouquets and flowers for graduations.

"The entire year was covered in this manner, always featuring some seasonable specialty. Before Thanksgiving

To Start the Violet Season.

Wedding March and Shower Bouquet.

Examples of the Dignified and Effective Newspaper Advertisements of a Boston Retailer.

we ran a series of ads on table decorations for turkey day. The particular goods we sold the most of that day were the ones we advertised and we can therefore positively state that the ads greatly increased our sales for Thanksgiving.

Two Other Instances.

"In the autumn a series of advertisements on violets is used, the copy and cuts changed daily, and after the first season of this our violet business increased 200 per cent over the previous season.

"Just a hint for Christmas: Last December we devoted considerable attention to Christmas plant arrangements. We did not advertise anything but choice stock and we tried to make our copy interesting for the prospective purchaser by talking about where the plants came from, as azaleas from Belgium, heather from Scotland, etc. That the advertising was effective was shown by the comments of customers in the store, who said they never before had known the source of these advertised plants, had not supposed they were imported.

Keeping Everlastingly At It.

"Not only has our business increased steadily and considerably since we began newspaper advertising, but we noticed an increase in the orders received from a distance. Letters are received daily from all parts of New England, many of them ordering the shipment or local Boston delivery of advertised articles and many asking prices on other articles. We have had a great deal of business from towns that could have only been reached by newspaper and some of the orders have been first class wedding decorations.

"We believe advertising affords the best method there is of winning customers. We think our experience proves that the best results are to be had from newspapers, and from their regular use; we do not believe in spasmodic advertising—in that case each ad is like starting all over again, and the cumulative value of advertising is one of its most important benefits; as one well-known advertiser says: 'Keeping everlastingly at it brings success.'"

THE VANDAL.

How many times have you been met with the suspicious caution not to deface walls and woodwork in putting up your decorations! And just as many times you have been vexed at somebody who has done work at the same home before and who has showed his inability to make his mark of the right kind. If you are a careful person, this is the hardest of all criticisms to accept without a ripple of ill-temper, while you assure the complainer that you never put tacks and nails in a wall or in the face of woodwork, and that you use large sprays and long garlands which can be fastened to invisible places, and wires to secure their extremities to natural projections.

This is a hackneyed subject, but it seems to be necessary to lecture on it "in season and out of season." Nearly all of this defacing is done to save a few extra ladder trips and some planning, but it has reacted against decorations of any kind in many handsome buildings. It is to be hoped that no more thoughtlessness of this kind will occur.

A fastidious housekeeper once accused a florist of neglect when he omitted a clean mat of heavy tin foil under a mossed centerpiece and stained a fine lace centerpiece with rust from the frame. "Nuf sed" on this subject.

USE OF WILD FLOWERS.

Some florists imagine that they must discourage the use of outdoor and wild flowers and foliage in decorative work, or the sale of professionally grown stock will be injured. And in the early fall, for instance, we really can see many weddings and receptions gorgeously decorated with goldenrod, wild asters and autumn foliage, with no expense to the entertainers except the time spent in gathering and bringing them in.

Of course, it is disappointing to an ambitious person to miss these sales, but let him not subject himself to the criticism which has been heard along this line; namely, that the professional florist is not alive to the beauty and adaptability of the native flowers and foliage and even decries their use as being cheap and common. But let him show that he can use them in a better way than the amateur and then he can profit by handling them, although not, perhaps, to quite the usual per cent. and the hostess suggests using some of her garden flowers with the greenhouse stock which she has bought from you, do your best to use them with your own or find a better place for them. Suggest the best way to cut and store them. If there is a large amount of them, charge for your time in arranging them, taking the same pains with them as with the rarest of greenhouse products, all the while making it evident, by the quality of your work and by tactful suggestions, that your work and time are worth money, and not a trifling amount, either.

A RETAILER'S EXHIBITION.

In a good many cities that do not have flower shows, leading retail florists find it good business to decorate the store and hold individual exhibitions once or twice a year. The accompanying illustrations serve to show what A. C. Sinram, of Denver, Colo., did in his Tremont street store last month. This was his second flower show and it was in every way a success.

The store was beautifully decorated with wild smilax, Asparagus plumosus, palms, ferns and blooming plants. Tiny varicolored incandescent lights were scattered among the foliage, and the effect was excellent. The concrete fountain in the center of the store, filled with goldfish, was one of the best attractions.

The windows were tastefully decorated, the most striking being one that represented a semi-tropical scene. Kentia palms formed the background, with araucarias and Ficus pandurata. Green sheet moss was used to carry out the woodland effect. Adiantum Croweanum, Asparagus plumosus and Rex begonias were placed at intervals, and cattleyas were apparently growing on the trees at each side, these in reality being the iron supports covered with cork bark, with southern moss overhanging. Paper White narcissi were growing in a pond, the water being supplied by a waterfall just above.

There were two table decorations each day. The illustration shows those on Saturday. One table had a centerpiece of Lorraine begonia and Paper White narcissus, with Killarney roses tied with pink chenille cords as favors. The other centerpiece was of violets, a wide violet-colored net ribbon forming a triangle, with a bow at each angle, in which was placed a candlestick.

Just back of this table, near the cashier's window, was a bride's bouquet of the style of twenty-five years ago, and one of today. The little, round, old-fashioned, formal bouquet, with its fancy paper holder, especially interested the older ladies, many of whom exclaimed: "Why, that is just like the one I had!"

There were different bouquets each day, bride's, bridesmaid's, and corsage, and baskets in variety. Some especially fine Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond roses were on exhibition in the window; also some fine Eaton and Golden Wedding mums, and several varieties of fine carnations.

The last night of the show, Saturday, an enormous crowd attended and Mr. Sinram says it was the best advertisement he could have had. Thousands were downtown that night to see the initial illumination of the new Gas and Electric building, the "best lighted building in the world." A constant stream of people poured in and out of the store for several hours, and it was necessary to insist on their keeping in motion to avoid a crush. An orchestra was rendering some beautiful music, and it was only natural that the visitors were anxious to stay and listen. Several out-of-town florists who were interested in Mr. Sinram's show arranged their affairs so that they could be there during that time.

COGGAN OF BATTLE CREEK.

S. W. Coggan, who recently succeeded to the business of Burt & Coggan, at the Michigan town the breakfast foods made famous, is a believer in the advertising value of the annual opening. While his firm was located in the Arcade openings were used with good results and now that a store of different type is occupied they appear to have even better effect. For his openings Mr. Coggan has been accustomed to advertise the gift of souvenirs and always has used something in the florist's line. One time he had everybody in town we ran a series of ads on table decorations for turkey day. The particular goods we sold the most of that day were the ones we advertised and we can therefore positively state that the ads greatly increased our sales for Thanksgiving.

Two Other Instances.

"In the autumn a series of advertisements on violets is used, the copy and cuts changed daily, and after the first season of this our violet business increased 200 per cent over the previous season.

"Just a hint for Christmas: Last December we devoted considerable attention to Christmas plant arrangements. We did not advertise anything but choice stock and we tried to make our copy interesting for the prospective purchaser by talking about where the plants came from, as azaleas from Belgium, heather from Scotland, etc. That the advertising was effective was shown by the comments of customers in the store, who said they never before had known the source of these advertised plants, had not supposed they were imported.

Keeping Everlastingly At It.

wearing a carnation with a neat tag that told where it came from, and this year he sent over 4,000 women down the street each carrying a chrysanthemum plant flowered in a small pot. The accompanying illustration shows Mr. Coggan's store, with the proprietor in the foreground.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Azaleas.

Quite a few azaleas appeared at Thanksgiving this year. It is true they were not heavily flowered, but they proved good sellers. Any plants not in season for Thanksgiving should be all right for Christmas. Those bright dwarf varieties, Hexe or Firefly and Mme. Petrick, have sold uncommonly well the last few years and are in active demand. It will be necessary to give azaleas a brisk, moist heat to send them along for the holidays. Rub off any young growths which may appear. As the flowers expand, move the plants to a slightly cooler and drier house.

Genistas.

While genistas are mostly seen in flower in spring and especially for Easter, they are useful earlier in the season, and if a batch is placed in a temperature of 50 degrees they will be in nice flower about the end of January. The present is a suitable time to put in a good batch of cuttings. A propagating bench which will root carnations or chrysanthemums is equally good for genistas. These cuttings, if kept potted along, will make nice, bushy stock in 6-inch pots before another winter.

Marguerites.

Marguerite plants are now making rapid growth, and as the pots are well filled with roots, they will take copious supplies of water and feeding twice a week. Where they are intended for Easter flowering they should be pinched to keep them shapely until the middle of December. When doing any repotting, use a tolerably rich compost, comprising two-thirds loam, one-third screened dry cow manure, some soot and fine bone. Ram the soil firmly in the pots. If, perchance, you lifted some old plants from the field and have been carrying them over in a cool house, they will now be blooming quite freely and will make nice, salable Christmas stock. When pinching out the tops of the marguerites, save some for propagating purposes. These late cuttings will make nice plants in 5-inch pots for late spring flowering and will prove quite salable for Memorial day trade.

If the leaf miner, which frequently badly disfigures marguerite foliage, makes its appearance, pick off and burn the affected leaves as soon as they show and spray the plants twice a week with a nicotine extract.

Pansies.

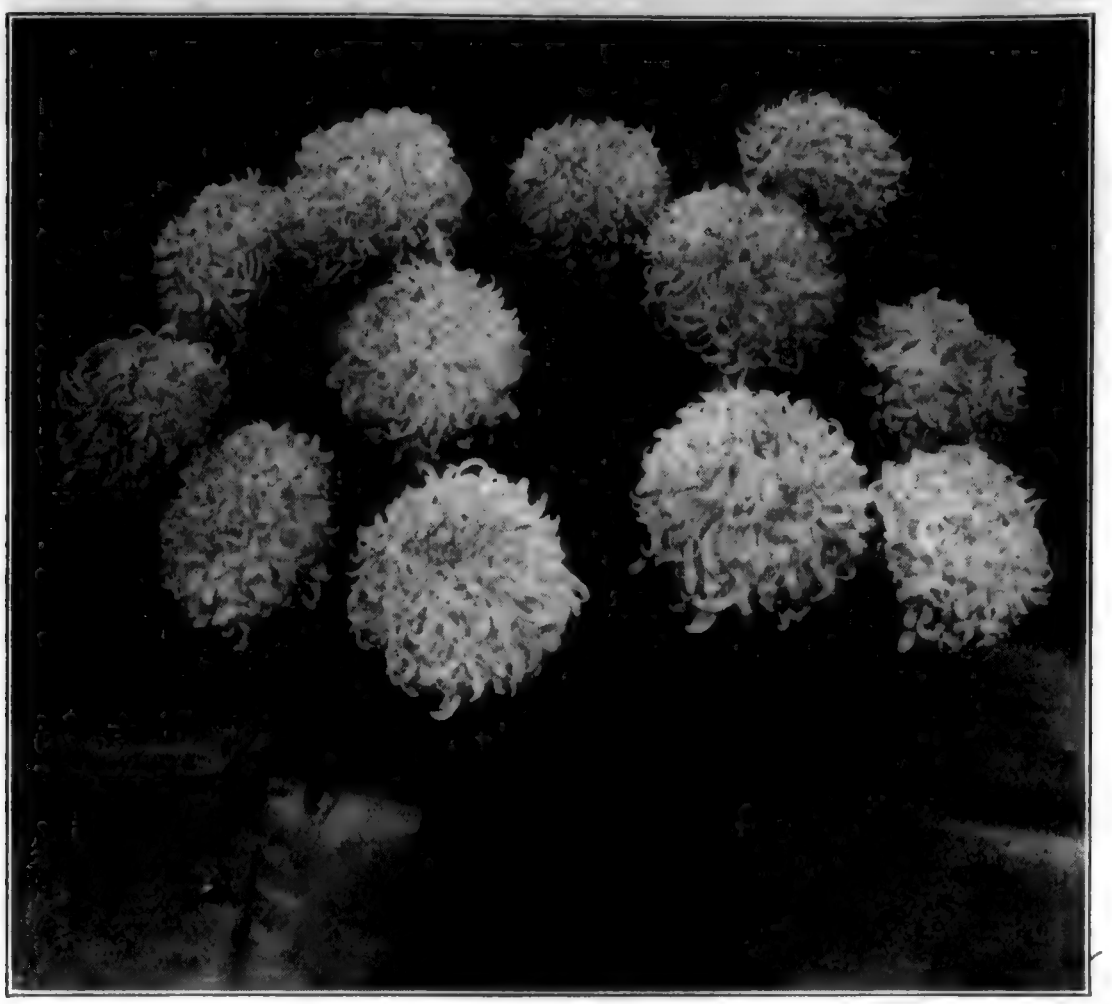
If there is any room in a cool house, where violets have perchance failed, fill up the bench space with pansies from the open ground or coldframes. They succeed well in a violet temperature, 40 to 42 degrees at night, and like a light but rich soil. Pansy flowers are always in good demand in winter and spring, while the plants themselves, with the passing of winter, always sell well.

With the arrival of cold weather, it is time to get some protection on the plants which are to be wintered outdoors. It is better to apply this covering while the ground is hard frozen. The mulch will help to keep the frost in, which is just what we need. Any protection applied must be light and may consist of forest leaves, pine needles, hay or straw, held in place by cornstalks or brush of some kind. Plants in coldframes should be given a coating of perfectly dry leaves, the sashes then being placed over them to keep these dry. Tilt up the sashes during mild spells through the winter, but always avoid getting any moisture on the leaves. When they get damp they weigh heavily on the plants and usually cause damping off. If kept perfectly dry, the plants should uncover as fresh and green as when the protection was applied.

Dutch Bulbs.

The earliest lot of tulips, such as Le Reine and Trumpet Major narcissi, are now nicely started and have been placed in heat. The tulips are given a dark frame for ten days to draw them up, with little bottom heat, but a strong top heat. The narcissi do not need keeping in the dark any length of time, as in a brisk heat they will make sufficiently long stems. While it is nice to be able to say that we had a few of these bulbs in season for Christmas and got 5 cents or 6 cents a flower for them at wholesale, it pays better to wait a couple of weeks longer and be content with lower prices.

Look over all the Dutch bulbs in flats or pans. They may look moist on the surface, but they will all be benefited by a soaking of water. This applies more especially to tulips, narcissi and hyacinths. If the bulbs are in the open —although a cellar is a far better place for them—it will now be necessary to furnish additional protection for them in the way of straw or hay to exclude frost. At best it is a disagreeable job digging out pans or flats in cold weather and the wonder is that so many growers still cling to a needlessly cumbersome and out-of-date method of culture.



The bulb beds will need a covering when once they are hard frozen. Do not apply it while the ground is soft. If you do, the bulbs will push their shoots up through the soft earth, and when you come to remove the mulching in spring you will break many of them, unless you use extreme care. A thick covering is uncalled for—merely sufficient to prevent the heaving of the bulbs, which results from alternate freezings and thawings during winter.

Lilium Speciosum.

The imported bulbs of Lilium speciosum will soon arrive from Japan, if they are not already here. Potted now and placed in a cold cellar or frame for some time, they can be placed in gentle heat after they have made two or three inches of growth, and for early summer blooming under glass they will be found invaluable. L. speciosum album is the most useful variety of the colored forms. Melpomene is good, while magnificum possesses extra vigor and throws grand spikes. When potting, nothing less than 7-inch pots should be used. It is better to place four to six bulbs in 8-inch or 9-inch pots than half the number in 6-inch pots. In boxes six inches deep they can also be grown splendidly.

Lilium auratum arrives with the speciosums. Its strong odor is somewhat against its use as a cut flower, but in pots for conservatory or piazza decoration it is hard to beat. It will usually bloom a little earlier than speciosum. Each of these lilies is suitable for planting in the open. They should be set nine inches deep and care must be taken to keep fresh manure from coming in contact with them. If any manure is to be applied, let it be as a mulch on the surface. This is the time, par excellence, to plant nearly all hardy lilies. If the work is delayed until spring, the bulbs will have frittered away much of their strength.

Herbaceous Borders.

All the hardy flower borders are benefited by a winter mulch of some kind. Where plants have not recently been divided and replanted, a good dressing of rotted manure will do a lot of good. In the case of newly planted stock, coarse strawy manure, meadow hay or leaves are all good. In the case of plants of doubtful hardiness, including Canterbury bells, digitalis, rockets, the choicer aquilegias, Anemone Japonica, Incarvillea Delavayi, rehmannias and kniphofias, a generous leaf covering is the best possible protection. Always spread the leaves on dry. If wet they lie heavily on the plants and are liable to cause decay. Of course, rain and snow will moisten these leaves, but they dry out nicely with the winter winds and always seem to rest lightly over the plants they are shielding.

MRS. SYME BEST WHITE.

Chrysanthemum Mrs. David Syme, according to Charles H. Totty, is unquestionably the finest white today. After having seen the variety in competition with the best flowers of other sorts at the autumn exhibitions, Mr. Totty says Syme has unquestionably made its mark. Commenting on the photograph reproduced herewith, he says: "The picture gives but a faint idea of the beauty the vase of flowers presented; they were perfect in finish, with foliage right up to the flower, and with stems of ample strength to carry the flowers erect. This is a variety that cannot be scored down on any point. The ten flowers of Mrs. Syme which won the C. S. A. silver cup at the Morristown exhibition were, I think, the finest flowers I ever have seen staged, possessing every necessary point for quality and finish. I recommended this variety last year and am more than pleased that it has so nobly stood the test."

REMOVING TOPS OF PLANTS.

Is it best to cut off the tops of irises, phloxes, peonies and foxgloves on the approach of winter, and cover with new, strawy manure or some other material? C. T. G. C.

Yes, cut off the tops now and give a good winter mulch of strawy manure on all except the foxgloves. Over the latter a coating of dry leaves, just held in place by some brush or light boards, is better. Do not, however, cut any of the foliage away from the foxgloves. C. W.

SCALE ON PALMS.

Please give me a remedy for the flat, brownish scale found on arecas, kentias and other palms. R. C. K.

Try dipping in a solution of Sulpho-Tobacco soap, using the soap according to directions on the package. This soap is largely used by palm growers as a remedy for scale and, when carefully applied, seldom does any injury to the plants. W. H. T.

THE OLD MAN AMONG HIS PETS.

One of the most enthusiastic and successful chrysanthemum growers in the Old Bay state is James Nicol, of Quincy. Mr. Nicol, as his name would indicate, hails from the "Land of Cakes." Mums have for many years been great favorites with him. The illustration shows Mr. Nicol standing among his pets, the house being of his own erection. The plants are all grown in pots. As to the quality of the blooms produced, visitors to the Boston shows each year look for the fine vase of Mrs. Jerome Jones which this canny Scot stages. They are always one of the star features of the exhibitions and have captured first premiums for many years. While that grand variety, Mrs. Jerome Jones, is a special favorite of his, he grows other sorts equally well. There being no fall show in Boston this year, he carried a number of blooms to Worcester and his vase of Miss Miriam Hankey was the finest in the exhibition. Mr. Nicol is an active member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston. W. N. Craig.

GENERAL CARNATION CULTURE.

Kindly tell me what would be considered ideal conditions for growing carnations—the best time to take the cuttings, to put them in the field and to lift them in the fall, with some information about the soil in the houses, the type of house, etc. I am located in central Michigan. H. H. G.

Your query covers practically the whole calendar of carnation growing, and to answer it fully would require more space than The Review could well spare. Then, too, conditions vary so much in different localities, and markets are so different, that it is impossible for one to lay down exact rules for someone else to follow. What suggestions I shall give you will have to be modified to suit your conditions.

The ideal type of house would perhaps be about forty-six feet wide, running east and west, and with two-thirds of the glass on the south side of the ridge. Such a house would contain six beds and seven walks. Make it any length you want. Large houses are undoubtedly the best, if no division of temperature is needed. Place ventilators on each side of the ridge, and on the sides under the gutters or eaves. If more houses are to be added, then leave enough space between them so that the one will not shade the other when the sun is at the lowest point in December. Run a narrow corridor from the one to the other, to save going outside in cold weather. If possible, arrange to put the boiler house on the north side.

For our own growing we prefer cuttings which are put into the sand in January, so that they will come out of the cutting bed from February 15 to March 1. Cuttings which are potted up in early April will often make fine stock under favorable conditions. The earlier cuttings, however, can be depended on to make fine plants in almost any kind of season. We do not like December struck cuttings, because the young plants are too apt to become stunted before planting-out time. If they are shifted as they should be, they will reach 4-inch pots by May, and, except in rare cases, few growers care to spare that much space for their young carnation stock. The result is stunted plants.

The time of planting in the field will have to depend entirely on your locality and climate. Get them out as early as you can with safety, but do not run any chances of their being out in a heavy frost. A slight frost will not do them any serious damage if the plants were properly hardened off before being planted out. We usually get ours out during the first half of May.

We consider the last half of July and the first half of August the best time to house the plants. By that time the plants have grown to fair size and the more thrifty ones can be selected at a glance. During that time, too, there is usually less rain and the growth is less succulent, permitting the lifting of the plants with less wilting and loss of foliage than would be possible later. Occasionally we see a bench which took hold splendidly though planted in September, but the difference is generally evident when winter sets in. The plants are not so well established and the quality is lacking in the bloom.

There are few soils that will not grow at least fairly good stock. The point is to have it in a proper state of fertility and in good mechanical condition. By the latter I mean to have it in such condition that the roots of the plants will work through it freely, so as to get what plant food there is in it. It should appear mellow and should crumble readily. You will find that while the plants will take hold a little more quickly in a light, sandy soil, the blooms will be larger and of better texture if there is just a suspicion of clay in its composition. Handle a soil of this texture only when it is in the proper state of moisture, else it will become lumpy and unfit to use.

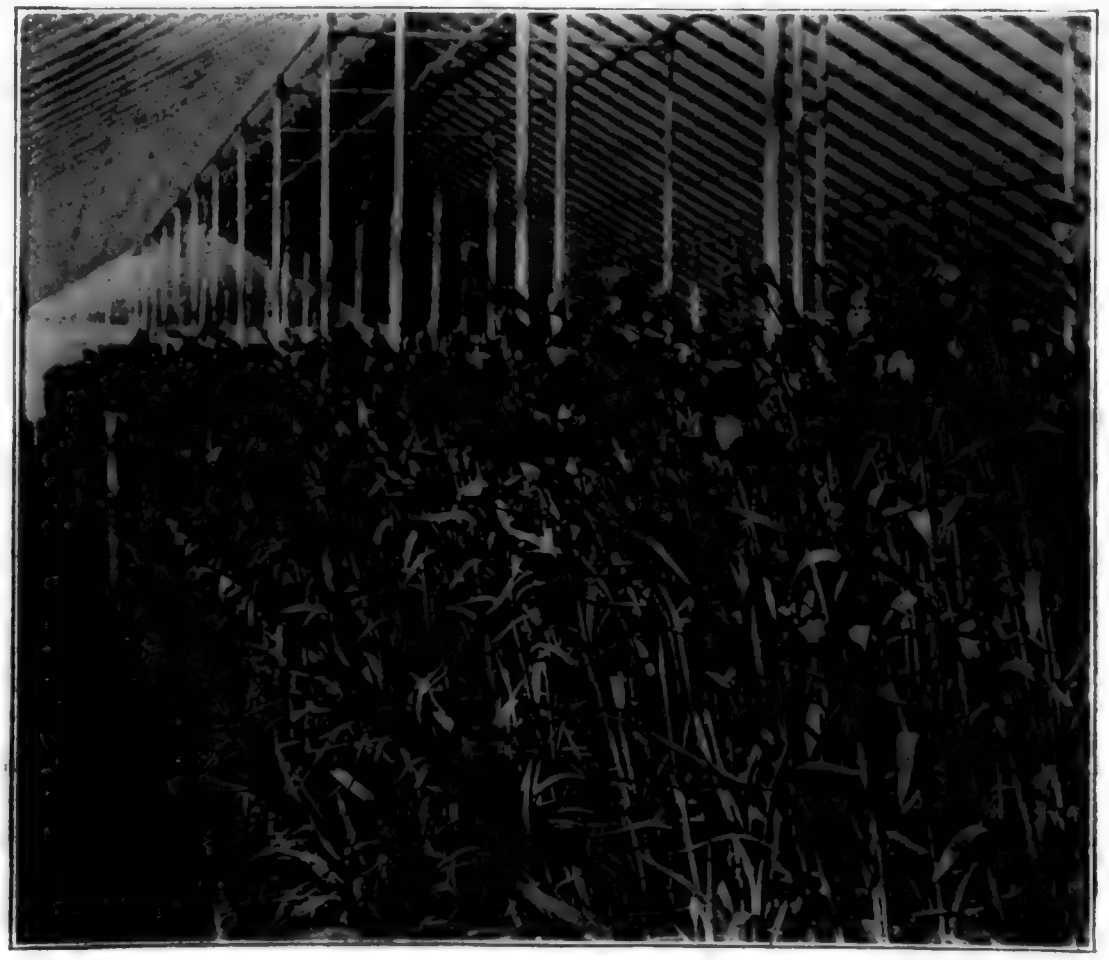
THE WARDS.

Those who have read the items in the Philadelphia news-letter referring to the high quality of blooms of Carnations Mrs. C. W. Ward and Alma Ward cut by Harry M. Weiss & Sons, Hatboro, Pa., and sold in the Philadelphia market steadily since the opening of the season at higher prices than have been paid for any other varieties, will be interested in the accompanying illustration, showing the bench of Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward from which Weiss & Sons have cut these fancy blooms. Weiss & Sons have one large house devoted to Mrs. C. W. Ward and Alma Ward and referring to them they say: "We think these are the best carnations on the market today, not only in regard to size of flower and length of stem, but as money makers. This is especially true of Mrs. C. W. Ward. We started to cut the Wards September 1 of this season and up to today (November 18) we have cut five blooms per plant of Mrs. Ward and four blooms per plant of Alma Ward. The plants at present carry from fifteen to twenty-five flowering shoots. We plan to plant 25,000 to 30,000 next year."

STIGMONOSE ON WINSORS.



I am enclosing a few leaves from my Winsor carnation plants. As you will see, the leaves have light streaks through them. Will you be kind enough to state the reason for this and the best remedy for it? What is the best night temperature for carnations, such as Winsor, the Enchantress varieties, White Perfection and Beacon?

C. S. L.

Your Winsors are affected with the disease called stigmonose, described on page 17 of The Review of November 24. Winsor has run its course with the majority of growers and I doubt seriously whether it would pay you to try to work the disease out of your stock. It would take several years to accomplish this, and by that time Winsor would likely be decidedly outclassed.

Winsor, like Lawson, likes a temperature of about 54 degrees. Beacon likes 52 degrees and so does White Perfection, while Enchantress seems to be best in quality at 50 degrees.

THE CRITICAL SEASON.

At this season of the year, with shortening days, sweet peas do not bloom freely, as we see them in spring, and we cannot secure the same length of stem as in March and April. A uniform minimum temperature of 50 degrees is suitable for them. There are no days so cold but some ventilation can be given. On bright days the thermometer can run up to 60 degrees before air is given, and with free ventilation a shade maximum of 70 degrees is all right. Great care is necessary to avoid a too dry or too moist atmosphere. An excess of fire heat and aridity will cause red spider to get a foothold, while opposite conditions, with irregular ventilation, will just as surely cause an attack of mildew.

Use great care in feeding at this season. It is safer to underfeed rather than the opposite. Avoid the use of forcing stimulants. Safer foods are cow or sheep manure, applied either in liquid form or as a top-dressing, which can be lightly forked in. Pull out any sickly plants, and, if you have sown the seeds in the drills, have courage to thin the seedlings severely if you want strong haulm and flower stems. It is yet a trifle early to start the Spencer sweet peas, but any time after the middle of December they may be sown for a spring crop.

SPOTS ON SWEET PEA LEAVES.

Will you kindly tell me whether there is any disease on the enclosed sweet pea leaves? If so, please state what it is, with the cause and the remedy.

C. G. P.

While the leaves may be affected with leaf-spot, it looks more like a case of sun scalding due to defective glass. If it is general in your house, however, the latter cannot be the cause. Maintain as uniform a night temperature as you can; 48 to 50 degrees are suitable minimum figures. Air freely. A heavy, moist atmosphere, with lack of ventilation, would have a tendency to cause leaf disease. The temperature during cloudy days should run about 58 degrees, but on sunny days it can run up 7 to 10 degrees higher. Keep the surface soil scratched over and do not play the hose on it until obliged to water the beds. C. W.

DISEASED SWEET PEA FOLIAGE.

What kind of a disease are my sweet peas affected with? I am sending you a sample vine and some flowers. All the lower leaves are healthy, but the upper leaves and the tips of some plants show the same appearance as the sample. The plants are now beginning to bloom nicely and I should like to know if the disease is a dangerous one and if there is a remedy for it. T. A. K.

The haulm of your sweet peas looks strong and healthy. It is no unusual thing for the foliage to appear like this on certain shoots. The real cause is hard to determine. If it were erratic temperatures, the trouble would be more general. More probably it is due to soil conditions. If your plants are in the ground, where they will not dry out so freely as in raised benches, be careful not to get the soil in anything approaching a stagnant condition. It is necessary that the drainage be good. Between waterings allow the surface to become moderately dry. With declining sunlight, great care is necessary in watering. Keep the surface soil loosened up and avoid feeding at this dull season, unless the soil is full of roots. Better postpone it until the middle or end of January; if your soil was well enriched, there should be no need to apply stimulants before that time. When you do feed, let it rather be in the form of a top-dressing of sheep manure or old cow manure than any chemicals. Lightly loosen the surface soil after applying the top-dressing, and before watering.

Keep the day temperature 56 to 60 degrees, with fire heat on dull days. Give ventilation a little at a time when the temperature is above 56 degrees. On sunny days the temperature can run up to 65 degrees, or even higher. Ventilate a little at a time and reduce the ventilation in like manner. Any rush of cold air, causing a draft, is harmful. The night temperature for plants flowering should be 48 to 50 degrees. Before reaching the flowering stage they may be grown somewhat cooler. C. W.

COCOS AND CALLA TREATMENT.

Please give the proper treatment of Cocos Weddelliana.

Also, should calla bulbs be put away in a dark, cool place to make roots, like other bulbs, or potted and kept in a warm, light situation? V. A. A.

Cocos Weddelliana requires a well-drained, open potting soil, a moist atmosphere, and a night temperature of 65 degrees. It should also be shaded from the sun during the greater part of the year, and watered carefully in order to keep the soil moist without its becoming sodden. Be careful not to break the roots when potting and do not give excessively large shifts; for example, shift from 2-inch to 3-inch pots, or from 3-inch to 4-inch, rather than shift two or three sizes at once.

Calla bulbs should be kept in the light after potting, to induce a short and stout growth. W. H. T.

BEST BEDDING GERANIUMS.

I would be pleased to have a list of the best geraniums for general growing for bedding and a description of each.

E. B.

A few of the best doubles are: General Grant, bright vermilion scarlet; La Favorite, double white; Comtesse de Harcourt, pure white; Beaute Poitevine, clear salmon pink, shading to bright salmon in center; Alphonse Ricard, rich vermilion scarlet; Jean Viaud, rose-pink, white throat, immense trusses; S. A. Nutt, deep scarlet, shaded maroon, a grand bedder, the most popular of all; Mme. Jaulin, peach pink, with white border; E. H. Trego, brilliant scarlet, velvety finish, large trusses; Mme. Landry, apricot salmon, turning to orange.

A few fine singles are: Jacquerie, rich crimson scarlet, one of the finest bedding geraniums in commerce; Paul Crampel, dazzling scarlet, a wonderfully profuse bloomer; Snowdrop, pure white; Richmond Beauty, scarlet crimson, white center; Dryden, soft crim-Rawson, rich scarlet, upper petals son, base of petals pure white; Mrs. E. shaded crimson; Granville, beautiful rose-pink, white blotches on base of upper petals. C. W.

WINTER GERANIUMS.

For Christmas sales geraniums are one of the best of flowering plants. Such varieties as Ricard and Nutt in doubles and Paul Crampel, The Sirdar, Jacquerie and Maxime Kovalevski in singles are ideal in color for the holidays and when rightly grown and properly flowered will outclass any pan of poinsettias in effectiveness. No more disbudding must now be done. Keep a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees and a dry atmosphere. Too much moisture in the air will soon cause petals to damp. Avoid using liquid barnyard manure. This promotes rank growth at the expense of flowers. You want the wood firm and hard to flower freely, and a top-dressing of a good concentrated chemical, like Clay's, once a week will be ample food for the plants. Geraniums do not want to be kept constantly moist at the roots. Let them become tolerably dry between the waterings.

VALLEY UNDER A BENCH.

What was the matter with my valley? I had it under a greenhouse bench, where the temperature was about 48 degrees at night and 68 degrees at noon. Carnations and sweet peas did well on the benches. The valley came on somewhat slowly, but in first-rate shape, with good, erect stalks of leaves, and the blooms then appeared—about three weeks after planting—but then, instead of developing, they apparently damped off. W. D. H.

The night temperature is too low for your valley. It requires a steady bottom heat of 85 to 90 degrees and a top heat of 58 to 60 degrees, to grow it successfully. You can hardly get anything approximating these conditions at this season in a carnation house.

You should have a case built over the heating pipes. Enclose these and, after boarding the bottom, lay five to six inches of sand in it. Plant your pips directly in the sand and water well until the flower stalks push. No water must be given after any of the flowers are opening, or they will decay. Perhaps your atmosphere has been too cool and damp for the valley, but more probably you have overwatered it in the later stages of growth. The plants, of course, must be darkened until they are well drawn up; then give more light gradually, in order to give substance to the flowers. The specialists have an advantage over small growers, as they are able to have a separate house, with ideal conditions in temperature of both sand and atmosphere. C. W.

WHAT IS THE VALUE?

As you are aware, the federal corporation tax law requires all corporations to make a report in January of the condition of their business at the close of the same, December 31 of each year. This is done for the purpose of taxation and requires an inventory to be taken as of date December 31.

The writer is somewhat at sea as to just how to proceed to take an inventory of the contents of a greenhouse on the last day of December. What is the inventory value of 1,000 Richmond rose bushes in the bench that day; of 1,000 Enchantress carnations in bench; of 1,000 violet plants in bench; of 1,000 Easter lilies in pots?

Our practice in the past has been to take an account of stock June 30, when, of course, houses are at their lowest point.

If not too much trouble, will you kindly advise along these lines? This same question may be agitating other readers of your paper, as all corporations are in the same fix that we are.
Hoskins Floral Co.

This doesn't seem so difficult. In most if not all of the states the farmer's growing crops are not assessed for taxation and in these states the florist generally is put on the same basis as the farmer, and in other states the assessment placed on the crops growing in greenhouse benches is so low as to be not worth contesting. The theory is that crops not yet developed to the point of marketability have no value. It seems fairly well established, therefore, that a florist will be justified in inventorying at the selling value of a given date, though if his patriotism leads him to wish to swell Uncle Sam's income he can write down something for what he hopes, with good culture, to be able to realize from the crop in the next six months.

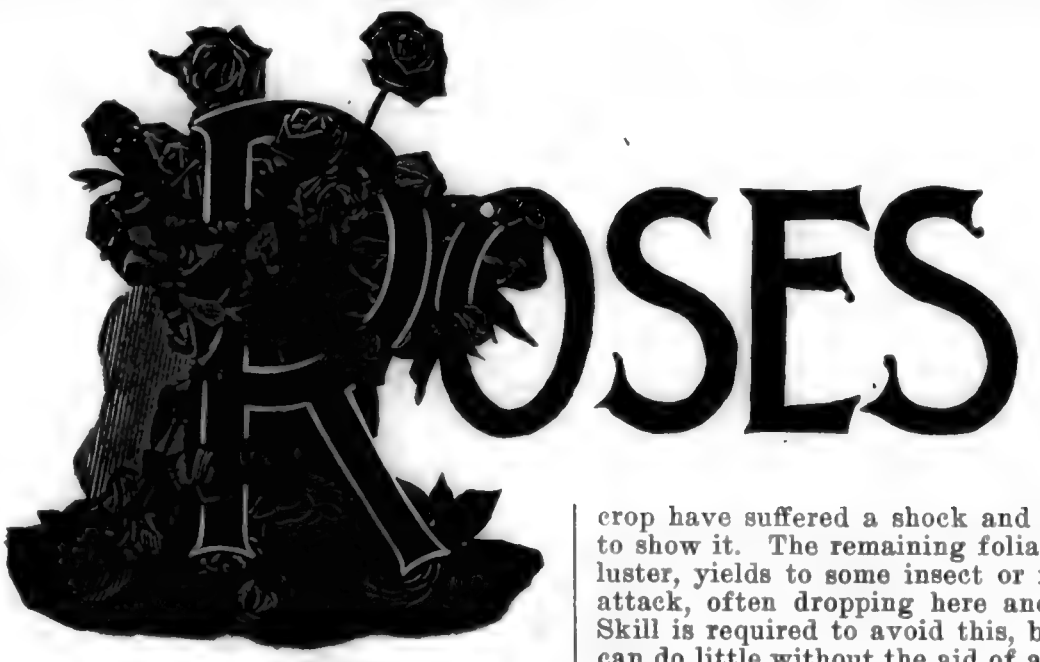
The Review will be glad to print the letter of any florist who has gone into this special feature of the subject of taxation

THE PARTING OF THE WAYS.

He was standing in the greenhouse, with his loose flannel shirt rolled at the sleeves, showing strong muscular development. The position of foreman had just been offered him. He was young, and the offer was a compliment in itself, brought about partly by circumstances and partly by his ability. He had ability, he knew that; he had learned the knack of making his work tell, a knack that many, many men never acquire. Without fuss he could accomplish things, accomplish them quickly and well. Plants prospered under his care; he had the faculty of telling when a plant was dry—a simple thing that many men can never tell.

He knew all this, knew that he could do all that was required of him and more. He liked the idea of power and of an increase in his salary, with further increase not far ahead, but he was fond of pleasure; he liked to be through at half past five in the afternoon; he liked baseball; he liked to go sporting.

He hesitated.



Was it worth the price? No; you can only be young once; better enjoy life while you can. The chance that never comes to many a young man was declined.

A few months later he had a row with the new foreman, a grievance, a flare-up, and the work of three years was thrown away. Phil.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Work of the Committees.

Exhibited by A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., variety Chadwick Supreme, a pink sport from W. H. Chadwick. At Cincinnati, color, 15; form, 10; fullness, 9; stem, 14; foliage, 13; substance, 13; size, 8; total, 82. HILDA AT HOME.

Hilda was looking fine. There was evidence on every one of the 5,000 plants of the cutting of a heavy crop; stems with that white look, evidence of a recent visit of a sharp knife, stood erect on all sides, while thickly scattered among them were other stems now dark at the cut, with the eyes breaking nicely just below. There were other shoots further advanced and a few nearing maturity.

Hilda was off crop, yet every plant was clothed with luxuriant green foliage right down to the base, foliage of such a rich green that it bore eloquent testimony to the care bestowed on culture. For, as every grower knows, the plants that have just yielded a heavy crop have suffered a shock and are apt to show it. The remaining foliage loses luster, yields to some insect or fungous attack, often dropping here and there. Skill is required to avoid this, but skill can do little without the aid of a rugged constitution. It is clear that Hilda has a splendid constitution. It is also clear that Myers & Samtman are giving Hilda the best of care. They have had splendid results from My Maryland and propose achieving even better results from Hilda, which they believe is a better rose, owing to its darker color. The plants are growing on tables in their next to last new range in the same temperature as the Beauties that fill the remainder of the house, a temperature that is now, Mr. Samtman said, 58 degrees at night. Phil.

DOUBLE KILLARNEY.

The only fault which has been found with Killarney is that it is too single. For this reason Robert Scott & Son, of Sharon Hill, Pa., and their selling agents, the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, think highly of the variety known as Double Pink Killarney, shown in the accompanying illustration. The lower flower shows quite well the character of the bloom. It is a sport which originated with Scott & Son. First it was a white sport from the pink variety, and then it sported back to pink, but the flowers had fully half again as many petals as Killarney, some flowers having as many as thirty-five. The color is a shade lighter than the original variety.

Rose Double Pink Killarney.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

By special call of Frank R. Pierson, chairman of the National Flower Show committee, a meeting was held Friday, November 25, in Horticultural hall, Boston, of the American Rose Society's schedule committee. President Elliott, acting under authority of the resolution passed at the Rochester meeting of the society, which accepted $1,730 offered by the National Flower Show committee and guaranteed payment of any premiums in excess of this amount which the committee of the Rose Society deem necessary, appointed F. R. Pierson, H. O. May, Eber Holmes, Adolph Farenwald, Benjamin Hammond, E. G. Hill, Alexander Montgomery, Robert Simpson and Wallace R. Pierson as a premium committee. Mr. Pierson said it was impossible for him to serve, and as Mr. Elliott could not remain, Wallace R. Pierson was suggested to act as chairman. The committee adjourned until November 26, at which time Mr. Pierson called the committee to order and stated that Vice-president Farenwald was present, and should preside. After some discussion it was moved that the sum of $1,500 be expended by the American Rose Society in premiums for the exhibition of 1911, this being in addition to the sum of $730 already listed for potted plants and includes the $1,000 allotted by the National Flower Show committee for cut flowers.

The schedule then adopted includes classes for fifty each Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Maryland, Jardine, Kaiserin, La Detroit, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Cardinal or Reid, Chatenay or Palmer, and any other disseminated variety. The premiums on Beauty are $50 and $30, with $30 and $20 for each of the other varieties. Classes for twenty-five blooms each are provided for Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Maryland, Bride, Maid, Gate or Uncle John, Sunrise or Sunset, Bon Silene and any other disseminated variety. The premiums for Beauty are $25 and $15, with $10 and $5 for the other varieties. Provision also was made for display to occupy not over 200 square feet and to contain not less than 200 blooms, for which premiums of $250, $150 and $100 are offered. Also for a retailers' class for best arranged 100 cut roses, $100 and $50. The sum allotted to plants in pots was distributed to cover about everything that the committee thought likely to be offered.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Everyone appears to have been well pleased with Thanksgiving trade. Rather contrary to expectations, everything cleaned up well and it is doubtful if Boston ever had a bigger or more generally satisfactory business for that holiday. November 23 was dark and gloomy, but, fortunately, without rain or snow. Thanksgiving day opened somewhat dubiously, but the sun broke through by 8:30 a. m. and the weather was clear and remarkably mild. As a rule, trade on Thanksgiving morning is of little account, many flowers having to be carried over, but this year everything was cleaned out in short order. Chrysanthemums were the flowers par excellence and immense numbers were disposed of. No fancy prices were realized. A few made $3 per dozen, but $1.50 to $2 was as much as good, average flowers sold for. White and yellow Bonnaffons, Nagoya, Chadwick, Maud Dean, Shrimpton, W. T. Brock, Jeanne Nonin and Jerome Jones were the leading varieties, more yellow Bonnaffons being sold than all others combined.

Roses were somewhat scarce and advanced in price. The top grade of Richmond, Rhea Reid, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Killarney made $3 per dozen; other grades from $3 per hundred upward. The continued cool weather makes a noticeable improvement in all roses. Beauties are exceptionally good. Carnations made from $2.50 to $4 per hundred; some fancies, $5. The bright-colored sorts, as usual, had the best call. Good Pink Delight, however, brought $5 in some cases. Violets were in short supply at $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Singles had the call over doubles. Less of the latter are grown each season here, few growers succeeding with them. Paper Whites and Romans made $3 per hundred. There was a fair supply of stevia, mignonette, snapdragon and marguerite.

Of lilies there was a good supply, but they were all sold out. Callas were few. Valley had a moderate sale. A good supply of cattleyas and other orchids was forthcoming. Green goods of all kinds sold extremely well. There was not a great plant sale, but more were disposed of than in previous years.

Business since Thanksgiving has been excellent. Supplies have been much reduced and everything is cleaning up well. It is many months since ice-chests contained so few left-overs. Both roses and carnations are holding up well in price. Chrysanthemums are less abundant and are nearing the end. Violets are scarce. Sweet peas are more plentiful and are steadily improving in quality. Among late chrysanthemums noted are Patty, a pleasing light pink; Jeanne Nonin, the finest of all late whites, which some growers claim they have considerable disease on, and Gold Mine. Cypripedium insigne is abundant and a moderate supply of cattleyas is still coming in.

Various Notes.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, are bringing in bunches of Iris alata, a dwarf variety from the western shores of the Mediterranean, which is considerably grown in Italy for export. The flowers are bright lilac purple, with a yellow throat. This variety is not hardy in New England. Other varieties, such as I. Vartani, a native of Nazareth, and I. Palæstina, a native of the mountains of Palestine, pale yellow in color, flower at this season in the open in England. I have sometimes wondered why commercial growers did not grow I. histrioides, a form of I. reticulata, which naturally blooms outdoors in March here each year, and would be a pleasing addition in the markets if brought along in a cold house where it would flower in midwinter. Such novelties as these are welcome in the market and there are always purchasers waiting for them.

The S. A. F. national spring show committee was in session at Horticultural hall November 26, and work on the cut flower schedule, which has been delayed too long, was pushed ahead. F. R. Pierson, W. R. Pierson, Robert Craig, A. Farenwald and others from a distance were present.

Herbert T. Capers, at 2 Park street, handled 1,250 dozen flowers of white and yellow Bonnaffon for the Halifax Gardens Co. The same firm has two houses, each 300 feet long, in sweet peas, from which they are picking a fine crop at present.

William H. Elliott had a fine Thanksgiving trade, both in roses and asparagus. His stock of Rhea Reid is a revelation to those who have been accustomed to decry this rose. Mrs. Aaron Ward is now fine also, as are Killarney, White Killarney and Safrano.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., showed flowers of a new pink sport of the Chadwick chrysanthemum before the local C. S. A. committee November 26.

Welch Bros. did a record-breaking Thanksgiving business. They sold an immense quantity of chrysanthemums, roses and carnations. Their roses were of especially fine quality. The call was mainly for medium-priced flowers, although quite a number of cattleyas, gardenias and other choice flowers were sold.

Jarvis P. Cartwright, of Needham, had 3,000 dozen yellow Bonnaffons this season, and disposed of the greater portion during Thanksgiving week.

Arnold & Petros opened their handsome new flower store on Boylston street November 22, just in season to catch the Thanksgiving trade. They are doing a fine business and are handling a big lot of both cut flowers and plants, for a new firm.

J. S. Manter, a leading salesman at C Park street, is spending a few days at his home in Farmington, Me.

Charles Anderson, grower for F. P. Putnam, of North Tewksbury, is sending in the finest White Enchantress carnations seen this season. They are handled by George Cartwright, at C Park street.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, had a tremendous sale on Bonnaffon chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving. They have a capitally flowered lot of the dwarf azaleas, Hexe and Mme. Petrick, at present.

William Cleary, of Newton, has sold at 2 Park street this season a lot of well-grown pot chrysanthemums, that fine anemone variety, Garza, still being of good quality.

The good old pink chrysanthemum, Maud Dean, has been coming in of good quality lately from Edgar Bros. and Peirce Bros.

The rivalry for the four places on the executive committee is going to create a lively contest at the meeting of the Gardeners' & Florists' Club, December 21. There are eleven candidates in the field.

J. H. Leach & Son's new light pink carnation is making quite a name for itself. J. M. Cohen, who handles it at 2 Park street, says that it always brings the top price and sells on sight. Messrs. Leach have dropped several other good carnations to make room for more of their new seedling.

White pompon chrysanthemums are just now selling well in the market. Willow Hill Greenhouses are sending in a splendid lot of Diana to Thomas Pegler. Prince of Wales and Queen of Whites are two other fine whites now in season.

William Nicholson is much pleased with Chrysanthemum Patty, one of F. Dorner's introductions. It is proving an excellent commercial variety. Mr. Nicholson also has Lynnwood Hall of fine quality.

No finer Pink Delight carnations are seen in the market than those handled by M. H. Hambro for S. J. Reuter. Chadwick chrysanthemums are also good. R. D. Kimball, of Waban, also has excellent success with this variety.

A Quartet of Astoria's Famous Bowlers.

THE ASTORIA QUARTET.

The men of Astoria are valiant bowlers and there is a quartet of them who are great cronies, leaders of the complicated life in such a simple way as to get the maximum of pleasure with a minimum of effort; hard workers, they play hard with ease, paradoxical as it may sound. The quartet is Siebrecht, Donaldson, Miesem and Einsman. The illustration shows them in the Siebrecht touring car, well known on Long Island.

OBITUARY.

Charles H. Koeppen.

Charles H. Koeppen, of 910 Walnut street, Columbia, Mo., died at the Parker hospital, in that city, November 16, after an illness of about three weeks. He was first taken ill with appendicitis and was relieved by an operation; then an abscess formed on his liver and this was the direct cause of his death. He was a native of Germany, 46 years old and had been in business as a florist in Columbia since 1902. He was of an affable temperament and popular with all who knew him.

Mrs. Emma I. Haskins.

Mrs. Emma I. Haskins, widow of J. S. Haskins, pioneer florist of Chicago, died at Worcester, Mass., November 21, while there on a visit. Since her husband's death she had made her home with her brother, Harvey Ingalls, at Rockford, Ill. She was born in Brookfield, Vt., in 1834, came west with her parents in 1855 and taught in the first public school at Rockford. When the Civil war broke out she went as a nurse and was stationed for two years at Memphis, Tenn., and Louisville, Ky., and the last year of the war was at Camp Douglas, Chicago, taking care of the rebel prisoners there. In 1866 she was married to Mr. Haskins and they made their home in Chicago until his death in February, 1909. The funeral services were held in Rockford, November 25, and she was buried in the West Side cemetery beside her husband.

Mrs. Deake.

Mrs. Josephine B. Deake, who became known to many in the trade at the time the S. A. F. held its convention at Asheville, N. C., died November 19, at Twin Falls, Idaho, where she had lived with a brother since the family disposed of its florists' business at Asheville. Mrs. Deake was 71 years of age.

William Ventres.

William Ventres, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Ventres, the well known florists at Port Allegany, Pa., died in the hospital at Buffalo November 22, where he had been since November 3, on which date he was accidentally shot while with a camping party. He was 16 years of age. The funeral took place at Port Allegany November 26.

Waterford, Conn.—Stanley Jordan, formerly of Madison, N. J., now has charge of the E. S. Harkness place at Goshen Point.

Bristol, Pa.—Gustav Pitzonka has for some time been picking pansy blooms from the young plants and has some big flowers and choice colors.

Forest City, Ia.—The Hill City Greenhouses have a set of several colored post cards that are being distributed for advertising purposes.

Louisville, Ky.—Nanz & Neuner are sending out notices to customers announcing the removal of their store from 656 Fourth avenue to 663 Fourth avenue. The new store will be known as The Rosery.

Greenfield, Mass.—Paul R. Burtt, whose stock of flowers has been injured at different times on account of the inadequate heating of the store which he occupies, recently brought action in court against the owner of the store and was awarded damages to the amount of $386.63.

Mount Vernon, Ia.—A. C. Cowen, whose greenhouse was recently destroyed by fire, is planning to rebuild the house in the spring. The new building will be 36x100, with concrete walls and iron framework. It is reported that J. G. Crozer, the Cedar Rapids florist, has taken an interest in the enterprise.

Freeport, Ill.—John Bauscher, Jr., recently spent a day or two calling on the trade in Rockford, Ill. Mr. Bauscher was one of the judges in the horticultural department at the state fair, and he has held this position for a number of years. During the present year he has made large additions to his greenhouses, which now comprise about 100,000 square feet of glass.

Lancaster, Pa.—Albert M. Herr has taken over the business and greenhouses of his father, D. K. Herr, and added the latter's stock of geraniums to his already large supply. He will carry on the coleus trade of D. K. Herr with a stock almost doubled in size, retaining all of the choice seedlings produced the last five years. This leaves the business of Mr. Herr: First, carnations; second, geraniums, and, third, coleus, each treated as a specialty.

Victoria, Tex.—Miss B. E. Smith opened a flower store here November 21.

Forest City, Ia.—Charles Simmons, of the Hill City Greenhouses, recently visited Minneapolis and attended the flower show there.

Madison, Wis.—The greenhouses of the horticultural department of the University of Wisconsin were damaged by fire November 23. Two north wings of the building were destroyed.

Colchester, England.—Frank Cant, widely known as a rosarian and member of the firm of Frank Cant & Co., has been elected mayor. He had served nine years as a member of the borough council.

Hanover, Mass.—Alpheus Packard, who successfully combines the two lines of trade, the dealing in coal and in flowers, has been selectman in this town for the last ten years. He is a Grand Army veteran, with a record that includes many exciting experiences.

Amherst, Mass.—E. A. White, professor in the Department of Floriculture at Massachusetts Agricultural College, announces that during the short course in floriculture a designer from Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., of Boston, will give a lecture-demonstration on design making. This will be followed by a series of afternoon exercises in making up.

Rochdale, Mass.—The Maple Ridge Greenhouses will be supplied with water by the Cherry Valley-Rochdale water district, and the connections were recently made for that purpose. Last spring a branch store was opened at Worcester and the entire business is now in fine condition, under the management of the two brothers, Arthur D. and Walter E. Draper.

Burlington, Wis.—The Burlington Floral Co. received honorable mention for two vases of chrysanthemums and two vases of carnations exhibited at the Milwaukee flower show. The firm did not compete for any of the prizes.

Des Moines, Ia.—The suburban residence of Alfred G. Lozier, at 3100 Easton boulevard, was destroyed by fire November 19, together with its contents. The loss was about $5,000, partly covered by insurance.

St. Joseph, Mo.—George P. Doran, who is connected with the Stuppy Floral Co., delivered an interesting and instructive address on chrysanthemums at the flower show in Oregon, Mo., November 18, the second day of the show.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The third annual chrysanthemum show of the city parks, held at Lyndale Farmstead, November 20, was bigger and better than either of its predecessors, and Chief Gardener Louis Boeglin was justly proud of the display.

Kankakee, Ill.—The new Schaefer greenhouses, north of the city, between the fair grounds and the cemetery, are almost completed. This new range consists of five connected houses, each 23x250, besides the heating plant and office. It is expected that the place will be entirely equipped for business by January 1.

Zanesville, O.—The second monthly meeting of the Zanesville Florists' Club was held at the greenhouses and residence of George W. Caton & Son, November 17, and five new members were added to the list. The meeting was called to order by President J. T. Goodlive. After the regular business of the club, the members held a discussion on "Plants and Cut Flowers," until luncheon was served. All expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the progress of the club.

Malta, O.—W. C. Scovell, who has a local reputation for extra large mums, says that Thanksgiving trade was better than ever. He reports blooms of Maud Dean mums nine inches in diameter; Chadwick, Appleton and Lynnwood Hall, which is in its first year with him, grew eight inches across and D. Enguehard was seven inches in diameter and five inches deep. Among the Lynnwood Hall were three plants of similar habit that produced 8-inch flowers which matured three weeks earlier than any of the others and which were a little more globular in form. These plants are now throwing a fine lot of sprouts.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Special convention and National Flower Show, Boston, Mass., March 26 to April 1, 1911.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THERE was much cause for Thanksgiving and the trade is looking forward to a merry Christmas business.

CAPABLE store men are short of the demand. A flower store clerk who has the sticktoitiveness to master all branches of the work can command a much better salary than in most lines of retailing.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

DEBUTANTE parties are each autumn calling for an increasingly large number of bouquets. For leading florists in the big cities the coming out parties are this year producing more revenue than ever before.

A SELLER complains that florists have a great habit of "shopping around." Yes, but sometimes an excursion of that character makes the shopper exceedingly glad to get back to the original source of supply.

IN many lines of business the dealers outside the large cities are opposed to the parcels post, believing it will sound the death knell of the country merchant, but it is difficult to see how it would do otherwise than benefit the country florists. Speak to your congressman about it before he goes to Washington for the session that opens December 6.

THE BOGY MAN.

Uncle Yim Hill and a lot of other men who own railroads and are numbered among the florists' best customers are once more trotting out that old bogy of theirs, the approach of hard times. Every time these esteemed and self-esteemed fellow-citizens undertake a fresh assault upon the "ultimate consumer" and are shown up, they raise the cry that if they are not permitted to have their own way the whole blessed country will go to the demnition bowwows. So long as they can have their own way, everything is lovely, but so soon as their plans are interfered with in any particular—well, look out for the end of that era of prosperity.

These eminent financiers throw a fit too often to have their forebodings continue to be impressive.

There isn't the first sign in the flower business to indicate the passing of the present run of excellent business. True, margins of profits are narrower than they were, due to the increased costs of business living, but the consumption of the florists' products never was so general as now. It was demonstrated in 1907 and 1908 that this trade had as little reason as any to fear the effects of general business depression—but we decline to admit that there is anything in sight to indicate a slowing up in other lines, save, possibly, those that have depended for their patronage on the extravagances of the railroad magnates.

THANKSGIVING.

From all reports, the trade has cause to hold Thanksgiving, 1910, in fond remembrance. There is yet to be received the first report of poor business; indeed, the unanimity with which a new record is chronicled is subject for remark. Thanksgiving never has been a holiday in the sense that Christmas, Easter, and, lately, Memorial day are; it is a day on which a few flowers are wanted for the table, nothing more. But this year the demand was far heavier than ever before. It was heavier everywhere, and fair prices were freely paid. When people buy for their own use there usually is a well defined limit to what they will pay; those for whom nothing but the best will do, when buying gifts for others, limit the expenditure when it is for their own use, just as a man who habitually smokes stogies will buy two-for-a-quarter Havanas when he meets a friend; this, as much as the increased demand, makes possible the Christmas prices and makes necessary those of other seasons.

Now, with our best Thanksgiving behind us, we look forward to a merry Christmas.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Following the slump on the eve of Thanksgiving and the poor demand occasioned by the rain on the morning of the day itself, the market quickly recovered and the close of last week was fully as good as the start; indeed, on many items the market was stiffer Saturday afternoon than at any time while the special demand for the holiday was a factor.

The present week opened with increased supply in practically all lines. The demand showed some falling off in spots, as it always does when supply increases through the country, but, on the other hand, the orders of other purchasers indicated that business is excellent with them, and, on the whole, it is good in this market. City trade, as well as shipping trade, shows that most of the retailers are enjoying an active season.

While it may be said that the only real shortages now are cattleyas, valley, and, to a less extent, violets, the most important increase is in Beauties. A number of the largest growers are cutting good crops and the increase in the supply has been sufficient to bring the price down to normal November values; it will go farther unless the predictions of some of the wholesalers prove accurate in that they say that the increase is only momentary, occasioned by weather conditions, and that the supply will decrease rather than increase further. Finer Beauties than those now coming in never were offered. As is natural at this season, the greater part of the cut is on long stems. Beauties scarcely could be better than at present.

There is an abundant supply of Killarney, White Killarney and Maryland, with Richmond enjoying a better demand than at any time this season, and the crops excellent with most of the growers. Few Maid or Bride are seen, and Kaiserin is no longer a factor, though a few fine flowers come in.

There can be no complaint of the quality of roses; indeed, the complaint is that much of the stock is worth more money than the retailers are willing to give for it for the uses they have for the flowers; short and medium roses are bringing relatively better values than the extra lengths.

Carnations were plentiful November 28, but the next day's receipts were light. The quality averages first-class and buyers are taking hold better than many thought they would after the flurry in prices before Thanksgiving.

Chrysanthemums show that the end of the season is rapidly approaching. Many of the large growers say they are cut out and the stock in the wholesale houses is of that ragged character that shows not many more are to come from the same sources. The Bonnaffons and Eatons are about gone; the best blooms this week are Nonin and the Chadwicks.

The supply of violets continues much below other years. Sweet peas, however, are coming in much more plentifully than ever before at this date. There are now considerable quantities of Paper Whites and quite a few callas. Stevia is abundant. Valley is selling so well the ordinary supply is inadequate. Easter lilies may be had in quantity. Some choice bouvardia sells well.

The greens market continues normal. Ferns have generally advanced to $2 with the arrival of December.

East Sixty-third Street.

Keenan's, at 1306 East Sixty-third street, say that nothing better could have been asked for Thanksgiving; people wouldn't climb for flowers, but there was a heavy trade at normal prices. Business is reported as having been steadier than usual all summer and autumn; no rush, but something doing all the time.

J. E. Schaeffer is no longer with J. H. McNeilly, on Sixty-third street, his place having been taken by a young lady who formerly worked for J. Bombenger, at Sixty-first and Woodlawn, who, with his rebuilt and enlarged place, undoubtedly does the largest trade in that part of town.

W. H. Hilton, who, early in the year, bought out a candy store at 1004 East Sixty-third and put in a flower department, has given up the branch, moving the fixtures to his main store at No. 1320.

Various Notes.

Bouquet green was quoted this week at $10 to $12, but little changed hands. Those who hold bulk green are not anxious to sell; they are making it into light wreathing and are holding the wreathing at stiff prices. Occasionally a case or two of green is released to some good customer, largely as an accommodation, at about $9.50.

E. C. Amling, always a believer in well directed advertising, watches with much interest the newspaper advertising of the retailers. He says that, in seeking business by this method, the retailers are now where the wholesalers were ten years ago; that he expects to see retail advertising increase just as wholesale advertising has, and that with it will come an increase in the demand for flowers that will make the present volume of business look as small then as the volume of ten years ago looks now.

The Florists' Club holds its regular meeting tonight, December 1, at the Union restaurant. The special feature will be the nomination of officers. Heretofore both the treasurer and the secretary have been from Winterson's Seed Store, but Secretary L. H. Winterson feels that he can no longer devote so much time as is required, and states that he will decline nomination.

Harry Manheim, at the store of Hoerber Bros., reports the arrival of the first long-stemmed snapdragons, and says they easily commanded $1.25 per dozen.

At Maywood, Ill., William Wichtendahl is preparing to erect another house, about 25x100, and will put in a new Kroeschell boiler.

N. J. Wietor says that Wietor Bros. were practically cut out of chrysanthemums the day before Thanksgiving, fully two weeks earlier than usual. He says the early stock did not realize its usual prices, but that the later varieties did better than usual, so that on the whole it has been an average season, or perhaps a little ahead of the average.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of the E. C. Amling Co., spent Thanksgiving at Cincinnati.

Lincoln Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., is shipping some fine Beauties to this market. They are handled by J. A. Budlong.

The estate of George Wittbold is going to erect ten or twelve dwellings on its Park Ridge property and already has four of the houses on the way to completion. Thanksgiving trade with the George Wittbold Co. was good; in fact, Louis Wittbold said it was considerably ahead of previous years.

Robert Northam says Richmond has been George Reinberg's standby; it has given a remarkably steady crop the last two seasons. The heating apparatus at the greenhouse has just undergone extensive overhauling.

Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, was in town November 29. He is disseminating his new dark pink carnation, Bright Spot, this season and says he has booked about all the orders he can promise January delivery on. He says he is fixed to propagate 100,000 and thinks he will have no difficulty in selling them all.

The morning papers November 28 had a story of J. L. Raske's capture of a burglar in his store on Jackson boulevard.

A. B. Scott and W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia, were here last week. The former is sending out two new roses this season.

One of the week's visitors was E. Haentze, on his way home to Fond du Lac with his bride. Mr. Haentze has sold his business to his sons and is preparing to build a new home and enjoy his declining years. Other visitors were H. M. Burt, Jackson, Mich.; B. O'Neil, of Elgin, Ill.; Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., New York; Wm. Feniger, Toledo, O.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

General reports indicate that both retail and wholesale florists had a big Thanksgiving trade. There were great numbers of weddings, which used up large quantities of flowers. The weather was warm and springlike, which made over-the-counter sales much larger than usual on this day. The big football game, too, helped the florists greatly in the sale of large white mums, and these were plentiful.

What we need from now on is steady cold weather to tone up the retail trade. A number of swell weddings and receptions have been booked with the leading west end establishments, and these will call for a lot of first-class stock.

The market is not overstocked with anything, and prices are still high on roses and carnations. Violets, too, command a high price in the fancy grades. Chrysanthemum blooms are still coming in, but not nearly so many. All the late varieties will last a week or two yet. There is an abundance of lilies and valley. Paper Whites and Romans are now in, but only a few. The market should be good in everything in season from now on.

Various Notes.

James Conway, son of the florist of that name at Rochester, N. Y., spent a few days here on his way home from the coast.

Word has just been received that Mrs. Josephine Deake, of Twin Falls, Idaho, died November 19. Those who attended the Asheville S. A. F. convention in 1902 will remember Auntie Deake, of the Idlewild Floral Co., who made things pleasant for all the florists during their stay in Asheville. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

E. W. Guy and Henry Emunds, of Belleville, were callers last week and reported a good Thanksgiving business. Mr. Emunds says he still has several hundred fine yellow mums, Golden Wedding and Chadwick, to cut.

The St. Louis Seed Co. made a fine display of poultry supplies at the poultry show held here last week. Their display was one of the big attractions at the show.

The Oakland Floral Co., of Kirkwood, is consigning to this market a fine lot of cut carnations, which are handled by Kuehn. P. Schneider is the grower for this company.

Fred H. Weber says he had a rushing Thanksgiving business. Large, fancy mum blooms had the call. Plants sold well, too.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers, Gus Waldbart and the Metropolitan Floral Co. must have had a big trade on Thanksgiving, as their large stock of cut flowers was depleted long before the day was over, and good prices prevailed.

The chicken show last week was a great attraction for some of our florists. Among these were W. J. Pilcher, W. C. Smith, F. A. Weber and C. A. Kuehn.

It has been reported that A. Mirring, the florist of East St. Louis, Ill., will next spring build a range of houses on his new place, near Edgemont, and move to the new place when it is completed.

Fred C. Weber had a large Thanksgiving trade. Both plants and cut flowers sold well. His show house is well filled with fine decorative plants of all kinds.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. handled a fine lot of violets and carnations for Thanksgiving, all home-grown stock, which sold out clean.

R. J. Windler, C. Bergstermann and Carl Beyer, on South Grand avenue, all report a rushing Thanksgiving business.

Frank A. Weber, of H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., says they never have been so busy as this season with both shipping and local demands for nursery stock of all kinds.

The Ellison Floral Co., Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. and Theo. Miller made a fine Thanksgiving show of cut flowers and blooming plants in their pretty show houses last week.

Don't forget the meeting of the Retail Florists' Association on Monday, December 5. It is important for all members to be present, and early.

C. Young & Sons Co., Miss Badaracco, Foster Floral Co., Otto Sander and Riessen Floral Co., all say that they had an exceptionally good trade at Thanksgiving. In the north end, the Bentzen Floral Co., A. Brix, Koenig Floral Co. and F. H. Meinhardt also say they did splendidly.

Thursday afternoon, December 8, the Florists' Club will hold its last meeting in the old year. President John Connon and Vice-President Frank Weber are rounding up the members to attend this meeting, so a large gathering is expected. J. J. B.

DENVER.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business was all that could be desired, except that if there had been more good yellow chrysanthemums it would have been better. Chrysanthemum plants sold well, and the demand for good plants was greater than the supply. Beauties in medium and short grades were not to be had, and the long ones did not sell on account of the price. Denver is apt to copy Chicago prices whenever it can, but made a mistake in the price of Beauties this time. Denver flower lovers are willing to pay the price for long Beauties at Christmas, but $10 or $12 a dozen retail at Thanksgiving is more than the average person cares to spend. Tea roses were scarce, and a few of the florists had some shipped from Council Bluffs. Violets were scarce, as usual. The plants are in fine condition, but the extremely warm weather has kept the buds from forming. California violets are being sold on the streets by peddlers, but the quality is poor, after such a long journey, and they would hardly do to sell to a customer who is interested enough to go into a store to buy violets.

The outlook for Christmas is good. There is an abundance of fine plants at the different greenhouses, and from present indications there will be an exceptionally good crop of cut flowers at that time.

Various Notes.

A branch flower store has been opened at the Brown Palace hotel by the Daniels & Fisher Stores Co., where a full line of plants and cut flowers will be carried. Customers at this branch are assured of the same service as at the main store.

Fred C. Schumann, a violet specialist from Ohio, has bought the N. S. Kaime greenhouses, at the end of the West Thirty-eighth avenue car line, where he will grow violets to supply Denver florists. The purchase included a residence and five acres of ground and Mr. Schumann intends to improve it and make it one of the show places of Denver.

M. A. Poss has given up the flower store at 1555 Curtis street and it is now under the management of, and is being run as a branch by, the Elitch-Long flower store, which is located at Fifteenth and Stout streets. Mr. Poss has gone on the road in the interests of several concerns, and reports that there is more money in it than in the flower business.

John Berry and Henry Monaghan, of Colorado Springs, spent Thanksgiving in Denver. William H. Evans, of the Pikes Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs, was also in the city the latter part of the week.

The store at 325 Sixteenth street, recently opened by the Misses A. & C. Culp, has been discontinued. The stock and fixtures were purchased by the Gross Floral Co. and have been moved to the store at 131 Broadway.

On Thursday and Friday, November 17 and 18, at the handsomely decorated Broadway store and conservatory of the Park Floral Co., there was an exhibition of cut flowers and plants, table and mantel decorations. A bench of cyclamen attracted a great deal of attention. There were some magnificent plants, and the colors were beautiful. A graduated mass of Lorraine begonias on one side made a beautiful picture, and some large hanging baskets of this same plant brightened up several spots. The table was set in the conservatory. The first day a tall vase of small single chrysanthemums in the shades of yellow and brown was surrounded at the base by a quantity of cypripediums and Farleyense fern. The second decoration was in cattleyas, arranged in a low mound with Farleyense fern. Music was furnished each afternoon and evening by Lohman's orchestra. This is probably the last show the Park Floral Co. will have at this location, as the new store on Broadway, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, is rapidly nearing completion. The new place will be strictly up-to-date. The lower floor will be given over to the store and work rooms, a portion being reserved for the wagon shed and elevator, which will be used to carry stock to and from the conservatory, on the second floor. The office will occupy the entire front of this floor, and everything will be most conveniently arranged.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The Thanksgiving results gave general satisfaction. Prices for cut flowers were not abnormal. In fact, the level reached on Tuesday before the holiday was the highest of the week, and on the holiday itself prices had returned to the usual quotations.

The best Beauties brought 40 cents before Thanksgiving. A few reach that figure now, but 30 to 35 cents would be a fairer average quotation. As high as 1,000 daily have been sent in from some of the large growers. The market, however, is seldom surfeited, now that the season has opened in society. All roses are now at their best and in good demand. Melody, of the new varieties, is popular. Splendid Richmonds are arriving and Killarney, Maryland, Bride and Maid are at their best. It is only in small lots, however, that top figures are obtained. The inflow of Killarneys is now enormous.

The best carnations sell at 4 to 6 cents, the higher price for the novelties. The demand was lighter as the week opened, and some grand stock fell to 3 cents Monday afternoon. Lilies and valley maintain their values easily, as do gardenias. Violets dropped from $1.25 and $1.50, and $1 is likely to be the top this week for them. The surplus goes to the street merchants, as usual, and they seem to be well supplied.

There are still enough chrysanthemums to go around. Prices hold well and the quality is superb. It is believed there will be no shortage of supply until the holidays.

Smilax and stevia are the twin stocks that have become the footballs of the buyers. It is hard to dispose of either of them, and prices have fallen below reason. The supply of green goods and wild smilax is abundant. Some holly is here.

Orchids are "worth their weight in gold;" $1.50 was offered November 28, but with no response. It will be at least two weeks before the supply is sufficient for the demand. The growth in the popularity of this flower is phenomenal.

week as a wholesale dealer in cut flowers. He and Jimmy Hart are the remnants of the old guard of thirty years ago.

Another new wholesale store opens this week at 136 West Twenty-eighth street, next door to Kessler Bros. The sons of Henry Siebrecht, of New Rochelle, and William H. Siebrecht, of Astoria and Chappaqua, have joined hands under the title of Siebrecht & Siebrecht. George and Walter will perpetuate a name that has been a part of American floriculture for over forty years.

The auction season bids fair to continue until the holidays. Large importations of evergreens, boxwood and hardy roses are arriving.

The seedsmen are all handling holly and princess pine, and many of them fancy Christmas trees.

The marriage of Mr. Goldberg, of Arthur T. Boddington's force, to Miss Kerness, was celebrated November 24.

Robert E. Berry, the landscape architect and horticultural expert, is now located at 345 Union avenue, Elizabeth, N. J.

J. J. Coan, of the Growers' Co., reports Thanksgiving business more than double 1909, and says his grade of Yellow Eaton and Golden Chadwick sold at $5 per dozen.

H. E. Froment says the crop of Killarney has not been plentiful until last week, but now they are at their best and Coddington's big houses are yielding enormous daily shipments.

The two stores of Kessler Bros. are now in one, and shelved and arranged for both plant and cut flower departments, with new electric lights and all conveniences. They handled many fine Jeanne Nonin mums for Thanksgiving.

The Forster Mansfield Co. has the contract for lattice and other ornamentation of Madison Square Garden for the auto show, involving an expenditure of over $7,000.

Stumpp, the retail florist at Fifth avenue and Fifty-eighth street, relieved the congested violet market one day last week by a single purchase of 50,000.

The new firm of Badgley, Riedel & Meyer say their Thanksgiving trade was far ahead of expectations.

Arthur Baker is now with the Growers' Cut Flower Co.

John F. Sharkey is now well established at his new headquarters at 814 Sixth avenue and is greatly pleased with the location which his office manager, Mrs. Sharkey, secured. James McAniney, father of Mrs. Sharkey, has opened a store at 3515 Broadway with the title of the Riverside Florist. William Griffin, who has been in the service of Arthur Herrington, Wadley & Smythe, Thos. Young, Jr., and A. T. Bunyard, is manager.

The sympathy of all in the trade is extended Miss Horn, the retail florist at Lexington avenue and Sixtieth street, in the death of her mother on Thanksgiving day.

L. W. C. Tuthill has been west for several days with photographic attention to Lord & Burnham's new plant at Des Plaines, Ill.

R. G. Wilson, of Brooklyn, reports the busiest fall season to date. His store is uniquely decorated and his windows, Thanksgiving week, were in keeping with the occasion.

John V. Phillips decorated the large dining room at Delmonico's for the Mayflower dinner. For ten years Mr. Phillips has had this contract. It was an original and beautiful piece of artistic work, with his son in charge.

S. Masur, Brooklyn, is so crowded that he has decided to add the big corner store next door to his conveniences.

Philip Kessler is advising all lily growers to pack the flowers in wax paper in preference to tissue for shipment.

L. K. Peacock, of Williamstown Junction, Pa., was a visitor last week at A. T. Boddington's; also A. A. McDonald, of Dakes Farm, N. J.; T. Herschel Brown, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Thos. Murray, of Tuxedo, and A. H. Wingett, of Lenox, Mass.

Moore, Hentz & Nash will add a new line to their Christmas red berries, fine English mistletoe.

Frank H. Traendly and Mrs. Traendly entertained a goodly company of his friends in the trade, as usual, at his home in Flatbush Thanksgiving day. Harry A. Bunyard was toastmaster.

Bowling.

November 25 the Warendorff prize, a safety razor, was won by J. B. McArdle with a score of 409. December 2 the prize will be a silk umbrella, given by Myer. December 9 Rickards Bros. give two prizes—a folding pruning shears and a pruning knife. The scores November 25 were:

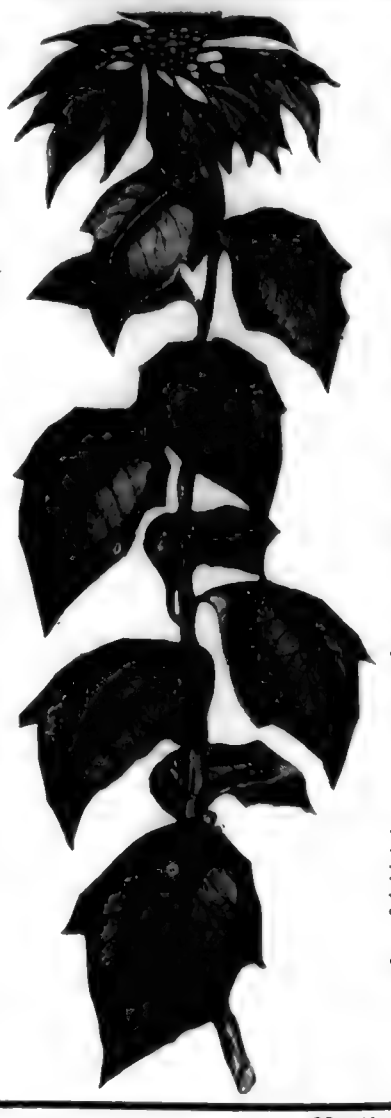
MILWAUKEE.



The Market.

Our local wholesale houses say Thanksgiving business was fine and quite satisfactory. The supply of roses was equal to the demand. Carnations, which were of fine quality, were scarce, more so the early part of the week, and brought good returns. Locally grown violets are behind for this time of the year and were scarce. Mums, all of which were of a high grade, were plentiful and sold well.

Various Notes.

At the J. M. Fox & Son retail store they were very well satisfied with the run of things last week; they had an increased call for cut mums and on cyclamens.

While the amount of buying was about equal to that of last Thanksgiv-

The untiring entertainment committee of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, which has done its share to forward the social end for the last year, will wind up the season's work by giving an informal dance at Miller's hall, Eighth and State streets, December 8. WHEATON, ILL.

A new place was started here during the summer of this year. It is owned by Dr. A. F. Mau, and, with Dr. Gilbert's assistance, he is growing excellent sweet peas, violets and pansies. The houses are of Moninger construction and heated by the Kroeschell hot water system.

A. T. Peterson's houses are neat and well kept. He grows miscellaneous stock for the local trade, getting additional stock from the city market, and carries on a thriving business. One greenhouse was added by Mr. Peterson this season.

At E. T. Wanzer's place everything is in fine condition and his carnations promise a good crop for Christmas. Victory is grown in smaller quantity than formerly and most of the space is devoted to White Perfection and Enchantress. About 15,000 mums were grown and about 2,000 stevias are being cut. During the last year about two acres used for outdoor stock was equipped with the Skinner irrigating system, which is well thought of. One acre was planted to peonies and ground was broken for an additional three acres, to be planted to summer flowers next season, making a total of about ten acres in outside flowers. Mr. Wanzer also found it necessary recently to add 375 feet of 10-inch tile to take care of the heavy spring rains. He also built a cottage of cement blocks to furnish sleeping quarters for extra men needed in busy seasons, and at present he is adding one more greenhouse, 24x105. All of this work is done by his own men and teams.

There is a report that another greenhouse will be built in this neighborhood next summer. R. S.

WYOMISSING, PA.

Bertrand H. Farr, proprietor of the Wyomissing Nursery, reports that he has had a splendid business this season, more than double that of last year. The demand for stock has made it necessary to increase his propagating facilities and he has leased the greenhouses owned and until recently operated by the G. H. Hoskins Co., in this city. These will be used entirely for the growing and propagating of hardy perennials.

Both Heck Bros. and Frank D. Shearer have a fine display of chrysanthemums, grown to perfection.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The immense crowds that came to this city for the great football games November 24 and 26 occasioned the liveliest business of the season. The hotels were thronged and many dinners were given in the principal hostelries and in private residences. Flowers of the Penn and Cornell and of the Army and Navy colors were worn in corsage and buttonhole bunches, and many yellow chrysanthemums were called for.

Thanksgiving was the best in years—probably the best this market has ever known, the leading city stores doing an immense business. Yellow chrysanthemums were in great demand, bringing $4 and $5, and some select Chadwicks $6 per dozen, while ordinary stock that usually sells for $1 per dozen often realized $15 in hundred lots. Yellow pompons were popular at 50 cents a bunch for good stock. Violets soared to $1.50 and $2 for fancy doubles, while singles of high degree sold at $1 to $1.50. The demand for violets was extraordinary. These were the leaders, but everything on the list went well, fine carnations especially so. The quantity of carnations is below normal, particularly good ones, and roses were not in heavy supply, the good stock cleaning up well at list prices.

The closing days of November saw less floral activity, with declining prices on violets and chrysanthemums. An impression that chrysanthemums were waning caused by failure to fill orders held until the last moment in the hopes of lower prices has been dispelled this week. There are enough fine flowers in sight today to last until December 15 and possibly until the close of the year. Bonnaffon, Eaton, Chadwick, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Stuart Allen, Dolly Dimple, Jeanne Nonin, Lynnwood Hall and a few others are in fine form, with the whites predominating. Many pompons of fine quality are to be seen.

Chestnut Hill.

"We have the best Beauties we have ever had." That is the way Martin Samtman described the conditions on his firm's place last week. The Beauties justified praise. They certainly were in splendid condition, exceptionally heavy plants that had done a little work, just enough to put them in the pink of condition for the season. I really do not remember just how many Beauties Myers & Samtman have today; 30,000 would be a conservative estimate. The new house, 55x300, built and planted last summer, is entirely filled with Beauties. They are in benches, as in the entire place. The growing of the American Beauty rose bids fair to become a lost art in many rose growing establishments, but here black spot, blind wood, weak stems, bullheads, and it seems about everything else has been mastered. I do not mean to say that these troubles never affect Myers & Samtman, but I do mean to say that when you walk through their Beauty houses you feel that they are masters of the situation, that they hold these troubles in check with a firm hand as they guide the timing of the crops.

My Maryland has been grown by Myers & Samtman since the summer of 1908. The original plants are now in the house where they were first planted, two years and four months ago. They are over seven feet high, immensely vigorous. There are other houses of Maryland, 10,000 plants in all. The way it is grown here is evidently profitable. The plants are in splendid shape, coming in heavily for December. Hilda, their new dark pink sport of Maryland, is most promising; Mr. Myers says that its future is assured, as the flower buyers fancy Hilda. There are a number of interesting new-comers on trial.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There was a good business last week, though much of it was centered on Thanksgiving. The general demand was brisk, while numerous social functions and weddings, with two large funerals, combined to make an unusually large trade even for the holiday. Chrysanthemums were at their best and commanded the highest prices of the season, and since Thursday there has been a dearth of yellow and pink mums.

Violets are uncommonly scarce, owing largely to the extraordinary demand for them November 19 for the big Harvard-Yale game, for which red chrysanthemums were also greatly called for. A new crop of galax leaves, of fine quality, is coming in from the south. Blooms of every kind are a trifle scarcer than usual at this season, but the supply appears to equal the demand.

Prices during the holiday week were but slightly advanced over normal.

Annual Club Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held November 21, in the rooms of the association, 96 Westminster street, and was well attended. Plans for the coming year were discussed and a committee was appointed to consider the advisability of holding a banquet in the near future. In the absence of President Robert Johnston, the vice-president, Eugene Appleton, presided. The reports of the several officers and committees showed that the club was in a good condition, financially and numerically.

The result of the election was as follows: President, Robert Johnston; vice-president, Eugene Appleton; secretary, William E. Chappell; treasurer, James Hockey, of Pawtucket; librarian, Henry T. Boursch; banquet committee, Alexander Macrae, James Dillon and H. C. Neubrand; executive committee, H. C. Neubrand, Cornelius Hartstra and James Dillon.

Newport Horticultural Society.

The Newport Horticultural Society, carrying out its policy of having papers presented at its regular meetings on some subject of interest to the members, listened November 22 to two papers on the subject of "The Gardener and His Work," presented by John P. Hammond and John A. Forbes, the latter gardener at Bythesea. While the papers were on the same general subject, the writers had treated it in widely different ways, each giving from his own experience and reading a number of interesting points concerning the making of gardens and the work of the gardeners, Mr. Hammond going as far back in his researches as the garden of Eden to point a moral and adorn his tale. It is proposed to have more of these papers presented, and if they are as interesting as those of Tuesday evening the meetings will grow in popularity among the members.

Various Notes.

The employees of the W. E. Barrett Co. were presented with fine turkeys at Thanksgiving.

A threatening fire broke out in the dwelling of H. H. Pepper, of the Melrose Rose Gardens, November 20, but was discovered in time to avert serious damage.

Eugene McCarron has just received a new covered delivery wagon. It is fitted with rubber tires and has a heater for cold weather.

The Woonsocket Hill Nursery, C. W. Morey, proprietor, has been exceedingly busy in outdoor work recently, having had several contracts to lay out grounds, seed them down and plant shrubs and trees.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, was a recent visitor at Fall River, Mass.

The Westminster Greenhouses, of this city, have been incorporated, with a capital stock of $5,000, divided into fifty shares of $100 each. The incorporators are John H. Foster, John B. Trottier and Edward C. Scott.

Samuel Kinder, forester at Bristol, has been setting out a number of young trees there, to replace decayed shade trees.

William I. Brown, with the Providence Seed Co., is busy preparing for the annual exhibition of the Rhode Island Poultry Society, of which he is secretary. He is also manager of the exhibition.

Miss Florence A. Willard is cutting some fine orchids, for which she is getting $6 to $8 per dozen.

O. H. Williams, of Johnston, has the sympathy of the trade in the death of his mother, Sarah H. Williams, widow of Alfred A. Williams, November 23. She was 72 years old.

Earl S. Bavier, formerly at the head of the flower department at L. Dimond & Sons, this city, but now of Meriden, Conn., has been visiting friends here.

Johnston Bros., of Dorrance street, have added a handsome new cash register to their store appointments. It is operated by electricity.

Matthew Macnair had another striking window during Thanksgiving week. A large cornucopia of laurel leaves, with the mouth of red immortelles, was suspended in the center of the window, with fruit of all kinds falling from it.

T. O'Connor had the decorations for the Comstock-Brigham wedding last week and a large one at Fall River later.

The decorations for the green and white wedding of Lind-Bangs were furnished by Johnston Bros., both at the church and house.

F. Macrae & Sons, of Smith street, have 8,000 giganteum lilies potted for Easter. They are looking fine.

W. H. M.

M. E. Burlingame, who recently began business as a violet grower, is located at 440 Fruit Hill avenue, this city, and not at Centerdale, as formerly reported. His first crop of violets is of highly creditable quality.

Vegetable Forcing.

The Southwestern Hothouse Lettuce Growers' Association will hold its third annual meeting at the Baltimore hotel, Kansas City, Mo., December 5, and invites all vegetable growers to attend. The members now own about 1,000,000 square feet of glass and they hope to double the membership at this meeting.

GREENHOUSE VEGETABLES.

Chicago, November 29.—Cucumbers, $1.50 to $1.65 doz.; lettuce, 25c case.

New York, November 28.—Cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.50 doz.; mushrooms, 20c to 40c lb.; radishes, $1.50 to $2.50 hundred bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 22c lb.

OUTDOOR ASPARAGUS.

Which is the proper way to make a bed for vegetable asparagus, and what soil is the most suitable for it? C. A.

Asparagus is one of the easiest crops to grow in the garden, and when once it is well started it may last a great many years. Strong, healthy plants, of a good variety, are essential. A rich soil is next in importance. It matters little whether it is heavy or light soil, if it is rich. Asparagus will do well in nearly all soils, but is a rank feeder.

Most people plant it too close together. A good plant has more roots than a hill of corn, and requires as much soil for its best development. Never plant closer than 2x3 feet. Many large growers plant 2x4, 3x4 or 3x5 feet apart. Soil that has plenty of water and fertilizer will stand much closer planting than soil that is in a drier location or is not sufficiently manured. You cannot get too much manure on for asparagus. A heavy coat of it each season is required, and a heavy layer should be turned in before planting the bed in the first place.

Make deep furrows with a plow run twice in a row. Plant in the bottom of this furrow, but do not cover too deeply—just put on enough soil to cover the plants well. Later in the season the trenches can be filled in and the soil leveled with the cultivator, after the crop is well started. If covered too deeply at first, they will not come up and many will die out. If they are about four or five inches below the soil when it is leveled later, the field can then be cultivated right over them without injury to them. In this way the field can be kept clean by a shallow plowing of the soil, to turn it over, three times a year—first in the early spring, before the plants are sprouted; next about June 20, after the cutting season is over, and again in the late fall, after they are mowed off and burned.

A good variety is most important. Palmetto is still the favorite variety. The older varieties have too small stalks and are not so healthy. Some of the new ones may be as good, but that remains to be seen. H. G.

RENEWING STRAWBERRY BEDS.

I am writing to you to ask how strawberries should be treated in the spring, when they commence to grow up and make runners. Should the runners be cut off or not? C. A.

There are several methods of training the young strawberry plants to make new fruiting beds. Some growers select only two runners, one on each side of the plant, in a line with the row in which they are planted. Other growers select several runners, locating them all around the plant and thus making a thickly planted row, called a matted row. I believe that most of the growers usually leave four to six young plants around each of the original or mother plants, and keep the others trimmed off.

These instructions are for a young bed, just planted. If the bed is an old one it is hard to do much with it. New beds must be planted out frequently for best results. The larger growers plant a new bed each year and plow up an old one. Many people imagine that strawberries, once planted, are to be left there forever, but they cease to be profitable after a few years. H. G.

Five Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful a branch of the business that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Stock cleaned up splendidly last week. On Monday and Tuesday until noon there was barely enough to fill orders, but after that time, through Wednesday evening, flowers kept on arriving on nearly every train. The local growers, too, kept bringing their share into the wholesale market. For a time everything was filled with blooms. The shipping orders, however, and local orders, made great inroads in this supply, and Thursday morning found nearly everything gone. The prices were uniformly good.

Since Thanksgiving day there has been an ordinary supply, with a fair demand for most lines. Chrysanthemums formed the bulk of the stock. The principal varieties offered were Major Bonnaffon, White Bonnaffon, Bird, Enguehard and Jones. Now these varieties are almost at an end and are being supplanted by Eaton and Nonin.

The supply of roses is increasing slowly. Pink, as has been the case for almost two months, cleans up at once, while white moves slowly. Red sells quickly. There are enough Beauties to go around.

than come into the market could be used to advantage. The reports from the growers are none too encouraging for the future. The cloudy, cold weather of the last few days will also tend to diminish the supply of this flower and also of roses.

Other lines, with the exception of valley, are none too plentiful. There is a fair supply of New York double violets and a good demand for them. Local single violets are slow in coming in. They need a couple of weeks of bright weather that is not too warm. Longiflorums are in fair supply and find a good demand. Callas are coming stronger, but not regularly as yet. The first stevias and narcissi were offered last week and will undoubtedly be regular factors from now on. Sweet peas are also offered. The supply of greens is ample.

The outlook for flowers between now and the holidays is none too bright. If chrysanthemums should drop off suddenly the market would be rather tight,

Various Notes.

The wholesalers are well satisfied with Thanksgiving business. C. E. Critchell says it was the "best ever." William Murphy calls it "very good; better than last year." E. G. Gillett says it was "fine; best I ever had." J. M. McCullough's Sons Co. says it was "good; better than last year." P. J. Olinger and L. H. Kyrk also make good reports.

J. T. Herdegen, of Aurora, recently sustained a loss of about $100 when his conservatory caught fire when a neighboring barn burned.

The Leedle Rosery, of Springfield, O., is shipping choice mums to C. E. Critchell. They arrive in the same good condition in which most stock from that firm arrives.

John Walt visited in Columbus November 24.

Narcissi made their appearance at C. E. Critchell's, L. H. Kyrk's and J.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Mark Aitken has now nearly completed the four houses which form the beginning of the new range of glass on his farm at Agawam. The four houses, each 34x300, are of Lord & Burnham construction. One house will be used for carnations, another for chrysanthemums, another for violets, cosmos and sweet peas, and the fourth house for palms, ferns and lilies. Two boilers have been installed, one of 125 horse-power and the other of 75 horse-power.

Early in the spring, work will be begun on a fifth greenhouse of the same size as those just finished, and this house will be devoted to roses. Mr. Aitken has also made ambitious plans for the attractive development of the entire farm and will carry a large stock of outdoor plants and shrubs.

The water for the range is pumped from a driven well twenty-seven feet deep and an apparently inexhaustible supply has been found. It is pumped by a gasoline engine into a 10,000-gallon tank. Air is pumped into the tank at the same time, and a pressure of about seventy-five pounds is maintained in this way at all hours of the day and night.

Mr. Aitken has been in business in this city for eighteen years, and during that time his trade has increased until it has far outgrown his old quarters on Osgood street. He began his career as a florist more than twenty years ago, by going into business with his father in New Haven, Conn., when he was 14 years of age. When they came to this city they started business as Aitken & Son. John Aitken died twelve years ago, and about the same time his son bought the old Hersch greenhouses on Osgood street, where he has been located until he bought the Agawam farm last spring. He had only about 23,000 feet of floor space there and the new plant will just about triple that capacity.

Fall River, Mass.—J. M. Meads is now the sole proprietor of the Rolling Rock Greenhouses, on Marsh street. The business was founded by Meads & Durfee, but in June of this year Mr. Meads assumed entire control. He has a downtown store on Quequechan street. He gives special attention to hardy plants and he furnished the plants for the grounds of the city waterworks this year. The greenhouses derive their name from the Rolling Rock, which is a short distance from them.

Seed Trade News.

It is high time the catalogue was on the press.

The German seeds are coming forward much earlier than last year—but Germany had only fair crops.

The J. Steckler Seed Co., New Orleans, is now in the forty-fifth year of the business, which was founded by Richard Frotscher.

There are quite a few seed houses that would like to branch out if only they could find capable people to put in charge of the departments.

The prospect for holly is not favorable. There will, of course, be some first-class stock, but the quantity of the best grade appears to be steadily diminishing.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has begun its 1911 distribution of congressional free seeds, the southern states having received allotments as early as November 15.

It seems likely that bouquet green has passed as the great staple Christmas decoration. Unless new sources of supply are developed the quantity coming to market will diminish from year to year.

The last boat from Hamburg brought 1,454 bags of grass seeds and 446 bags of clover seeds, all consigned "to order," which looks like a way of not divulging all one's business to the government and others who have access to the customs house records.

With seeds in season, plants in spring, insecticides in early summer, florists' bulbs in August, Dutch bulbs later and greens for the holidays, a good many seedsmen now manage to operate the business on the plan of the continuous performance, with frequent change of headliner.

The seed trade is represented by George S. Green, of the Illinois Seed Co., and Charles D. Boyles, of the Albert Dickinson Co., on the committee of the Council of North American Grain Exchanges, which seeks to secure an improvement in seed and an increased yield per acre of the important cereals.

ordinary course of events would be the last meeting until after the seed season of 1911. While there was some difference of opinion among those present, it was not so much over the values of seeds as it was over the prices it is good policy to charge. Some of the leading houses prefer to distribute their stocks among their regular customers at prices that under the circumstances are moderate, rather than to sell to others at what the seeds really are worth under the law of supply and demand. Some of the advance wholesale lists have already been issued on that principle, and mailed.

THE HOLMES FIRE.

The Associated Press sent out, November 22, a report of the fire at Harrisburg, Pa., which would have led to the belief that the Holmes Seed Co. had suffered a great disaster. Mr. Holmes makes the following statement:

"In reply to your inquiry regarding our fire, would state same occurred Tuesday, November 22, inflicting a loss of $15,000 on our store and offices. However, the amount is fully covered by insurance. Our mailing lists, valuable assets, and all other papers were safely removed. Extremely fortunate was the fact that $20,000 worth of seed had been removed some three weeks ago to the new warehouse, outside the burned district. We expect to be ready for business in our old place in about ten days, as our loss was principally by water."

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS YOUNG.

Returning to Philadelphia from a western trip, November 28, W. Atlee Burpee put his o. k. on the final pages of his catalogue—the thirty-fifth anniversary edition.

To give the printers a chance to catch up, Mr. Burpee spent Thanksgiving day with his younger sons, who are at the military academy at Culver, Ind., and called on friends in Chicago November 26. He had in his pocket an advance copy of his M. G. list, not yet mailed, that was scanned with interest by those who still are wrestling with the problem of fixing prices. Mr. Burpee thinks peas are too high priced this year for market gardeners to plant them; he says that in the forthcoming general catalogue no quantities larger than pecks are quoted, with prices that range from $2.75 to $4—an advance was made after the pages were in type that is more than justified by later developments. Across the foot of one of the pages of peas Mr. Burpee speaks of the Down in the little village of Ollioules, France, near the famous old city of Toulon, lives a man very prominent in France; a man of sterling qualities, culture, refinement, education and wealth. This man is one of the best hearted men who ever lived. Being a student of nature, he is much interested in flowers and incidentally is the largest grower and exporter of French bulbs in the world. His name is Martial Bremond, and he is the successor of his father, Mr. Louis Bremond, the founder of the French bulb industry in Ollioules.

Bremond's bulbs are known all over the world (and they are marketed everywhere), as the best French bulbs produced—no exceptions. Years of labor have brought about such results. You can't buy better French bulbs because there are none better to buy. In this country they are labeled Horseshoe Brand Bulbs; bulbs of Mr. Bremond's production, and they are the most economical to buy because they give better results than any other brand known.

practical failure of pea crops in this country and says they were fortunate in being able to increase their supply of some of the most popular varieties by purchases made in England. Since that was written they find they were perhaps not so fortunate as they thought; their agent is having his own troubles in getting possession of the quantities bargained for.

Mr. Burpee regards the prospect for peas in the next year or two as full of uncertainties. So many factors enter into the calculations that the return of a normal market cannot be foreseen with the arrival of a good crop year. This is the third successive bad crop and growers of peas for seeds are disgusted. Some of them are giving up the business. It will take considerably more money to get peas grown next year.

California, the eastern end of Long Island, Denmark and, to a less extent, Holland, are the only countries of the world that harvested good crops of seeds in 1910 and Mr. Burpee is enthusiastic over his Lompoc valley ranch, where Edwin Lonsdale and his wife are happily domiciled. He has a fund of local anecdote to illustrate the depth and richness of the soil and believes the climate ideal for many seed crops. California sweet peas, already going to Eng-

SMITH'S PEERLESS is the finest strain known to the trade. Large, high, rounded flowers, double to the center. Being high quality, they are shy seeders; in fact, the whole question of price depends upon the quality of the flowers. San Juan is $18 per acre. Mr. Warnock and his son, with their teams, will remain in the service of Mr. Rohnert for the present. The spirit of seed-planting is increasing among the San Juan farmers and some of them are about to turn their ranches into seed farms. The Morse Seed Co., which has 900 acres of its own land near San Juan, has leased other large tracts and has already built a Chinatown to accommodate its Chinese and Japanese laborers. There will soon be a fine residence erected on the company's premises for the use of the manager, Thomas Landrum, whose removal from this community leaves a void hard to fill."

MAINE THIRD AS CORN PACKER.

According to a report of the Maine Bureau of Labor and Industrial Statistics, that state stands third among the states of the Union in value of corn packed, being surpassed only by New York and Illinois. An investigation of this industry in 1900 showed sixty-eight corn canning establishments then in operation, with a total pack of 22,100,000 cans, valued at $1,519,374.45. Returns made this year show that ninety-five factories were in operation during the packing season.

Ten years ago the farmers received $1.50 per hundred pounds of corn as cut from the cob. The price was later raised to $2 and the present year contracts have been made at the rate of $2.25 per hundred pounds. Fully ninety per cent of the Maine corn pack is put up in the seven counties of Androscoggin, Cumberland, Franklin, Kennebec, Oxford, Penobscot and Somerset, while a few factories are located in Knox, Piscataquis, Waldo and York.

BULBS

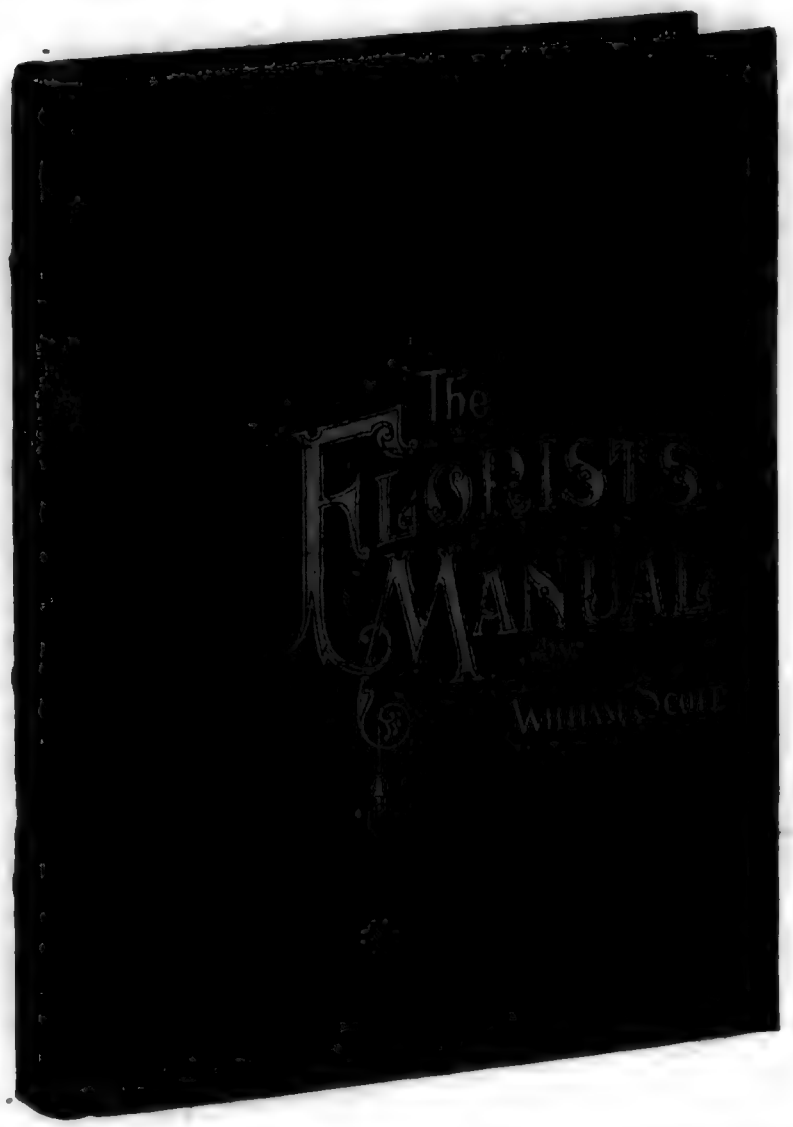
Selling Rapidly



Although we ordered 25% more bulbs than were ever sold by us heretofore, the demand has been so heavy that our stock is rapidly decreasing. We still have a fair supply of all the leading kinds. Better buy your bulbs from the best stock, rather than take chances at sacrifice prices. If you want success next spring, place your order of bulbs with us this fall. Do it now. They will be sold out a little later.

PACIFIC COAST.

VICTORIA, B. C.

A meeting of the Victoria Florists', Nurserymen's & Gardeners' Association was held in A. J. Woodward's store November 17. It was well attended and considerable business came up for discussion.

A communication was received from the board of trade asking the society to appoint a committee to coöperate with the fruit growers' committee and also the committee appointed by the board of trade in gathering information to be presented to both the dominion and provincial governments in regard to the establishing of a plant here for the inspection and fumigation of imported fruit trees and horticultural plants.

The nurserymen, as well as the fruit growers, are experiencing great hardships through having to send all the perishable plants to Vancouver for inspection. For the purpose of obviating these grievances the various committees will petition both governments.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

In a general way it may be said that Thanksgiving business was up to the mark of last year, but it was not what it should have been, considering the beautiful weather we are having.

An effort was made a few days ago to raise the prices on all kinds of stock. The mum growers, owing to the fact that they are few in numbers, did well and insisted on an increase of about forty per cent over the quotations of the previous week, but the carnation growers who tried the same game came to grief early in the week and carnations can now be bought fully as cheaply as at any time this fall. This may appear strange, but owing to the great number of the growers and the want of unison among them, the retailers had the advantage and along these lines low prices prevailed. In roses there was also an abundance and, save for a little fancy stock, there was no difficulty in getting plenty of flowers. Other blossoms were as usual and there was no complaint of short supply. The Christmas red berries are beginning to make themselves a factor in the retail trade and promise to be as popular this season as ever before. Narcissi are coming into town in fair sized quantities and, with the advent of rain, which at the present time is much needed, we should be treated to an avalanche of hardy stock. Although it is somewhat early to hear reports from many of the surrounding towns, it is safe to say that the conditions prevailing in town are but an echo of those in the interior towns.

Various Notes.

Chester A. Hutchinson, of Berkeley, has disposed of his Telegraph avenue store in that town and will retire from the retail florist trade.

W. H. Swanigan has opened a retail store on Eleventh street, near Washington, Oakland.

The Trumbull Seed Co. has removed to the Hanford block from 61 California street, where they were previously located.

W. H. Kooyman, of the J. Seulberger Co., of Oakland, has returned from a three months' trip to Holland.

George Blake is on a trip through the southern part of California and will be out of town for about three weeks. G.

TREE PLANTING IN CALIFORNIA.

Much dissatisfaction is often caused among the public in the planting of trees and shrubbery in California's heavy adobe soil. Not that the ground in California is entirely composed of this sort of material, but there certainly is a large percentage of it, especially in some localities.

To cover the roots in a sandy or loose, loamy soil needs but little care, if it is well packed and the tree has plenty of moisture both at the time and for a sufficient period afterward. It is with the stiff, clay soil that so many mishaps occur. The first thought along these lines is to see what drainage the struggling plant is likely to obtain. Where the ground is loose and mellow and will not naturally run together, the drainage is usually provided for, except in an extremely low spot, and even here the water usually finds a way to drain off. Not so with our adobe. Here the gardener has to be always on the watch—first about the natural slope of the planting ground, then about the artificial drain which must be created for the imprisoned roots, and then the quality of the soil with which the excavation is filled and the chances of sufficient moisture at the root, with the proper amount of root drainage during the dry season. The fact that these rules are not taken into consideration by many a tree planter is the cause of most of the failures in the handling of hardy outside stock in California.

Assuming that the tree is in good shape at planting time and should continue growing without interruption, the lay of the ground with reference to the imprisoned roots is of vital interest. If it is a conifer, or any of the well known trees not requiring an excess of water, the conditions must be changed either by changing the slope, filling in or regrading, or planting more suitable trees. When this has been regulated so that the natural moisture will not stand where it will cause damage, then the digging of the holes claims our attention. Usually these are made too wide in proportion to their depth. It is a great mistake to give roots much more room than they need for their proper spreading out.

Have plenty of soil of the same nature as that excavated to fill in with. This is of the utmost importance, for there is no doubt that many thousands of trees have been destroyed by the pernicious habit of filling in around the roots with sand when the outlying soil was heavy adobe. In the first place, loose, sandy soil does not furnish much support to a heavy stem in case of a strong wind, and it is easy for the roots to become partly exposed to the later drying winds. In the second place, if the surrounding soil is heavy, the filled in soil acts as a sponge and holds so much water in suspense that the roots get an excess and the tree water-kills. On the other hand, if an outlet is provided, the water will run out too fast and the desired moisture will not be obtained at the root. Again, in the subsequent waterings, if the tree was planted with a ball of earth, it is much more natural for the moisture to follow the lines of least resistance, in which case it will make no effort to moisten the contained roots, but will escape in the surrounding sand. Therefore, by all means use the same soil that surrounds the root to fill in with. If there is danger of drought, use plenty of water when planting, but be sure to tamp the ground well around the roots and leave a depression around the stem for subsequent waterings.

It makes little difference whether the stock consists of evergreens or deciduous material, the same rules apply, and if they were properly understood by planters there would be fewer complaints about trees dying for no apparent reason. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

A RECENTLY published bulletin of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society is entitled, "Experiments With Phloxes," and is by the society's president, C. S. Harrison, of York.

NURSERYMEN of the northwest predict that the big crop of apples in the states that ship in bushel boxes will not affect the market prices for the fruit and that the call for trees will go right on increasing.

HARVEY C. STILES, formerly of Raymondville, Tex., but now located in the State of Coahuila, Mexico, has been engaged by the Texas State Department of Agriculture to inspect the nursery stock of the Mexican nurserymen and florists who desire to do business in Texas.

A FEW years ago it was commonly said that the time was not far distant when nursery men would be burning their peach trees through failure to find any other disposition for them. To judge by what is happening to prices this season, that day is indefinitely postponed.

WHEN a man gets rich quick it is not to be expected that he can wait for his trees to grow. Hence the unusually large number of orders the big tree movers have on their books for the coming winter. With a frozen ball hundred-dollar specimens now are moved with as much certainty of success as a seedling is transplanted.

NOT long ago Wm. A. Peterson was awarded $96,000 as damages against the Chicago Sanitary Commission, which has bisected Peterson Nursery with a drainage canal, but he has now contributed $4,000 to a neighborhood fund for a bridge across the big ditch. Mr. Peterson says the canal has improved the tilth of his 500 acres.

NURSERY stock in France, Belgium, Holland and England will be scarce this season and higher in price for some years to come, close observers figure. The trouble is that the cost of land and labor is increasing in those countries just as in America. Other pursuits have presented better opportunities for profit and the production of the items largely exported has not in general kept pace with the increase in demand.

BLUEBERRY CULTURE.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has found by experiment how blueberries differ from ordinary plants in their methods of nutrition and in their soil requirements, and by means of this knowledge it has worked out a system of pit culture under which these plants attain a development beyond all previous expectations. The failure heretofore of attempts to cultivate blueberries commercially as a market fruit, appears to be due to a misunderstanding of the soil requirements of the plants, which, as these experiments show, are radically different from those of our common cultivated plants.

The market would gladly pay a higher price for cultivated blueberries of superior quality. A marked distinction should be made in market quotations between the large, plump blueberry (genus vaccinium), the seeds of which are so small as to be almost unnoticed when they are being eaten, and the huckleberry (genus gaylussacia), in which the seed is surrounded by a bony covering like a minute peach pit, which crackles between the teeth. The failure to make this distinction in nomenclature, and the unsightly condition in which careless handling often presents the berries to the buyer, are the cause of much of the failure in southern markets to appreciate the blueberry at its real value. As the blueberry withstands the rough treatment incident to shipment so much better than most other berries, with proper handling it should always reach the market in first-class condition, whether shipped from North Carolina to Boston in early June, or Nova Scotia to Washington in late September, making the blueberry season cover a period of nearly four months.

To those desiring to experiment with field culture of the swamp blueberry, whether with wild plants, seedlings, or plants grown from cuttings, two methods of treatment are suggested, both deduced from the experiments

A Grand New Carnation

outclasses everything heretofore grown in the dark pink section. Won first honors in the 100 class for best dark pink at the A. C. S. meeting, Pittsburg, January, 1910, also at the Chicago Flower Show, November, 1909.

It is a pure, bright, dark pink of even shade, size 3½ inches, an early and continuous bloomer, brings fully 25 per cent more flowers to the plant than Lawson at its best; flowers well shaped on long, wiry stems; calyx does not split. It is a good shipper, and the cuttings root easy.

already made. The first method, suited to upland soils, is to set the plants in trenches or separate holes in well-rotted peat at least a foot in depth, and mulch the surface well either with leaves or with clean sand. The excavations should provide ample space for new growth of the roots, and the peat used may be either of the bog or upland type, and should have been rotted for several months before using. The soil should afford good drainage, the ideal condition of the peat about the roots of the plant being one of continued moisture during the growing season, but with all the free water draining readily so that thorough aëration of the mass of peat is assured.

The second method of field culture suggested is to set the plants in a peat bog after the bog has been drained, turfed, and deeply mulched with sand, just as for cranberry culture, except that no special provision need be made for rapid flooding of the bog for winter, and the ground water of the bog might be kept a little lower than is usual with cranberries. Before beginning the work, these experiments should be carefully studied by any one proposing to undertake the culture of blueberries. A bulletin has been issued on the subject. It is No. 193 of the Bureau of Plant Industry.

NAME OF PLANT.

Please tell me the name, habitat and longevity of this plant, of which I send you a bloom and leaf. I have not seen anything more than this and want to know whether it is an annual or a hardy shrub. This one has been in bloom three months and no one here seems to know what it is. M. C. C.

It is Anemone Japonica alba, a valuable fall flowering, hardy herbaceous perennial. In the northern states it requires a liberal mulch of leaves or straw to prevent winter-killing, and is better planted in spring than fall. It is easily and abundantly propagated from root cuttings under glass. Flowers may be had from August until November. The value of these beautiful Japanese anemones is not half appreciated by commercial florists. They are fine for cutting and excellent in design work. One or two fine varieties are: Queen Charlotte, silvery pink; Whirlwind, double white; Japonica alba, single white; Prince Henry, double, deep pink; Lady Ardilaun, rosy purple. C. W.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Last week, with its Thanksgiving trade, was an especially busy one for the florists. Stock was plentiful and chrysanthemums, roses and carnations were at the top notch in price. Owing to the football game between Missouri and Kansas, the yellow and red mums were in great demand.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray, who has one of the finest cut flower stores in the west, reports that business was rushing for Thanksgiving. He also has two houses of exceptionally fine begonias.

Mrs. Emma Elberfield has opened a new cut flower store at 1016 Walnut street and reports business good.

C. L. Besser has some nice cyclamens and begonias for Christmas and reports a good Thanksgiving trade.

At the Rosary business was rushing for Thanksgiving. Some fine poinsettias are grown here, with some of the flowers twenty inches across. This concern also shows nice begonias. The houses are heated with fuel oil.

E. L.

OLEAN, N. Y.

Dana R. Herron held a formal opening of his new store on Saturday, November 19, and he estimated that there were about 7,000 callers. The decorations and furnishings are entirely of his own designing, and are as perfect and attractive as any I have seen on my travels. The decorations are in white and green. There is a white steel ceiling, from which white satin striped paper extends down to a pretty gilt molding, and the rest of the wall is finished with moss green burlap.

Behind the marble serving counter, mirrors are arranged along the wall for twenty-five feet, ending in an elaborate ribbon showcase. The showcase is a model, the upper part consisting of one large sheet of plate glass, raised by a dainty glass handle, and the back of the case is a mirror, covering it entirely. The lower part of the case consists of a series of drawers, which also have artistic handles.

The floor is covered with dark green linoleum. One side wall is almost concealed by white enameled shelving, filled with pretty jardinieres.

The renovation of the store cost Mr. Herron about $3,000. The citizens of Olean have good reason to be proud of this fine addition to their business district. It is to be hoped that he will receive the greatly increased patronage which he so well deserves. B.

Troy, N. Y.—Harvey Collins has purchased the Tenendaho greenhouses, on North Main street, and will continue the business.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The dark weather continued throughout last week and stock was quite scarce. Prices went up accordingly, but it was hard to dispose of the highest priced chrysanthemums and the same was the case in the violets. The wholesale price on violets went up to $1.25 and the sales were low. The medium priced mums sold the best of anything and sales of one and two flowers cleaned up hundreds. Carnations have been scarce ever since the dark weather began. All stock was cleaned up early. Pompons sold well and brought good prices. This variety grown in pots made a big hit and sold ahead of begonias, cyclamen or anything in flower. Sweet peas sold well, but there were few on the market.

Various Notes.

The several committees on the flower show have reported in full and results are satisfactory to everybody. This being the first show ever held on this plan and also the first show of any kind or size held in many years, it was rather hard to get the people to come. The attendance increased each day, which was gratifying to the members and also showed that another year it will be a big success.

Christmas stock is now being finished into shape by the different growers. Plants of every description are being shown and each year the demand seems to begin earlier. Poinsettias are now grown mostly in pans and by Christmas there will be some elegant stock on the market. Begonias at S. A. Anderson's are seen in perfection. Joe Streit takes delight in having the best begonias and has again succeeded.

Joseph Rebstock has retired from the business, after being one of Buffalo's leading florists for many years. The stock was sold at auction and the greenhouses, which adjoin the property of S. A. Anderson, were bought up by the latter. This addition will give Mr. Anderson valuable space, for which he has been lacking in the past.

All the florists made a specialty of fruit baskets this year and the windows were a feast for the eyes. R. A. S.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business was quite satisfactory last week. Stock of all kinds cleaned up nicely, except Beauties, which seemed too high priced for the trade to handle; but outside of that one flower, everything was cleaned up Saturday night. Chrysanthemums are over, except a few stragglers which will not be likely to cut much of a figure, and lilies, which had to take a back seat during chrysanthemum time, will now come into their own. Paper Whites and Romans are also with us in quantity and, if the dark weather we have been having continues, will be needed. Violets have not been overplentiful and are bringing better prices than last year, as the larger retail stores can do better with this flower when the street men do not have them.

Various Notes.

The retail shops all seem to be pleased with their share of the Thanksgiving business and report having an excellent trade. They also say that the outlook is good for two months' fine business, as the social calendar is filled with numerous affairs which will help us all. A more optimistic feeling seems to prevail than has been the case for a long time. The wholesale men say they are always thankful when chrysanthemums are gone, as there is little profit and a great deal of labor in handling them.

We are having continued dark weather, with an all-day rain November 28, which will probably make stock quite scarce.

John Madden, who returned from California some time ago, is in the Randolph & McClements Penn avenue store.

Hoo-Hoo.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business was good. Flowers were rather scarce, with a resultant increase in prices. Carnations retailed at 60 and 75 cents per dozen; roses, $2 per dozen, with a few as low as $1.50; Paper White, 60 cents; violets, $2 per hundred, and some nice mums were seen at $2.50 per dozen. The weather was ideal, thus greatly aiding in delivery.

Prices remain about the same this week, but mums are becoming scarce and will soon be entirely gone. Funeral work has been quite plentiful of late. Stevia is now to be seen here and is largely used for bouquets and design work.

Various Notes.

Friday, November 25, witnessed the big annual society ball of this city and large orders for flowers for the affair were handled by William P. Peirce, R. H. Woodhouse, E. H. Chamberlain, R. E. Nofftz, Peter Murray, William H. Davenport, and others. Roses and violets were principally used and Mr. Chamberlain says he sold 1,000 of the former and 2,600 of the latter, besides about 700 mums. Good prices were realized and they all were well satisfied with the trade for both Thanksgiving and Friday.

Peter Murray cut over 5,000 mums in his houses this season and his new house of carnations is in fine shape.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade in all its features was highly satisfactory to all concerned. The weather was clear and warm, making an ideal day for buying. The heaviest buying was done on Wednesday, but the demand continued well into the forenoon of Thursday to a surprising extent. The business of the week did not develop any unusual features to distinguish it from the same period last year, except the increased demand for large mums, and the embarrassment of many dealers who were unable to supply the demand for carnations and violets, for which the local market was entirely inadequate.

Chrysanthemums were on the market in great quantities and all the really good stock was sold out at remunerative prices, while much of that offered was poor and met with its well merited fate. Roses were in good demand, but the supply of good stock was short, as was that of all other varieties, and it had the effect of advancing the prices of the available stock. The remaining stock of mums now on the market includes little that is really good, and this week will mark their total disappearance from the retail counters and in their stead will be the increased stock of carnations now visible and the seasonable supply of bulbous stock.

Various Notes.

The annual exhibition of the Maryland State Horticultural Society and kindred societies opened at the Fifth Regiment Armory, Monday afternoon, November 28, and will continue the whole week. This year's exhibition gave promise of being the largest ever held by the society. The entire floor of the huge building was covered by tables bearing exhibits and even the company rooms were utilized to accommodate them. The public parks made an attractive exhibit in the form of beds planted with bedding stock and foliage plants. R. A. Vincent, Jr., gave an interesting lecture on the opening night on his trip abroad. Q.

Hanfield, Ind. — Mrs. Alfred A. Hacker is growing a choice grade of carnations and disposes of them readily.

Boulder, Colo.—It is reported that S. Knudsen is planning to go into the business of growing orchids for the cut blooms.

Catlettsburg, Ky.—Ida Hitchcock & Co., formerly located at Barbourville, Ky., are now located here. The firm's specialty is the gladiolus. Ida Hitchcock is president, John R. Hitchcock, treasurer, and John D. Hitchcock, secretary.

6 houses stocked with them, 10,000 in all sizes and varieties now ready, never before better than this year, 5, 6 and 7-in., 40c, 50c, 75c. Same varieties, as big as a bushel basket, $1.00 to $1.25.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine

Palms, etc.

Lead you into wealth

A house full of Godfrey Aschmann's Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in bloom and bud for Christmas, ready for shipment. We have Begonia Gloire de Lorraine to beat the band.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This is another of our specialties. We have a secret in growing them to perfection, only known to us, giving them a rich, deep color; stand shipping well, traveling 2000 to 3000 miles without the least bit of injury if properly handled. We have a big house full in No. 1 condition, 6 to 7-in. sizes, in bud and partly in bloom, ready for immediate sale or for the holidays. Everybody knows that last Christmas we had the best Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in the market. They were cracker-jacks, indeed! We have the deep pink and the light pink (Lonsdale) varieties, 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00; 7-in. pots, $1.25 to $1.50. 3-in. pots, if transplanted soon, will make good 4-in. pots for Xmas. If you have room order now, because they are always scarce at Xmas.

Begonia Erfordii, newest improved strain. This variety is always in bloom during the whole winter, Xmas and Easter, 4-in. pots, in bud or bloom, 20c.

Begonia Rex, 4-in., 20c.

AZALEA INDICA.

Already forced for Christmas, showing color now and stored away in cold houses ready for shipment. Deutsche Perle (pure double white), Simon Mardner (large double pink), Vervaeneana (double rose variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50 each. ☞ Remember, only the best healthy plants must be selected for Xmas forcing; poor, weak Azaleas won't force successfully for Xmas. Don't order many 75-cent sizes, because we won't have them. Larger sizes and also white ones must accompany the order.

Easter Varieties. For Easter forcing we have only the well known standard American varieties, such as Mme. Van der Cruyssen, pink (very scarce this fall in Belgium), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Niobe, double white. We have a large stock of this, but mostly in large sizes, $1.00, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00; some, but a limited quantity, at 50c, 60c to 75c. Deutsche Perle, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Helene Theleman, light pink, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. President Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. SPRINGFIELD, O.

The Reeser Plant Co. was incorporated November 23, under the laws of Ohio, to succeed the partnership heretofore existing under the name of Reeser & Youngstrand. Charles O. Youngstrand, who has been associated with Mr. Reeser for the last two years, will go to Glen View, Ill., where he will engage in landscape gardening. The new company will have a capital stock of $12,000, the officers being Harry C. Reeser, president; C. A. Schafer, vice-president; Arthur J. Todd, secretary, and J. F. Businger, treasurer, who, with John M. Good and Jonathan S. Kitchen, form the board of directors. Five acres of land at the corner of Johnson avenue and Clay street are owned by the company, on which are four modern greenhouses, each 20x120, making a glass area of 12,500 square feet, in addition to which 200 hotbed sashes are worked. The business will be strictly a wholesale one, and no local retail trade or mail order retail catalogue business will be sought. A general line of plants for the wholesale trade will be grown, including salvias, coleus, cyclamens, primroses, hydrangeas, ferns, poinsettias, bedding plants, etc. Mr. Reeser will be in charge of the growing and selling departments and, with his lifelong experience as a practical florist, together with the backing of ample capital and a progressive board of directors, will certainly make an excellent showing in due time.

At the November meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club a table of chrysanthemums was exhibited by the veteran local florist, Clinton L. Reese, the collection including splendid blooms of several rare varieties which were greatly admired by all members.

The older floral concerns have begun a gradual process of rebuilding their houses, the life of structures on wood posts and gutters appearing to be about seventeen years. The Good & Reese Co. has rebuilt this fall three 20x100-foot houses, and the Schmidt & Botley Co. four 20x100-foot houses. The latter are constructed with angle gutters placed about seven feet above the ground. Ge Dale.

Lowellville, O.—R. J. Erskine & Son, who conduct greenhouses here, recently applied to the secretary of state for letters of incorporation, and the capitalization was placed at $15,000. Mr. Erskine states that the properties of the concern are valued at $11,000, and that $4,000 will go into treasury stock, to be used for the extension of the business later, if desired. The company owns nine acres and has one-half acre under glass.

DISCOLORED PALM LEAVES.

I am sending you under separate cover a portion of a diseased palm leaf. The plant was in apparently perfect health until about ten days ago. Since then this leaf has turned brown, as you see it, and now there is another one going the same way. Can you tell me the trouble and a remedy?

C. L. W.

The specimen in question proves to be a portion of an areca leaf, and its appearance indicates either that it has been subjected to a chill, or that it has been affected by some insecticide in which the plant may have been dipped. Without further information as to the conditions under which it has been growing, it is not easy to diagnose the trouble or to suggest a remedy.

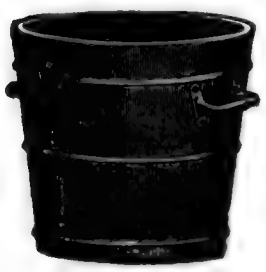
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Jennie D. Livingston's greenhouses, on Lake avenue, are devoted almost exclusively to violets, and her years of patient study and experimenting have resulted in the production of a strictly high grade of flowers.



Eli Cross has a series of houses so closely set and so well protected by banking that he probably has one of the most economically operated plants in the city. His force of helpers is now extremely busy, both at the greenhouses and at the downtown store.

Near the entrance to John Ball park are the greenhouses of W. L. Cukerski. Though landscape work is his specialty, yet he has a good sized range of houses. At present he is engaged in laying out the grounds on several estates in Muskegon and in Cadillac. His master hand can be seen on almost every street in this city, for one can go scarcely a block without seeing a lawn whose artistic beauty is the product of his skill.

East Hadley, Mass.—The two original houses of the Montgomery Co., each 41x500, are now being connected by a third house, 28x140, extending across the ends. These houses are devoted principally to Beauties, Richmond and the two Killarneys.

Greenhouse Heating.

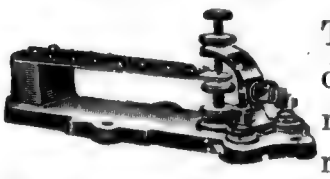
WINTER will soon be here and the movement of freight trains will be impeded by cold. Already all the gondolas are in use and soon there will be the annual cry of car shortage. By the way, how much coal have you got on the place?

ADVANCE FREIGHT ON COAL.

For months the coal consumers of Chicago have been fighting an advance of 10 cents per ton in the freight on coal from Illinois mines. November 29 the Illinois Railroad and Warehouse Commission, which has had the matter under advisement, granted the railroads the right to push up their charges 7 cents per ton and the new rates will go into effect December 10.

The result will be an advance of 7 cents or more per ton in the cost of all fuel consumed in Chicago, including that for the great greenhouse establishments, for if Illinois coals cost more the prices of the eastern coals will, of course, be pushed up a corresponding degree.

SIZE OF EXPANSION TANK.



Is it possible to have an expansion tank too large for a hot water heater? My boiler is rated for 900 feet of radiation and I have a 4-barrel tank for expansion. What ought to be the size of the tank? F. G.

There is no particular objection to having a large expansion tank, although nothing is gained by having an extremely large one. The size really needed will depend upon the size of the piping, as well as the water capacity of the boiler and the maximum and minimum temperature of the water in the system. The capacity of the tank should be about twice the increased volume of the water in the system caused by its expansion when heated, thus providing an ample supply to fill the pipes as the water cools. A 10-gallon tank will generally answer for 900 feet of radiation.

HELPS FOR THE CIRCULATION.

Heating systems are like newspapers—they are ineffective if they do not circulate. Because a good many heating systems, like some publications the writer of this note has heard about but knows not of, have only intermittent circulation, heating engineers have given a great deal of attention lately to the development of devices to remedy the difficulties. Of late these devices have been largely along the line of bringing the principle of the vacuum to the aid of the florist. The most recent apparatus of this character to be tried in greenhouses is an automatic electric condensation pump manufactured by the Chicago Pump Co. and said to be a fuel saver wherever steam is the heating medium. The cut shows how the apparatus looks. The manufacturer says that "when a given quantity of water enters the tilt receiving tank it acts upon the automatic regulator and starts the pump and motor, which causes the water to be pumped from this tank into the boiler. The pumping of the water from the tank creates a vacuum in it, which in turn draws the condensation and air through the coils and return pipes. This causes hotter steam to be drawn through the heating system, thus causing the radiators to heat up quickly and also getting hotter return water for the boiler."

Save Your Stock From Destruction

By a sudden cold snap or a rapid thaw

HOW? Because it is an accurate, fully tested thermometer, showing the correct temperature at all times, and combines a device which will ring a bell at your bedside when the greenhouse gets either too hot or too cold. Just the protection you have wanted all these years.

We guarantee that results will be obtained at all times. This device has been subjected to the severest tests in our laboratory for over two years, and at the same time has given entire satisfaction, under all conditions, to many users in the trade.

All you have to do is to set the pointers at the highest and lowest temperatures you want and the thermometer will do the rest. It will ring a good, loud bell when either point is reached, and saves all worry over trouble from sudden temperature changes.

it to be run at 45 to 50 degrees at night. This part has raised benches. The other part is ten feet wide, eighteen feet long and two feet high at the sides, with a sunken walk and solid beds. It is to have a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees at night. We thought we might use about four rows of 2-inch pipe for the 40-foot part and three rows of 2-inch pipe for the 18-foot part. What do you think? In case we use four rows of 2-inch pipe, would it be best to use two flows and two returns or one flow and three returns, or does it make any difference?

Inasmuch as the lowest part of the house is the farthest from the boiler, would it be satisfactory to run the flow along the ridge of the low part of the house and then, on entering the high part, make a sharp turn and run along the sides near the glass or eaves, because if we kept on through the center of the higher house at the proper elevation, it would be in the way of the plants? In other words, would an angle in the flow pipe interfere with the circulation if the pitch is correct? Is the radiation of 2-inch pipe as satisfactory as its equivalent in 1½-inch pipe? If so, it will be quite a little cheaper to use 2-inch. Also, in case only one flow pipe is used, would you advise using one of the holes in the boiler and plugging the other, or would it be better to have two pipes enter the top of the boiler and unite them near the boiler? The boiler, which is a Wilks upright, 20x36, stands three feet ten inches on its base and is set two feet below the level of the greenhouse. Is that correct? We cannot well dig lower. We have an expansion tank,

MOREHEAD STEAM TRAPS

Foster Pressure Regulator

With this simple device attached to your steam main just inside the greenhouse the pressure on the heating coils will be absolutely constant, anywhere from 1 to 15 pounds (whatever the grower sets the Regulator at), no matter how the pressure on the boilers runs up and down.

If the weather changes, or the sun heat varies, instead of turning on more pipes, just turn a nut on the Regulator, and get more steam, or less steam, at once. Made in sizes from ¾-inch to 10-inch just for this work.

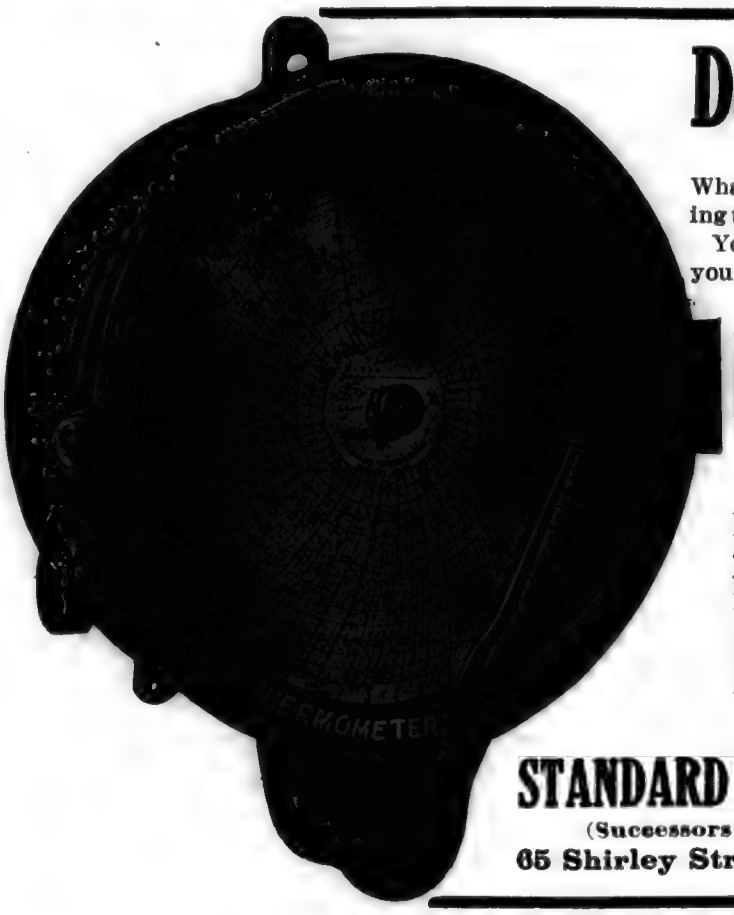
with a water glass but no safety valve, which we have been told would be unnecessary even if the boiler were level with the greenhouse. C. G. J. & S.

The size and other data given are the same as in the previous communication, and the advice given requires no change.



In case a closed system is used, there should be a safety valve on the expansion tank; otherwise it will not be necessary. One 2-inch flow will answer, although there would be no objection to using two, except that they might be in the way. It would be better to use one 2½-inch. The flow should rise to a height just below the bottom of the ridge, at the boiler, and then run at a slight fall to the end of the 40-foot house, where it should drop so as to run under the ridge of the other house. At the farther end take off two 2-inch pipes, each of which should supply two 2-inch returns. It will not be wise to try to heat the house with less than five 2-inch pipes.

So far as radiation is concerned, the size of the pipe makes no difference. Two-inch pipe is best for medium and large houses. Unless there is more than 200 square feet of radiation, one 2-inch flow pipe, with one connection to the boiler, will be sufficient. Set the boiler as low as possible, and keep the flow and return pipes as high as possible, especially if an open system is used.

BOILER RUNS DRY.

We have recently put a steam heating system in our church. The system fails to work, and I, being a member of the seed trade, am naturally impelled to apply to The Review for information. We have a lecture room, with the audience room directly over it. The boiler is located at the rear end of the church, in a cellar seven feet below the surface. We have no radiators, but coils of 2½-inch pipe running along the sides of the rooms. The boiler has three openings on top, but the plumber used but one, plugging the other two. When fire is built and steam turned on, the water is quickly drawn up the pipes, emptying the boiler. What is the reason for this? J. R. H.

Nothing is said regarding the arrangement of the piping, and it may be that the trouble is the result of there being no way for the water to get back to the boiler after the steam has condensed in the coils. It is understood that the water in the boiler passes into the pipes in the form of steam, rather than that it is drawn into the pipes in a liquid form.

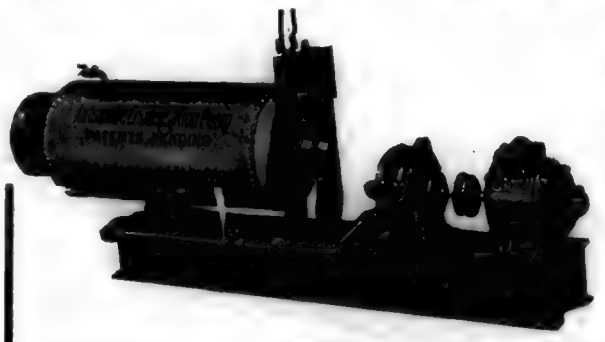
The fact that 2½-inch pipe is used for the coils necessitates the use of twice as much water to fill the coils with steam as when 1¼-inch pipe is used. This may account for the trouble, if the boiler capacity is small, and the remedy would be smaller pipes or a larger boiler.



If one pipe is used for a common flow and return, it may be too small to permit the drip water to get back to the boiler. The best thing is to make sure that the returns have a slight fall, and that they are directly connected with the boiler.

A CHANGE OF PLANS.

I noted your reply to my question on page 96 of The Review of November 10, in which you stated that both my Le Bosquet heaters would probably be needed to heat my new house. But I do not wish to run two boilers to heat this house. Besides, I have just purchased four greenhouses in Haverhill, Mass. Two of them are each 14x90, one is 15x70 and the other is 24x70. With them I bought a No. 17 Hitchings boiler, new or nearly so, and also another boiler, of which we have not yet ascertained the condition. We are taking these houses all down, to move them here, so it will be necessary to change my plans for heating.

Now, as to the new house, 25x100, how would you pipe it? I will set the boiler at the north end and use the Hitchings boiler to heat the new house. If I extend this house north 150 feet, do you not think a No. 17 boiler of this make will take care of the entire house, 25x250? As this boiler has 4-inch pipes, would it be advisable to run a single flow along the center of the house, overhead, and drop at the south end, bringing the returns back in the way you outlined—that is, placing 2-inch returns under the benches, three under the propagating bench and ten under the other benches? At just what point would you break up the 4-inch flow from the ridge into 2-inch returns? Or would you run the 4-inch up from the boiler to the height desired, run a branch right and left, and reduce to 2½-inch flows, running one on each side of the house and dropping into 2-inch returns, as before? This will leave one extra flow from the boiler to use in an additional house.

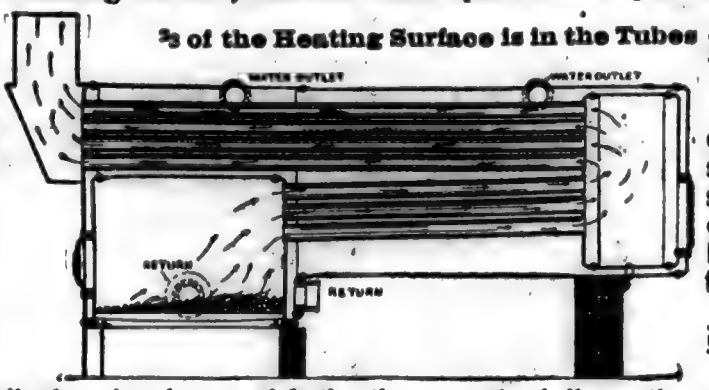
Perhaps it will not work to break up a 4-inch into two 2½-inch flows, return in thirteen 2-inch returns and connect them with a 4-inch receiving pipe. There are about 700 feet of this 4-inch pipe that are good, but I can sell it if you think it will work to break up at the extreme end of the greenhouse.

C. F. N.

For large houses it is a good plan to use 2½-inch flow pipes and 2-inch returns, although good results can be obtained with 4-inch pipe if the boiler can be sunk several feet below the returns. While 4-inch flow pipes might be carried on the plates, it is not desirable to have them at the ridge.



The best way would be to run three overhead 2½-inch flow pipes, one under the ridge and one on each plate, each of which could supply a coil of three 2-inch returns, with an extra pipe under the propagating bench. The 4-inch flow could start at the boiler and rise to a point two feet below the ridge, where it could be broken up into three 2½-inch flows, each of which should run downhill at a slight fall to the farther end of the house. If the 4-inch main is run overhead, carry it to the farther end of the house and then break it up, as just directed.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business in most cases was much better than last year. Stock of all kinds was plentiful, but it was pretty well cleaned up. Chrysanthemums probably sold better than anything else, the medium sizes being in demand. Violets were of good quality and brought top-notch prices. Carnations moved well and were of extra good quality. Orchids and valley, mostly in corsages, sold well.

The florists at the Indianapolis Flower Market report a satisfactory business for Thanksgiving. The weather was unusually fine this year, which is quite a factor in their business. By night the flowers were pretty well cleaned up, most of them bringing good prices. These florists had their usual advertising in the daily papers, announcing their special display of flowers for Thanksgiving.

Various Notes.

Smith & Young Co. has been sending in some extra fine Brides and Maids.

The auto repair bills for some of the local florists were heavy last week. The delivery truck of Bertermann Bros. Co. ran into a log wagon, putting the auto in the repair shop for a couple of days. It did not damage the log wagon. The car of Wiegand & Sons had a collision with another auto, putting them both out of commission for a while. Homer Wiegand had a collision with another car, almost tearing the top off the other one.

E. A. Nelson has been enjoying some splendid luck hunting.

Charles Pahud is the father of a bright, smiling, ten-pound girl.

S. S. Skidelsky and J. McHuchison were in the city last week. Both report business good.

The Market.

Trade was heavy here for Thanksgiving, much heavier than last year, with a fine lot of stock. Mums were never better and a great many more than usual were on the market. All the trade reports business far ahead of last year, and everything was cleaned up in good shape. Roses were in ample supply and the demand was good. Quite a few Beauties were handled, mostly of the medium stems. Carnations were in great demand, as usual, and the supply was heavy. Enchantress and White Enchantress were well in crop and the quality was never better at this season. There were few plants sold; some good Lorraine begonias and azaleas were on the market, but demand was rather light on them, as most of the call was for cut stock.

There were several large funerals at Thanksgiving time that used up lots of stock, and for two days following it was hard to get enough stock to go around. Mums are pretty well cut out now, just a few stragglers, but the demand still keeps up. However, in another week or so they will be a thing of the past.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club gave a dance November 16, with a nice crowd present.

C. A. Roth reports business heavy, especially in funeral work. He still has some good mums coming.

Sherman Stephens says business was heavy out his way for Thanksgiving, with mums about cleaned up.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is about cleaned up on mums, and is cutting some extra fine carnations with good stems and large blooms. This company had quite a few good Lorraine begonias.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports heavy business for Thanksgiving and also funeral work and quite a few weddings booked ahead.

The Munk Floral Co. is cutting heavily on roses now and is about cleaned up on mums.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A UNIQUE DESIGN.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of a unique design recently made to fill an order given the Alpha Floral Co., Kansas City. It was a plaque mounted on an easel, the latter not showing. The center was filled solidly with plumosus sprays, on which in the center was a birch bark cross. The outer edge was cork bark fastened securely to the frame, trimmed with flowers and the richly colored perpetuated oak foliage now sold by the leading supply houses. Intended for the funeral of an elderly man, the piece was not only distinct but artistic and comparatively inexpensive.

THE BRIDAL RING OR WREATH.

Two Popular Forms.

Much use has recently been made of two special forms of the bridal wreath, one in which the ring shows a predominance of green and one composed more largely of valley. The construction of the two may be the same. The design is graceful, and capable of many pleasing variations. Let us speak of the green one first.

For the use of a bride of medium height, who does not care for a showy piece, select a heavy end of a string of Asparagus plumosus, about fifty-four to sixty inches long. Remove the thorns (yes, it is a job), and bring the ends together to form a circle. Fasten with wire, and work the ends out of sight and where they cannot catch or scratch. Special attention should be paid to the quality and size of the leaves when selecting this piece of asparagus, not choosing either the largest or the smallest. Some light foliage, along with the more mature, will make the choicest setting for this dainty piece of workmanship.

If a suitably heavy string of asparagus is not at hand, make it by combining a number of smaller ones into a good, springy piece, which can hold itself in place and "then some."

Arrangement of the Flowers.

The flowers used can be anything dainty enough for the bride, but of the choicest quality, such as would be required for a shower bouquet. The width of the green framework should be four to six inches.

About fifty valley will be required for filling in the ring. Wire from three to six sprays of valley on a strand of No. 26 or No. 28 wire in 12-inch or 18-inch lengths. Draw these bunches through the asparagus from front to back, allowing some to lie lengthwise and some to stand out prominently. Trace a line of valley irregularly around the right side of the ring, and a little differently inclined line along the center of the left side of the wreath. After drawing the fastening of the valley through to the back, secure it well to the asparagus stems and sink the free end of the stems somewhere, to guard against future mischief to the fair arm or sleeve. Wire the stems of six orchids and draw them through the asparagus, fastening in the same way; let them have a loose swing out from the asparagus, in two groups.

A Wise Precaution.

It will be better to fill the piece in a hanging position, just as it will be carried, for if it is made on a flat surface and then hung up, you will see some surprising changes of position and a falling out of line of the loosely fastened flowers. It is a good plan to have a few hooks on a clean wall in the workroom for this purpose, and for making and hanging showers.

The large rosette which usually is placed at the top of the ring may be either one large, full-blown, extra fine white rose, or a group of three drawn closely together and wired firmly, or a chiffon rosette, or a white satin or ribbon rose, such as is used for hat trimming, hair or neck dressing. The latter are made by experts at ribbon work or by experienced millinery trimmers.

Making a Chiffon Rosette.

The chiffon rosette can be made by a handy florist. Get either a milliner's rose center or a natural rose stem from which the petals have fallen and the stamens are still left. This is the center of the chiffon rose. Measure off twelve to fifteen yards of 6-inch or 10-inch chiffon, according to the size desired. Roll loosely around the rose stamens as a low center. Before picking up the roll, tie it tightly at one edge, which shall be the bottom of the rose, with wire, about No. 24. Leave a piece suitable for the stem or wrap spirally about the rose stem. Our chiffon rose is yet in bud. Loosen the outer edges of the chiffon by pulling downward or cutting here and there in the shape of rose petals. Continue this process till the rose has loosened sufficiently to show the center. Throw some of the outer petals back over the stem and add any little characteristic twists which a full-blown rose may assume.

Attach this rosette firmly to the top edge of the ring, so that it will stay in place in handling. Set in firmly through the green and wire it from each side, so that it can not possibly be misplaced.

The Shower.

The ring proper is now completed and we will proceed to the shower, which may consist of two drapery groups. Let the first be a cluster of loops fastened under the rose, the ends all caught and tied with a short piece of the same ribbon, first gathered into one tight knot and then fastened around the stem of the wreath under the foliage and not around the foliage. About a bolt of No. 3 ribbon in satin or gauze, caught in loops about twenty-four inches long to allow for the loose drape, will supply material for the upper shower.

The lower ends are caught and secured in the same way, except that, instead of being tied together, they are tied at two or three points, thus spreading the lower part of the drape.

Two more bolts of No. 3 ribbon will be required to make the lower part of the shower. It is made of lengths and loops of the ribbon drapery hanging from the inside edge of the lowest arc of the ring. The loops are composed of three to five strands of ribbon each, caught together here and there with short ties of the same ribbon in square bows, which occasionally include a spray of valley or foliage or a small asparagus leaf. The top of each loop is fastened to the stem of the wreath. Thus each loop is composed of a series of bows and hanging ends of ribbon and the shower is composed of a number of loops hanging parallel but of uneven lengths. The upper portions of the loops should be slightly heavier than the lower, with more bows and flowers.

To save rehandling the piece, complete all the loops to be used in the shower and hang them in convenient places before fastening any of them on the ring.

The skirt measure of the bridal gown should be in your possession, so that you can allow a few ends to fall even with the bottom of the skirt when the ring is held in correct position, just above the waist line.

A Heavy Wreath of Valley.

Another variation of the wreath, as stated in the beginning of this article, is much heavier with valley, both in the body of the ring and in the shower, than the form that has just been described. From 200 to 300 valley will be needed for this heavier and showier outfit. The same amount of green and the same process will make the ring. If, when this piece is finished and has been tested, it proves too heavy to retain its shape, reinforce it at the back with a spiral strand of No. 21 wire, which will draw the stems of asparagus firmly together and help them to keep to the circular shape. Or, if more convenient, imbed the ring in an empty wreath frame, fasten here and there to the wire and baste a white ribbon or other clean white fabric against the back of the frame to protect the sleeve.

Substitutes for the flowers employed, in the wreaths as described, could be provided without injury to the design, as follows: For valley, Roman hyacinths, sweet peas or swainsona; for the orchids, cyclamens, white roses, gardenias or butterfly chiffon bows.

The time required for the wreath with the fewer flowers would be about an hour for an experienced designer, or two hours for a beginner who has had some practice in making shower bouquets.

Do not make up bridal flowers and allow them to lie around before being delivered. Do not deliver sooner than an hour before the ceremony, to have them in their best condition. If flowers are to be shipped and must be on hand several hours before using, give instructions to leave the box unopened till the time for the ceremony.

THE REVIEW TELLS MOST

Everything—but Why is It:

That customers never get enough asparagus?

That "the fernery you filled died over night and the next day was not fit to put on the table, O goodness gracious!"

That the German folk want every color of flower in the store in that dollar bouquet?

That the old family rubber plant with four feet of stalk and two diminutive leaves at the top has to be repotted and kept in the parlor window?

That a woman who buys flowers for a poor dear sick friend wants just as few as possible: "I'd rather take just a couple at a time and go to see her oftener."

That most people will spend dollars for cut flowers for a day and in buying a plant expect it to live forever?

That those violets they sell in the street are only a quarter, and how can they do it?

That the average male buyer (in New York) is ashamed to carry cut flowers unless carefully wrapped in paper to resemble anything but a bouquet, or if in one of our up-to-date folding boxes, it has to be wrapped in paper also?

And, lastly, why is it that children seem to show the only real love for flowers? Perhaps this covers the answers to all the others.

THE FLORAL AEROPLANE.

It was once the fashion, when a brakeman died, for his comrades to send a floral freight car to the funeral. Retail florists largely have educated the public to a better appreciation of floral art, but every now and then an order comes in for the freight car style of design. Such a one not long since made its appearance at The Rosery, a Kansas City store. The card to go with the piece was inscribed "National Council of Aero Clubs of America; in loving memory of a brave man," and nothing but an airship would do, the design being intended for an aviator. The accompanying illustration will show how well E. D. Ellsworth executed this unusual and quite difficult order.

The Enlarged Store of William J. Smyth, Chicago.

SMYTH'S NEW STORE.

How promptly an improvement in facilities has been followed by an increase in business has twice been demonstrated by the experience of W. J. Smyth, whose store at Thirty-first street in Chicago is passed by the Michigan avenue automobile parade. A few years ago Mr. Smyth put in a new store front and the building was overhauled generally to give him up-to-date equipment. Even before the work was finished trade began to increase and he soon was doing much more than ever before. A few months ago the adjoining store was secured, the partition removed to throw the two rooms into one and the work of redecorating and refurnishing begun. Trade actually doubled before the alterations were complete. November was the largest regular month's business Mr. Smyth has yet had.

The enlarged store has two entrances and four show windows, the latter kept bright with eye-catching plant arrangements. The selling space is doubled, but as important as any other feature of the improvements is the addition to the facilities for handling the work behind the scenes. A partition across the store midway divides the selling space from the workrooms. At the right rear is the room for the storage refrigerators for cut flowers and the tables for the designers, the order files, telephones, etc. At the left rear is a new room designed to serve three purposes. It can be warm or cold, so as to accommodate either cut flowers or plants at holiday times; it is fitted with shelving for the big stock of baskets and other supplies, such as a store nowadays must carry, and it has zinc-topped tables and a duplicate stock of the first aids to the designers. In the rear of the workrooms is the conservatory.

With the store just finished and a new delivery car to come out of the shop this week, Mr. Smyth looks forward to far the biggest Christmas in his career.

AZALEAS, ETC., IN THE SOUTH.

Will you kindly inform me whether you have a book about the growing of azaleas and ericas? I wish to get one, so as to have a clear idea of growing them. Do you think that these two plants can be grown in the south? My opinion is that azaleas may do well, but I am not certain about the ericas, as they like a low temperature. Will ardisias grow in the south? These plants are all to be grown for commercial purposes.

M. L.

Ericas, I am afraid, would be a failure. The one variety which might possibly succeed would be the popular E. melanthera, which can be planted out all summer. Azalea Indica should succeed fairly well, but it will pay you to purchase fresh imported plants each year, rather than try to grow them yourself. Ardisias will do well and the higher temperature will be rather an advantage to them. I do not know of any special book on ericas and azaleas, giving culture adaptable for the American climate. William Scott's work, "The Florists' Manual," treats of them, as well as a wide range of other plants of commercial value. Any unsold azaleas you can plant outdoors. Keep them syringed freely and well watered at the root and they will be all right.

THE MODERN FLOWER STORE.

Last month, at Knoxville, Tenn., a retail flower store was opened which would be a credit to any metropolitan community. It was to meet the needs of the growing business of Charles L. Baum, who first started in business there in 1890, just twenty years ago. In those days he had only one small house, and no store, but now he has 100,000 feet of glass, with material on the ground for three more houses, each 35x125, and in his new store in the center of the city he is equipped to do a business second to none in the central south, a region famed for its fine flower stores, as well as for fast horses and beautiful women.

The accompanying illustrations will be of interest to all retailers. The one showing the interior of the store was made on the opening day, November 10. One of the features is the array of fixtures designed for the preservation and display of florists' supplies. So rapidly have the supply houses developed the artistic and delicate in their wares that the modern flower store must have provision not only for adequate display, but for protection. In fitting up his new store Mr. Baum has installed display cases that would be a credit to a high class jeweler. Back of the refrigerator, on the right side of the store, is a special case for ribbons, violet ties, bridal scarfs and similar articles. Opposite are glass show cases, just such as the jeweler uses, in which glass, brass, silver and art pottery fern dishes are displayed. Back of these show cases are wall cases for baskets and the innumerable other articles that are nowadays such a material aid in the sale of plants and cut flowers. None of these cases is used for the materials that are merely an aid in the mechanical part of the work; the wire frames, the tinfoil, the toothpicks and all such things as should not show in the finished work are kept out of sight in the store; they are in the workroom in the rear.

The office, cashier's desk and chairs for the customers are midway in the store.

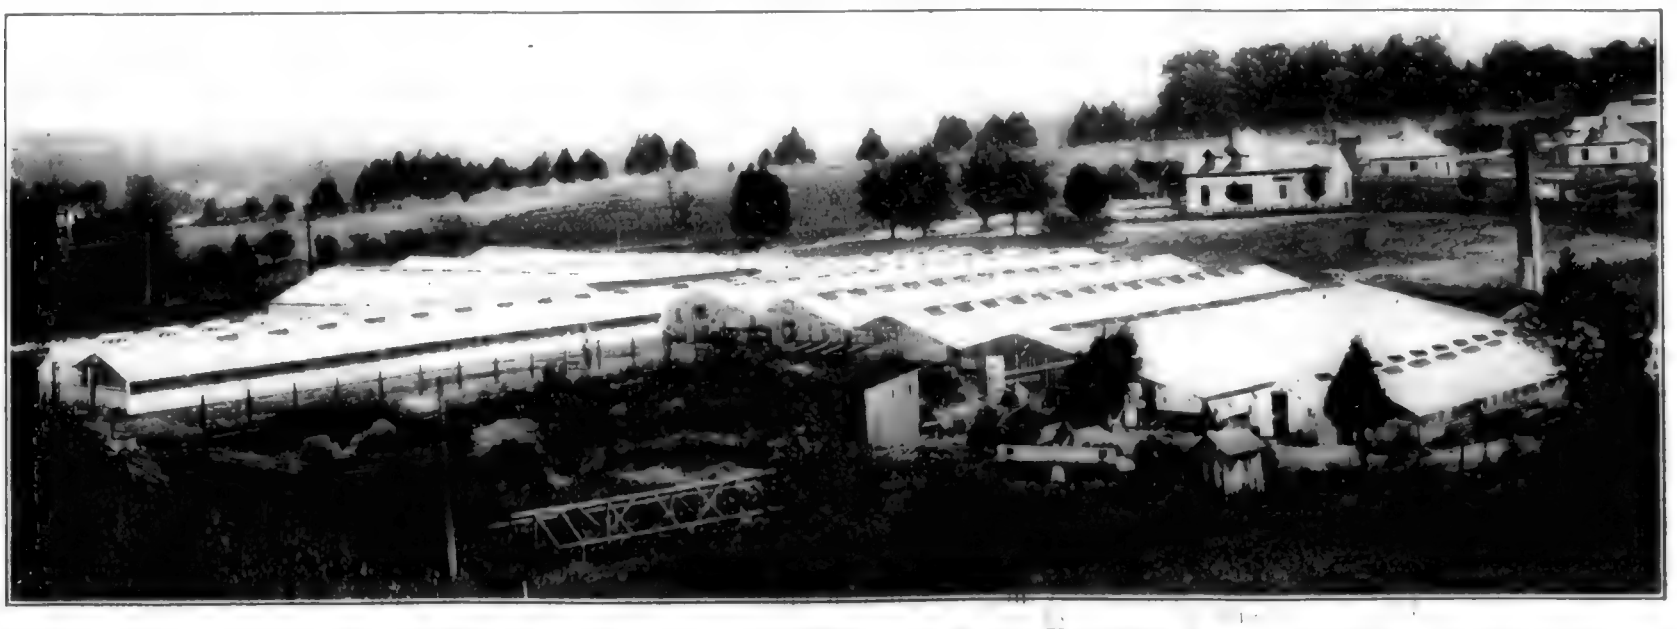
Above the workroom and reached from the stairway from the store is a conservatory of the curved-eave truss construction. Here the plant stock is displayed and in the center there is a pool for goldfish.

Second Story Conservatory of Charles L. Baum.

Carl Baum, son of the proprietor, is in charge of the store, and on the opening day gave each customer a souvenir in the shape of a small fern dish appropriately filled.

STOCK TO FOLLOW NARCISSI.

I have some narcissi in 6-inch pots. These pots will be at my disposal before Christmas, when the narcissi are through blooming. What is the most profitable use I can make of them? Will it be too late for lilies, and if not, would Formosas be the best? When will they begin blooming in a night temperature of 50 degrees? I have brought in Paper White narcissi, which were covered with soil outdoors to root, five weeks before Christmas to have them in bloom at that time. Is that not about right at the temperature mentioned? E. C.



Christmas is too late to pot up dormant lily bulbs for Easter, but you could get them for Memorial day. Longiflorum giganteum would be the best kind to purchase. You could use these pots for speciosum album, speciosum rubrum or auratum, but these will not bloom until summer. If you have any demand for pot plants you could grow Spiræa Japonica or any of its varieties for Easter in 6-inch pots at the temperature named. Gladstone, astilboides and grandiflora are better than the old type. You could pot pips of lily of the valley and flower for Easter, and the pots could be used for quite a variety of other flowering stock.

Paper White narcissi will be in ample season in five weeks. There is no necessity for covering these bulbs with soil or ashes, as in the case of Dutch bulbs. They are much better and stockier if grown without any covering at all stages of their growth.

NAMES OF BEGONIAS.

I am sending you, under separate cover, a limb of a begonia, which is a free bloomer about Christmas time and a strong grower. I should like to know the name of it. Also, in the same package, I am sending a variegated leaf of a sport. It seems to be just as free a bloomer as the parent and in every respect similar, except for the variegation. Can you tell me the names of these? T. C.

One is Begonia semperflorens gigantea rosea and the other is Begonia manicata aureo-maculata. C. W.

HOW TO GROW SMILAX.

What is the best distance apart to grow smilax? How many crops can be taken off in twelve months, if grown in a modern house under the best of conditions? Will the smilax occupy the house all of the twelve months or can some other crop be grown? If any, what? W. F.

The majority of growers prefer to plant smilax 8x10 inches, which means eight inches apart in the row and ten inches between the rows, though some plant as closely as 8x8 inches. Four crops per year may be grown under good conditions; but the average product is three crops.

The proper culture of smilax will occupy the house for the entire year, to the exclusion of any other crop.

W. H. T.

FUMES FROM HEATING PIPES.

Please examine the contents of the box sent under separate cover and, if possible, tell me what is the matter with my geraniums. I have kept them in an average temperature of 55 degrees. As to watering, I have tried them two ways, fairly moist and also on the dry side. The leaves do not look right and the blooms do not develop. They die off before the bloom opens up, as you see by the condition of the specimen sent. My cypripediums are getting the same way. The blooms do not develop as they ought. They are in the same house. Perhaps there is something wrong with the atmosphere, but I ventilate freely.

Three years ago the house was remodeled, and the bench lumber and hot water pipes were treated for preservation by a preparation called chrysolite paint. I soon found, to my sorrow, after starting the hot water system, that the gases from it caused me lots of trouble. The first winter all the leaves dropped off my geraniums, leaving nothing but stems. Other plants were affected in the same way. Last year I had better luck, but there was still some trouble. This winter I hoped that everything would be well, but my hopes are already being disappointed, although I can not detect any odor or gases from the paint. My plants were healthy before I fired up the boiler. Can you tell me what to do?

C. D. H.

The appearance of the leaves of both geraniums and cypripediums shows conclusively that there is something radically wrong with your house. They would never go off in this way if the atmosphere were right. I have not used chrysolite or any other preservative paints on heating pipes, but have seen in a number of cases striking examples of the damage they have caused to plant life.

A coating of lampblack and linseed oil is a good preservative for heating pipes. Any smell soon passes away and there are no bad effects. If you have occasion to paint any pipes again, try the lampblack. Ventilate a little at night for a few nights until any smell has passed away.

The fact that your plants were perfectly healthy before you started firing would seem to indicate that the chrysolite is the cause of the trouble, and until this can be removed from the pipes you are likely to have little success with your plants. It is possible that other readers may have had your experience. It is also probable that you can obtain some preparation which will remove this from your pipes. This will entail considerable labor, but if some reader can recommend a reliable preparation for removing paint from heating pipes, it would pay you to try it.

C. W.

SHAMROCKS.

Can you give me any information about growing shamrocks? I wish to keep them in the greenhouse until about January 1 and then place them in coldframes which are set down about a foot. Will they be ready in time without bottom heat? The plants have their second leaves now. I live in the central part of Massachusetts.

M. C. C.

You will make a great mistake if you place your shamrocks in coldframes about January 1. You will assuredly lose the greater part of them if you do so. In so far as growth is concerned, the plants, even if they lived, would stand still in the frames. There is little growth made by plants in frames in your latitude between January 1 and March 17, when they are needed. My advice would be to keep your plants in a cool greenhouse, held at 40 to 45 degrees at night, as near the glass as possible. A house which will grow good mignonette or violets will suit the shamrocks. In such a house you are sure of getting good, salable plants. In coldframes they would be a failure. C. W.

As to watering, I have tried them two ways, fairly moist and also on the dry side. The leaves do not look right and the blooms do not develop. They die off before the bloom opens up, as you see by the condition of the specimen sent. My cypripediums are getting the same way. The blooms do not develop as they ought. They are in the same house. Perhaps there is something wrong with the atmosphere, but I ventilate freely.

Three years ago the house was remodeled, and the bench lumber and hot water pipes were treated for preservation by a preparation called chrysolite paint. I soon found, to my sorrow, after starting the hot water system, that the gases from it caused me lots of trouble. The first winter all the leaves dropped off my geraniums, leaving nothing but stems. Other plants were affected in the same way. Last year I had better luck, but there was still some trouble. This winter I hoped that everything would be well, but my hopes are already being disappointed, although I can not detect any odor or gases from the paint. My plants were healthy before I fired up the boiler. Can you tell me what to do?

C. D. H.

The appearance of the leaves of both geraniums and cypripediums shows conclusively that there is something radically wrong with your house. They would never go off in this way if the atmosphere were right. I have not used chrysolite or any other preservative paints on heating pipes, but have seen in a number of cases striking examples of the damage they have caused to plant life.

A coating of lampblack and linseed oil is a good preservative for heating pipes. Any smell soon passes away and there are no bad effects. If you have occasion to paint any pipes again, try the lampblack. Ventilate a little at night for a few nights until any smell has passed away.

The fact that your plants were perfectly healthy before you started firing would seem to indicate that the chrysolite is the cause of the trouble, and until this can be removed from the pipes you are likely to have little success with your plants. It is possible that other readers may have had your experience. It is also probable that you can obtain some preparation which will remove this from your pipes. This will entail considerable labor, but if some reader can recommend a reliable preparation for removing paint from heating pipes, it would pay you to try it.

SHAMROCKS.

Can you give me any information about growing shamrocks? I wish to keep them in the greenhouse until about January 1 and then place them in coldframes which are set down about a foot. Will they be ready in time without bottom heat? The plants have their second leaves now. I live in the central part of Massachusetts.

M. C. C.

You will make a great mistake if you place your shamrocks in coldframes about January 1. You will assuredly lose the greater part of them if you do so. In so far as growth is concerned, the plants, even if they lived, would stand still in the frames. There is little growth made by plants in frames in your latitude between January 1 and March 17, when they are needed. My advice would be to keep your plants in a cool greenhouse, held at 40 to 45 degrees at night, as near the glass as possible. A house which will grow good mignonette or violets will suit the shamrocks. In such a house you are sure of getting good, salable plants. In coldframes they would be a failure. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Dutch Bulbs.

If the Dutch bulbs are not yet started, it is time to house a batch of such early bulbs as La Reine tulips and Trumpet Major narcissi. The tulips want a brisk top heat, but no bottom heat, and must be grown dark until the stems are well drawn up; then gradually admit light. The narcissi, if well started, will need a short time only in the dark. French Golden Spurs are already sufficiently started to place in heat, and Narcissus poeticus ornatus in a week will also be fit to house. Some other tulips, such as Yellow Prince, Thomas Moore and Cottage Maid, could be placed in heat now, but this early forcing does not pay. It will be much better to leave them a few days longer in the cellar.

Freesias.

A batch of freesias at Christmas makes a welcome addition to the cut flowers then in season and the prices realized are always satisfactory. Purity is the variety par excellence, but, as it is unusually scarce this season, more refracta alba is being grown. Plants for early flowering succeed best in pans eight to ten inches in diameter, and to get them in season they should now have a night temperature of 52 to 55 degrees; they should also be stood on a shelf where they will get every possible ray of sunlight and kept soaked with water. Feed in moderation once in four or five days. Heavy doses would cause the ends of the leaves to turn brown. Avoid the use of tobacco stems in fumigation, which would also injure them.

Cyclamens.

Every additional flower carried by the cyclamen plants tends to make them more salable. No matter how fine the plants may be, they will not sell without a flower being open, while ordinary ones with a few blooms open will soon be cleaned out. The plants now require no shade. To send them along a little more, heat may be given them temporarily, but do not let it exceed 50 degrees at night. Shelves near the glass are ideal locations for the plants. Grown thus, they are stocky and the flowers will not fall over the pots, as they do when grown too far from the light. On benches raise the most forward plants on inverted pots and spread the others out. Remove all decaying foliage and weeds and scratch over any scumminess which may gather on the surface soil of the pots.

Lilium Candidum.

If the Lilium candidum plants have been exposed to several good freezings and held away from any artificial heat, which is the proper treatment in the early stages of growth, a batch can now be started in a cool house, averaging 45 degrees at night. They can have 5 to 7 degrees more when once the spikes are pushing up, but they must never be forced in the same way as Harrisii or longiflorum, or the results will be discouraging. It will mean long spikes and flowers of half the size they attain in a cooler house. Candidums started now, placed in a night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees after the new year and kept there, will flower early in April. For Easter flowers the plants need not be started for a fortnight yet, but as in many retail places there is a constant call for choice flowers for design work, a batch of candidums will prove invaluable, being far better in many ways than the larger longiflorums.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangea plants, which have been pot-grown all summer, now have the wood well ripened and have cast a good many leaves. While there is no immediate hurry about starting these for Easter, there is no harm in placing them in a cold house, from which they can be moved after the new year. Be careful not to allow frost to blacken the foliage. Hydrangeas in the open will withstand a good deal of frost, but it is unwise to expose pot plants to frost which would remove their foliage. Water rather more freely when once the plants are started. Never mind if the plants have not shed their foliage, not even if the latter is dark green in color; it is not necessary for plants to lose their old leaves before being forced.

San Jose Scale.

Many country florists grow a variety of trees and shrubs and quite a number of others might well do so. A considerable number have a variety of fruit trees and it behooves each and all to have a watchful eye for San Jose scale. Lilacs, various species of roses, cratægus, prunus, malus, willows, poplars, cydonias and many other trees and shrubs seem to be suitable targets for myriads of these tiny creatures. Now, when frost has pretty generally made trees nude of foliage, is the time to hunt for the scale, and, when once found, endeavor to exterminate it by spraying with either the lime sulphur solution or one of the soluble oil mixtures. Use a Vermorel nozzle in spraying and be sure that the trees are thoroughly covered, every twig being wet during the spraying. Even the most careful spraying will spare some lives, but it is always a safe plan to spray again in spring, before outdoor work starts with a rush.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

GOOD LATE PINK AND RED.

Can you tell me of a good pink variety and also of a red that will come in with Major Bonnaffon and White Bonnaffon? Please state, also, which bud to take on the varieties you recommend. A. L. S.

The best late pink I know of is W. R. Brock. Enguehard is another pink that is grown a great deal for late work, but it has a habit of dropping its petals badly. Brock will never do this, and it can also be gotten in easily for Christmas if the market conditions warrant your doing so. The latest bud that shows is the proper one to take.

The most largely grown red for late work is the old John Shrimpton. I do not know of anything that will beat it at the present time.

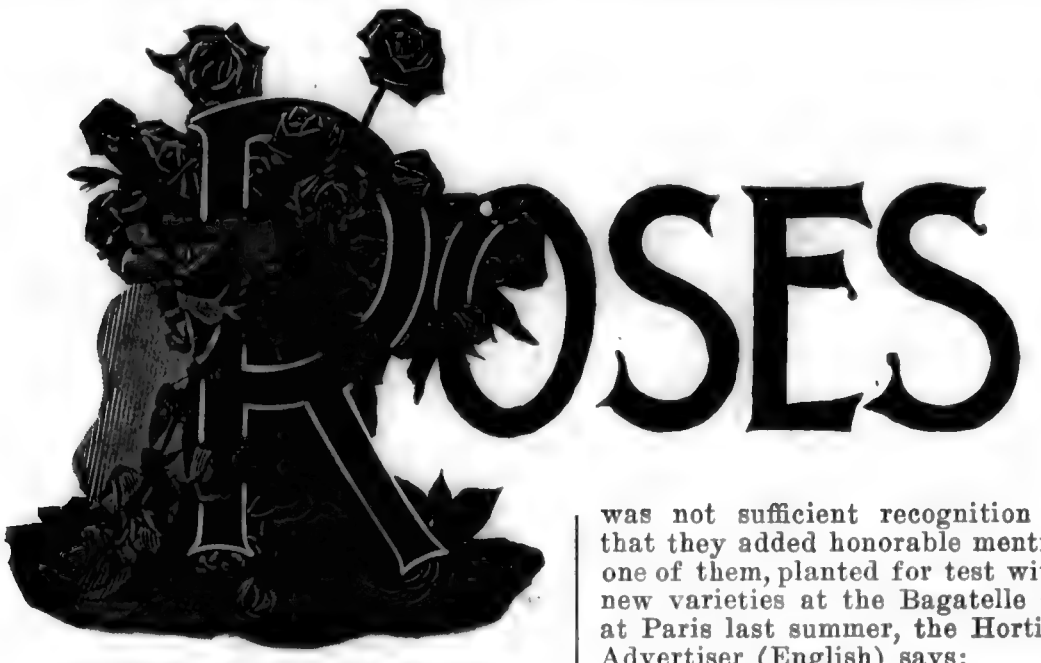
Chas. H. Totty.

GOOD MUMS FOR A START.

Please give me a short list of the best kind of chrysanthemums in white, yellow and pink, as we are at a loss to know what stock to start with. We had some, but did not grow them in the greenhouse and we wish to grow some nice, big blooms for next fall in our new houses. J. D.

It is somewhat difficult to say which are the best kinds, but the following selection, in white, yellow and pink, covers the whole season: Pink—W. R. Brock, Gloria, Wm. Duckham, Hankey and Winter Cheer. Yellow—Golden Glow, Bonnaffon, Cheltoni, Yellow Miller and Yellow Chadwick. White—Polly Rose, B. May, T. Eaton and Chadwick.

These can be procured cheaply from any wholesale dealer and will give a less proportion of trouble than any other varieties that I am personally acquainted with. Chas. H. Totty.



IS IT A SPORT?

There is a new mum among my White Bonnaffons. The plant starts like a Bonnaffon and has the same foliage. The blooms are a lovely shade of pink, like that of a Bridesmaid rose. The blooms are a little larger than Bonnaffons, but of the same shape. There are in the same house Major Bonnaffon, White Bonnaffon, Golden Glow, Eaton, Golden Wedding, Dr. Enguehard, Jeanne Nonin and William Duckham. Now, do you think it is likely that I have a sport? J. W. T.

There is no reason why you could not have a sport among your plants, as well as anyone else, although history shows that most of the alleged sports that appear are due to unintentional mixing of the cuttings, either in the sand bed or at planting time. You say the foliage is the same. If the foliage is exactly identical, you possibly have a sport. Winter Cheer, which is a lovely pink variety, greatly resembles White Bonnaffon in the foliage, and this might be your so-called sport. If I could see a good leaf or if you have a flower left, I can possibly identify it.

CONFUSION IN ROSE NAMES.

At the Chicago flower show last month A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., exhibited a handsome vase of a shell pink rose with orange center, labeling it Antoine Rivoire. They now have determined the name correctly to be Prince de Bulgarie.

Referring to the matter, W. R. Pierson writes:

"We obtained stock of this rose two years ago, and it was reported to us at that time that the name was lost in transit. Last spring we sent fifty plants of this rose to Mr. Fatzer, Quessy, Tergnier, Aisne, France, to be grown for identification. Mr. Fatzer was one of the judges at the last Paris national exposition and is a man whose word is perfectly good in a matter of this kind. Last spring among a batch of imported plants there were some plants labeled Antoine Rivoire which bore so strong a resemblance to this rose that we decided that this was the name of the rose, and labeled ours accordingly. November 17 we received a letter from Mr. Fatzer stating that the plants we sent him are in good condition, that he now has flowers in all stages of development, and that there is no doubt in his mind that the rose is Prince de Bulgarie, sent out by Pernet-Ducher in 1902. We have accepted Mr. Fatzer's statement as correct, and are giving the rose its proper name.

"We wish you would write this up as a little notice in The Review, explaining how we came to show this rose under the name Antoine Rivoire, as we had no intention of showing this rose under anything but its right name."

ANOTHER HILL ROSE.

The E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, appears to have now arrived at the time for reaping the rewards of the years spent in the hybridizing of roses. True, introductions have been not infrequent in the past, but the number of seedlings now approaching the period of dissemination far exceeds anything of the past. Most important at the moment are Rose Queen, the pink Richmond, and Sunburst, the variety the judges at Chicago thought a silver cup was not sufficient recognition for, so that they added honorable mention. Of one of them, planted for test with other new varieties at the Bagatelle Gardens at Paris last summer, the Horticultural Advertiser (English) says:

"A tea hybrid from America, named May Miller, raised by E. G. Hill, should be described, the variety being one that we shall hear more about as time goes on; a valuable rose for cut bloom, with a noble appearance and long, firm stems of great strength. We must make up our minds to meet with roses raised on the other side of the Atlantic in greater numbers than hitherto. Certainly the tastes of the two continents sometimes differ greatly; but in the States they quickly come to understand those that agree with European wishes. Moreover, with their Wichuraiana hybrids the Americans have broken new ground, and found practical and new uses for the same, in directions in which we are a long way behind."

RAMBLER ROSES.

We are now getting more severe weather, and if the ramblers in pots are outdoors it will be necessary to cover the pots well to prevent breakages by frost. Of course, it is easily possible to keep plants for forcing outside all winter if necessary, where they will be in a perfectly dormant state, but it is disagreeable work when frost and snow are in the ascendant. A far better plan is to store them thickly in a cold pit or cellar, where they will be just clear of freezing. If the soil is tolerably dry, a few degrees of frost cannot do any injury to pots, much less to the plants.

Plants which were pot-grown all summer and have been held on the dry side for some weeks back, now have their canes well ripened, and in the case of Crimson Rambler and Baby Rambler all foliage has gone. If an early batch is desired, some of these may now be housed and given a night temperature of 45 degrees. It is better not to give too much heat at first. The breaks come more slowly in the lower temperature, but are stronger. Cut away any weak or useless wood, reserving the strong canes, which can be bent over horizontally or circularly, to insure more even breaks. The various pink ramblers do not cast their foliage as early as Crimson Rambler and it is better not to start any of them until after Christmas.

Winnipeg, Can.—The Gordon-Mitchell Drug Co. is planning to open a cut flower and plant department.

FUMIGATING CARNATIONS.

Will it harm carnations if I put liquid nicotine on the heating pipes? I fumigated with tobacco stems, but it discolored the carnations. H. R.

Discontinue using tobacco stems for fumigation. They are getting obsolete. Try some of the manufactured nicotine papers, which can be purchased by the gross in cans. They are neat, cleanly, do not discolor any flowers and leave no disagreeable odor behind them. Putting nicotine on the heating pipes will be less effective than using it as a spray on the plants. Many growers now rely on spraying in lieu of fumigation.

A VARIEGATED ENCHANTRESS.

I noticed on page 16 of The Review for November 24 that L. M. B. mentions a variegated sport of Rose-pink Enchantress. In 1909 I had several White Enchantress plants that gave variegated sports, not heavily variegated, but beautifully penciled with bright pink, making an exceptionally attractive flower. I propagated a large number and this season they are doing well. The flowers are as large as the parent, and so far are as productive and vigorous. As I have no intention of having them registered, L. M. B. can have the right of way. W. C. S.

ENCHANTRESS TEMPERATURE.

Would it be better to keep Enchantress carnations in a temperature of over 55 degrees, or not? Since I have been firing I notice that the flowers are much larger. When the temperature gets up to 60 degrees I open the ventilator. H. R.

If you mean 55 degrees as a night temperature, this is too high. For all the Enchantress family, 50 degrees will suit much better. It will be all right to have the temperature run up to 60 or 65 degrees on sunny days, with ventilators open. On dull days a maximum of 56 to 58 degrees will suffice. You can grow Enchantress as warm as 55 degrees, but at 50 degrees you will get stronger stems and larger and better colored flowers. C. W.

Ferns

SCALE ON FERNS.

Can you tell me what is the trouble with the enclosed fern leaves? As you will see, there is some sort of insect on one of the leaves. What kind of insect is it, and what causes the color to come out of the other leaves?

E. F. B.

The Boston fern in question is badly infested with a scale insect. The best thing to do with such a plant would be to cut off the worst fronds, and then to dip the plant in a solution of tobacco extract, using one part of the extract to fifty parts of water. Several applications may be needed to rid the plants of this pest.

The other fern fronds have a scalded appearance, which may have been caused by too much moisture on the foliage during the night, or possibly by the use of too much manure. But without knowing something of the conditions under which they are growing, it is difficult to speak positively about the matter. W. H. T.

INSECTS ON FERNS.

I am sending you two fern leaves with some kind of little insects on them. What are they, and how can I destroy them without spoiling my ferns? They are only on two or three of them yet. What kind of insects lay the eggs? I should also like to know how to destroy scale and mealy bug. E. T. O.

The fern fronds had on them both scale and the common white fly. For the scale, use one of the several scale remedies carried by all the supply houses and seed stores. The best remedy for the white fly seems to be hydrocyanic acid gas. Bulletin No. 27, new series, revised edition, issued by the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., gives full directions for using this valuable remedy. The Review, also, has frequently described the process.

Kerosene emulsion is the best remedy for mealy bug. Mix about a tablespoonful with a pint of milk. Then put this into a gallon of warm water. Syringe the infested plants and keep well stirred while using. A. F. J. B.

SHAMROCKS.

It is now getting somewhat late to sow shamrock seed. If the matter has been overlooked, get seed at once and sow in flats in a temperature of 50 degrees. When nicely germinated, move to a house 5 degrees cooler. As a rule, such a house as violets or mignonette thrive in will be found all right for shamrocks. Keep any flats of seedlings on a bench close to the glass after they are transplanted. Use a light and rather sandy soil for them. Avoid anything like a dry atmosphere and do not stand them near heating pipes, where thrips can get a foothold on them. On the other hand, a cold, clammy house is not to their liking, as it will cause mildew to start, which will soon ruin a batch. A cool, dry and airy house is what shamrocks like.

STOCK FOR AZALEAS.

What is the name of the plant that azaleas are grafted on? M. L.

The older and more vigorous varieties, particularly those of a rosy purple color, are propagated from cuttings. These are used for stock on which to propagate the choicer sorts by tongue or veneer grafting.

C. W.

WEAK GROWTH OF HARRISII.

In the same house with my callas I have some Harrisii lilies. Up to a week ago they were out in a coldframe and buried, like other bulbs. They have nice roots, but the growth is yellow and weak. I keep them moderately moist and between 55 and 60 degrees.

H. R.

The Harrisiis should not have been covered like the Dutch bulbs. They will enjoy a brisk heat—60 to 65 degrees at night if you can give them so much. Water carefully; run them a little on the dry side, as an overplus will easily rot the roots. The shoots should soon green up under careful treatment.

TO MAKE SHOWS SUCCESSFUL.

[A paper by Edward A. Stroud, read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, December 6, 1910.]

How can we make our flower shows more interesting and successful? Let us consider the existing fact that the attendance at our shows has gradually decreased in numbers and I think no one can dispute the question that of late years they are far from being a success. Is it a seeming lack of interest in exhibitors; a similarity of our shows; the price of admission; the method of advertising; the lack of cooperation of our club and the Horticultural Society, or some reason not generally known which has caused this result? It seems to me the most serious fault is the lack of coöperation. No one branch of the business can make a successful up-to-date show. It is absolutely necessary to have an able committee composed of representatives from every department: the private gardener, the retail and wholesole florist, and our commercial growers and seedsmen, all taking an active interest in the advancement and success of our shows.

The Financial Question.

Undoubtedly the first subject to be discussed by the committee would be the financial question, "How can we raise money?" I would suggest a guarantee fund. This would supply money for prizes and also be the means for buying materials for the decoration of the hall, the employment of skilled labor for this purpose, advance advertising and numerous incidentals. I understand that the money for the prizes has depended largely on the admission fee. Naturally, the attendance decreasing in numbers, the prizes have been somewhat uncertain of prompt payment, and, no matter how small the prize, if it is not paid at the time it is awarded the interest of the exhibitor diminishes. Our shows should be well advertised. Advertise everywhere, in our newspapers, in the shop windows, in all adjacent towns, in and on the street cars; in fact, employ every up-to-date method. The advertisements in the official catalogue should be a large source of income. I would also suggest that we have a list of prominent patronesses. The social feature seems to have been entirely overlooked the last few seasons; in former years it was quite a society event.

I consider our admission fee is too high for the shows we are now giving and I doubt if we will ever fill the hall at the present charge. The people are not getting enough for their money. It is evident that the love of flowers is not dying out when thousands go to Horticultural hall in the park to see a pretty but everyday exhibit and on Palm Sunday, when some of our commercial greenhouses are thrown open to the public, I am told it requires policemen to manage the crowds. Of course, some will argue that this is because they are getting something for nothing and that our shows, too, would be crowded if they were free. It is a beautiful sight to see thousands of chrysanthemums, azaleas, etc., in a greenhouse, and well worth a visit, especially when it costs nothing; but place those same flowers in an artistically decorated hall, arranged in new and novel effect, and you have something the public will be willing to pay to see.

Novelty Is Demanded.

We cannot present any kind of a show year after year in the same manner and expect to attract. The cry of the moment is for novelties. Still have the competitive classes for the gardener and grower, which are always interesting, but added to these introduce some new features. For instance: the hardy chrysanthemum border, which you all know; the Japanese garden, arranged so one could rest and listen to the music, and, if so desired, draw up to a table and procure refreshments. The floral art gallery is full of possibilities. This consists of frames, with flowers grouped together in them, representing a picture. The effects are not only artistic, but the impression made on the mind of certain varieties of flowers thus presented is much more lasting than in the case of the same varieties ordinarily staged. Then the rose garden is a good idea, the roses contracted to be grown by some capable grower on trellises and in pots and arranged like an outdoor garden. A Dutch garden could be made by growing bulbs in boxes. The Italian sunken garden is another idea.

Also, varieties of shrubs could be forced into bloom for decorative purposes. Indeed, there are many ideas, if one makes a study of them. I was impressed on reading the trade papers to see the improvement that is taking place in other cities in the arrangement of their shows and could not help feeling that we were not progressing.

Mr. Stroud read several clippings describing special features of western shows, and continued:

Coöperation of Trade Interests.

To make a successful and interesting show we will require the help of the growers to supply us with material in large quantities; the retailers, to give us their ideas and suggestions, and the private gardeners, not only for the competitive classes, but also for the valuable plants they could probably lend us.

The commercial establishments do not thoroughly realize the advantages to be gained by their exhibits. Our shows should be a general market, where men in the trade would attend and purchase their supplies. As far as possible a special place should be assigned to trade exhibits. I would suggest the entire basement; for, while the vegetable exhibit is interesting, we could probably dispense with this feature, giving the space they now occupy to more important displays. I will not, however, attempt to lay out a general plan of arrangement, but do think that a special effort should be made to make the main entrance particularly attractive. A first impression should always be pleasing to the eye. Another thing to be done is to go over and revise our premium lists, and, in addition to the money prizes offered by the show and individuals, the committee should approach our prominent merchants, asking them to offer a cup or trophy for certain classes, and to be known as their cup. These cups would be exhibited in their windows previous to the show and would naturally call attention to it. On our revised premium list we should have more prizes for the large commercial men; we want all the new introductions to be shown in Philadelphia, and it should be made worth while for these men to bring them here. Quite a hit could be made, and it would not cost much, if we would give a flower to the ladies on certain evenings; a carnation on the day they are judged, calling it carnation day, and a rose, chrysanthemum, etc., in like manner. All these little things help more than we realize to make the show interesting.

Some weeks ago I was invited to act as judge of an exhibition of hardy chrysanthemums grown by some school children and I was surprised to see the results they had obtained. It seemed to me they should have our encouragement. All the public schools have established a course which they call nature studies, in the younger classes, and later on the study of botany, and I think it would be quite a stimulus to them to give them an opportunity of visiting our shows accompanied by their teachers. By this I mean the tickets should not be given individually, but distributed to the teachers who would take their classes to the hall during the hour usually devoted to this study in school.

No radical improvement can be expected in our shows the first year or so and the guarantors will probably, at first, lose money, but eventually, if well managed, they ought to prove a good investment. What other cities and towns are accomplishing Philadelphia also can do. Why should Philadelphia be behind in progress and push?

In concluding I want to impress the facts that to make an interesting and successful flower show it will require months of preparation with generous and unselfish coöperation. Most of these ideas I have mentioned are being carried out by the national flower show committee in connection with their show at Boston in the spring of 1911, and I think it will be an inspiration for all of us, and I sincerely hope everyone will try to get there.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market is now characterized by the usual steadiness and dullness that invariably accompanies the approach of the holiday season. For the next two weeks history will repeat itself, and in the meantime everybody in the retail world seems to anticipate a splendid Christmas trade. Blooming plants are abundant, and never more beautiful. The price of cut flowers, it is already evident, will be held within reasonable bounds, and there will be enough of everything except chrysanthemums, but these have already had a remarkably prolonged season.

The best Beauties brought 40 cents Saturday, December 3, in some places, though $35 to $30 per hundred was the prevailing figure. They are becoming abundant and a sufficient supply for the increased Christmas trade seems assured. If all the other roses hold at last week's quotations it is all the growers should anticipate until the dull days pass. The quality of rose stock now arriving is perfect and there can be no better carnations anywhere than those now shipped to this market. Mrs. C. W. Ward and Alma Ward, Beacon, Winsor, White Perfection, Brooklyn and Enchantress all seem as popular as ever and the best stock sells on arrival, most of it already contracted for by the leading retailers.

There are still some Chadwicks, Bonnaffon, Nonin, Eaton, Jones and Allen mums, but this week will see the farewell of most of them; $3 a dozen is about top, though those that can hold on until Christmas will be snapped up at prices that will be worth while.

Cyps are down, 12 cents buying the best of them. All other varieties of orchids are scarce and prices remain at the $1 mark for the best cattleyas. Labiata, Trianæ and dendrobiums are the vanguard of a good assortment for the Christmas demand, which promises to be more widespread than ever. The growers of orchids may have increased, but the field has kept pace with the widening supply.

There are no price changes worthy of note in lilies, valley or gardenias. The call for each is persistent, and there is no sign of, nor reason for, concessions. These rates will surely hold until Christmas. Violets fell last week to 75 cents per hundred. In large quantities this was shaded. Some houses are contracting now to furnish all the first-class violets desired for Christmas at $1.25 per hundred. The market now has an abundance of sweet peas, bouvardia, narcissi, hyacinths, pansies and stevia. There is too much of the latter by half, and no street outlet for it, as with the surplus of violets.

Christmas trees are arriving. The laws of New England prohibit their cutting. The bulk of the supply this year is from Canada and the price per bundle is 75 cents to $1. All the seed houses will make handsome Christmas displays, and will handle holly, pine and wreaths as heavily as usual.

Various Notes.

The chilly blasts are bad for the vocal cords of the auctioneers. The opportunity to gather in bargains is gone for 1910. The curtains have rung down. It was not a good season for the auction business.

Albert Rebbick, gardener for the mayor of Hackensack for the last nineteen years, goes to England to see his mother, the trip a Christmas present from his employer.

The New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers met December 6 at the office of Secretary Siebrecht. The greatest of harmony prevailed, and plans for the society's winter were perfected.

Cut blooms of Hilda, the new dark pink sport of My Maryland, are coming to M. C. Ford and it is proving its value and popularity rapidly. Melody, at the store of the Pennock-Meehan Co. here, is another of the newcomers that meets with much favor.

John S. Nicholas, the Greek retail florist, olive oil importer and restaurant owner, has secured a twenty-one years' lease on two buildings directly opposite J. K. Allen's headquarters, which it is rumored are to be used later on by wholesale florists. These are the same stores Charles Millang contracted for, he says, and expected to handle. However, Mr. Millang has purchased some Long Island real estate from Henry Rath that will grow fast in value, and also at Bay Side, near his present home. You can not keep Charley from dabbling in profitable outside enterprises. Henry Rath florists remember as the disseminator of the Bertha Rath carnation.

Moore, Hentz & Nash say there will be no red berries this season, but their English mistletoe will be here this week. As there are but 100 cases, there is likely to be quite a scramble for them.

Charles H. Totty has only good reports of new Hill roses at Richmond, and says the Florists' Club will have an opportunity of seeing them at its next meeting. This will take place in the club's rooms, Grand Opera House building, Monday, December 12, and as it is the final meeting of the year Chairman Nugent will make his department of the festivities especially attractive. The election of new officers will take place that night. In the afternoon all the club members are invited to bowl at 115 West Twenty-eighth street. These are hilarious afternoons. The country members display their skill. Bobby Schultz will be master of ceremonies, as usual. Bobby is a little fellow, but he has a voice a mile long. Come and hear him!

The Siebrecht wholesale store at 136

West Twenty-eighth street opened last week and the young men are much delighted with their reception and the good will of the trade. Few young men have ever launched their ships on such favorable seas. The outlook is broadening every day.

The father of W. B. and A. L. Rickards has been seriously ill with pneumonia for some time and is only now convalescing.

H. Maybie, of Maywood, N. J., was in town last week, celebrating the advent of a 12-pound son. Mr. Maybie consigns his crops to P. J. Smith.

Bonnet & Blake, in Brooklyn, report a fine start on the new season, and a wide demand already for Christmas. They claim there are no better carnations than they receive from A. Dameusy, of Flatbush.

Lecakes & Co. have secured the big building on Sixth avenue for this month, where McMahon's restaurant was, close to Twenty-eighth street, for their overflow Christmas trade. One shipment of laurel received last week totaled 35,000 pounds.

William P. Ford has some fine geraniums in pots in his windows. He says mums will last until the holidays are over. He is well pleased with the outlook and spends his week-ends at his farm in Pennsylvania.

George W. Crawbuck, Brooklyn, says his firm's Thanksgiving business was exactly double that of 1909, which he thinks is "going some."

Phil Kessler caught his bowling thumb in the ice-box last week and could not participate in the triumph of his associates.

Badgley, Reidel & Meyer say they are handling a lot of business, though Mr. Reidel can hardly handle anything at present, having crushed two of his fingers in the ice-box a week ago. Mr. Badgley was in from Madison December 3.

Miss Lois G. Moiles is now bookkeeper for the Growers' Cut Flower Co.

T. Melstrom writes from Bruges, Belgium, of his intention to locate there.

M. A. Bowe will remain in his present store on Broadway until after the holidays. Like all the big retail houses, he has been busy lately with theatrical and funeral work.

Alex. McConnell is to enjoy his last Christmas in his present location. He has not yet chosen his new store, but he has till May to find it. Meantime his new auto relieves him of every kind of anxiety. Some grand silver spruce in tubs adorn the entrance to his conservatory.

James McManus says Christmas demands for orchids will surely be in excess of all past holiday calls.

A. L. Young & Co. say they will have a Christmas surprise, as usual, for Mr. Young's circle of friends and customers.

George Saltford reports many large orders already booked for violets for Christmas delivery.

The veterans of Astoria fought the raw recruits of New York to an inspirational defeat December 1. Seven from the big city invaded the enemy's country and participated in making a Long Island holiday. The scores will tell the story. This week Friday Astoria will "take its medicine" at the New York alleys, when an effort will be made to turn the tables. If each side wins, the deciding struggle will take place on neutral alleys.

The Market.

Since December 1 the market has weakened somewhat. There have been no serious declines and the surplus each day is not heavy, but prices have softened. Supplies are not large, the colder weather having shortened them up. Roses are still in rather short supply and selling better than almost any other flowers. Long-stemmed Beauties are now of fine quality, but the medium grade flowers are more in demand. Rhea Reid is unusually fine; some prefer it to Beauty and it outclasses Richmond at present. Killarney and White Killarney are selling well and some fine flowers are now seen. Bon Silenes and Safranos with quite long stems are arriving. Mrs. Aaron Ward remains as popular as ever. Chrysanthemums have had their day; a good many flowers are still arriving, but they are not of the best quality and people are tiring of them. After Thanksgiving they are not a paying proposition.

Carnations are rather lower in price. The bulk have not yet attained a length of stem such as we usually see in midwinter. Those who plant early or grow inside make the best prices. Violets are still scarce and average $1 per hundred. A few go higher; poor flowers lower. Some growers are picking blooms not half developed, which does not pay. Plenty of Paper White narcissi are coming in and an increasing number of Roman hyacinths. Stevia is plentiful. Marguerites are as yet rather small, but sell well. Pansies are of good quality and meet with a good sale. Callas are still scarce. Lilies are rather more plentiful and include some Formosas.

Cattleyas are scarce and higher in price. Some labiatas are still seen. Percivaliana is on hand and some Trianæs. The supply of Cypripedium insigne is abundant, but other orchids are rather scarce and the cattleya supply will be short for a few weeks yet. Lily of the valley sells moderately. The quality is not as good as we sometimes see. There is a better demand for both asparagus and adiantum. A. Croweanum brings better prices than the old A. cuneatum.

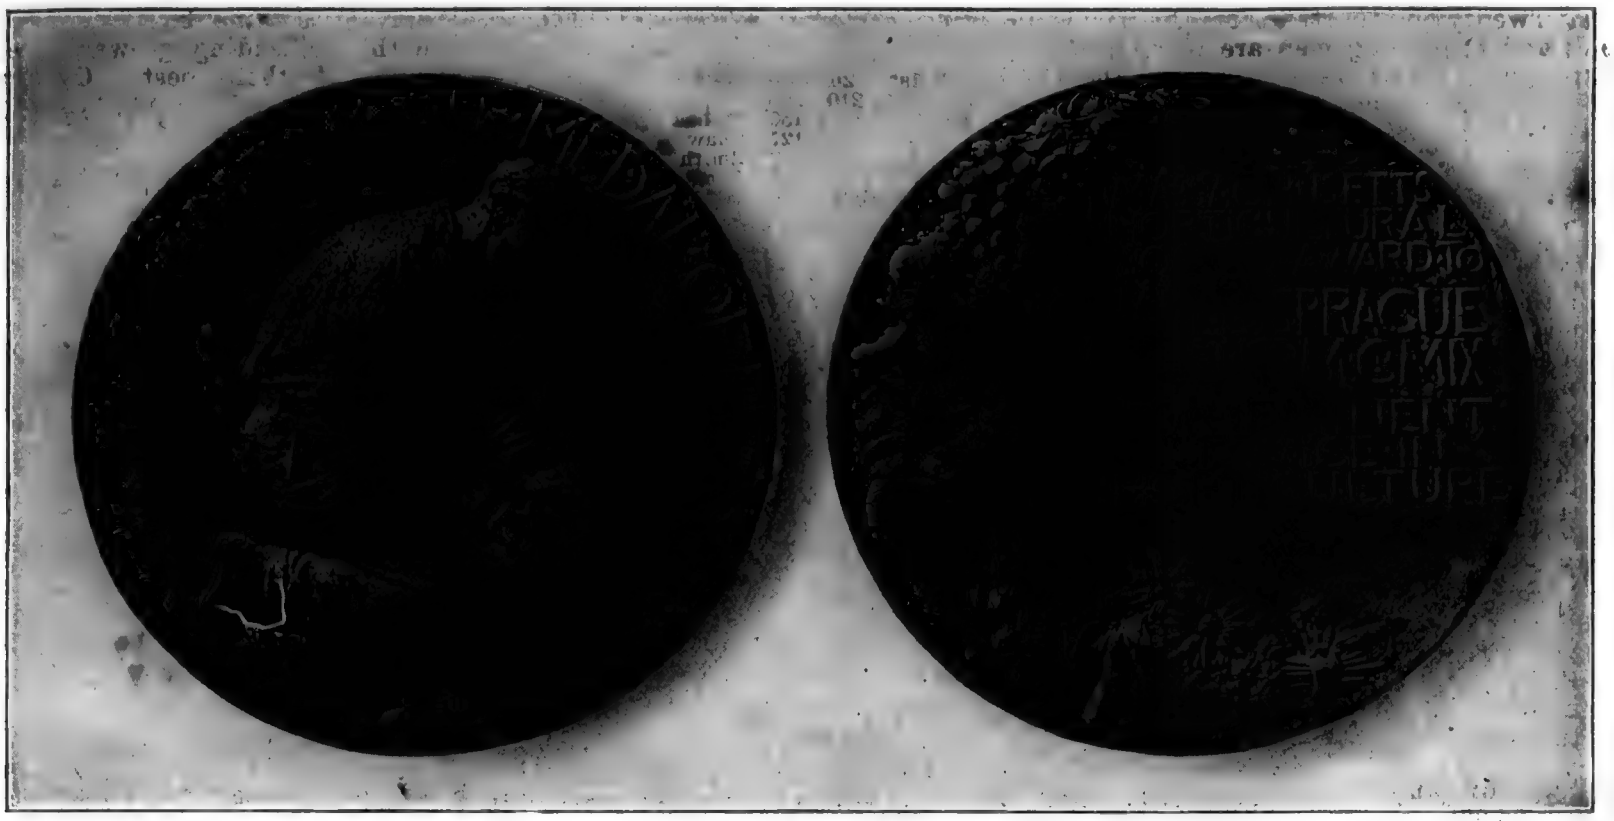
Pans of poinsettias are now a feature at all the stores and the supply will be none too large. Those pans in which small ferns, asparagus or cyperus were also planted look better and sell more readily than such as contain poinsettias only. Lorraine begonias are fine and with the leading growers are now almost at their best. Cyclamens are seen, but are not yet carrying many flowers. Otaheite oranges and ardisias are being used in considerable numbers. Azaleas now are quite well flowered, with Firefly as the leading variety.

Laurel and other greenery are higher in price. There is already considerable snow in northern parts of New England and this makes collecting of ground pine difficult. Everything in the way of green supplies will rule higher this season. The law now will not permit the removal of laurel without its being inspected first, owing to the likelihood of spreading some of the insect pests, particularly the gypsy moth.

Various Notes.

The W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, Mass., has the finest lot of Lorraine begonias it has been our privilege to see. They had 6,000 of them, but they are rapidly being sold out. Of azaleas they have 15,000. Quantities of Firefly, Mme. Petrick, Vervæneana, Deutsche Perle and others are grown for Christmas trade. Pauline Mardner is a pretty soft pink. Of Charles Encke 5,000 are grown largely for Easter trade. Of lilies the firm will this season handle 14,000. Of hydrangeas they have thousands for Easter and Memorial day trade. Bedding geraniums number 8,000. There are fine lots of poinsettias, cyclamens, Dracæna terminalis, ficus and many other plants. All are well grown and a credit to the capable and energetic manager, Herman H. Bartsch.

Sidney Hoffman, at his Massachusetts avenue store, had one window almost entirely filled with big bunches of the beautiful Bouvardia Humboldtii December 3. Cattleyas were a feature in one window and superb vases of White Killarney roses in another. Some splendid specimen azaleas were noted and a fine line of evergreens in tubs and pots. At the Mount Auburn Greenhouses are well grown houses of gardenias, poinsettias, azaleas and other plants, all of which are handled at the stores.



W. B. Goodenow is just starting to pick from his earliest sowing of sweet peas. He is picking many of the finest double violets coming into the market this season.

Penn, on Bromfield street, had some pretty baskets tastefully arranged with cattleyas and other orchids last week. Violets were, as usual, a special feature. Mignonette was the best seen this season. Since the completion of the new window with its artistic glass awning this is one of the most beautiful stores in Boston and business is ever on the increase.

H. R. Comley, on Park street, is showing nice pans of the pretty blue Agathæa cœlestis, sometimes called the blue marguerite. Bon Silene roses here had 24-inch stems and are good sellers. Mrs. Aaron Ward is also popular.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co.'s new houses at Dedham will be each 50x200. One is now being built. Others will be added in the spring. Hot water will be used for heating, in preference to steam, as being better for pot plants. A range of smaller houses will be built later for propagating purposes.

The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. has had an excellent bulb season and is now enjoying a good sale on hyacinths started in glasses. Quite a variety of decorative plants are handled at the Faneuil Hall square store. This company continues to operate the store formerly occupied by the Schlegel & Fottler Co.

Mr. Russell, late with W. W. Rawson & Co. and A. T. Boddington, is now to be found with Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston.

P. L. Carbone, on Boylston street, has a window attractively arranged with finely fruited Otaheite oranges this week. His poinsettias in pans are of splendid quality.

J. Newman & Sons always keep their windows tastefully arranged at their Tremont street store. December 3, poinsettias, scarlet carnations and roses made one window brilliant. The azaleas, Lorraine begonias and other flowering plants in the store are always of the highest quality and customers are never lacking here.

Do not forget the club meeting, December 20. The election of officers, talk on English horticultural establishments by William Downs, numerous floral exhibits, report of S. A. F. entertainment committee and much new business is to be transacted. Voting will be, as usual, by the Australian ballot.

A large proportion of the fine pansies now coming into the market are grown by W. C. Ward, of Quincy, who makes a specialty of this flower, and no one grows it better.

The new store of Arnold & Petros, on Boylston street, made a specialty of Lorraine begonias last week. Their large window is always tastefully arranged. Dinner table arrangements are shown from time to time with lamps and all accessories. An excellent business is being done.

James H. Vick, representing A. T. Boddington, was among the visitors last week.

J. H. Newman is one of the best single violet specialists growing for our market, and his flowers at 2 Park street are always eagerly snapped up.

The Waban Rose Conservatories are favorably impressed with the new rose, Lady Hillingdon. They are cutting some grand Killarney, Richmond and Beauty at present and will have a large Christmas crop.

John Barr, of South Natick, has his houses of carnations in fine shape and is cutting a splendid crop. Pink Delight is excellent and the new variegated seedling is keeping up its good reputation and will no doubt be more heard of later. W. N. Craig.

GETS FIRST WHITE MEDAL.

William P. Rich, secretary of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, reports that the first award of the George Robert White medal of honor has just been made to Prof. Charles S. Sargent, director of Arnold Arboretum.

Mr. White, in his deed of trust to the society accompanying the fund for the maintenance of the medal, states that he has long thought that there was an opportunity for broadening the field of influence of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and of extending the interest in its work if some suitable recognition were made of those persons who have accomplished important results in horticulture, the award to be made independently of or in addition to any prizes or certificates of merit that may be bestowed by the society in the course of its regular schedule of premiums. He therefore founded the George Robert White Medal of Honor Fund, the income of which is to be devoted annually for the purpose of providing a substantial gold medal to be awarded to the man or woman, commercial firm or institution in the United States that has done the most during the year, or in recent years, to advance the interest in horticulture in its broadest sense. Prof. Sargent's great work has been the introduction of many desirable ornamental trees and shrubs and the testing of their hardiness in this latitude.

The White medal of honor will take rank in its own field with the Victoria medal of honor of England and the medal of the Legion of Honor of France and will have a strong influence in promoting the horticultural activities of this country. The medal itself was struck at the United States mint in Philadelphia, from twenty-four karat gold; is two and three-fourths inches in diameter, five thirty-seconds of an inch thick, and weighs between seven and eight ounces. On the face, the figure symbolizes, not the ordinary horticulturist as much as the scientific intellect, whose aim is to improve nature, even to create, if that is possible. The trees in the background represent the allied branch of arboriculture. On the reverse, in the inscription, the name is so designed that it can be replaced by another name each time the medal is awarded.

The medal was executed by John Flanagan, the merit of whose work in this field of art is widely recognized.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business was good last week, several weddings and one or two large funerals contributing to make the demand more brisk than is usual in a week following a holiday. Respecting the latter, on all sides come reports that the Thanksgiving business was the best ever known here and the florists feel confident that it has become established as one of the special days to be considered with Christmas, Easter and Memorial Day.

Roses are growing slightly shorter in supply and on Saturday, December 3, an advance of $2 per hundred was made all along the line. Violets are the shortest that this market has experienced at this season of the year, for several years, but carnations are improving, both in quantity and quality. Chrysanthemums have passed their zenith for this season and practically every one has cut his entire crop. A few stragglers still find their way to the market and several growers have a few small houses that they are holding back for Christmas.

Already the vanguard of Christmas greens, potted stock and other offerings for the Yuletide has made its appearance and the movement, while slow, has surely set in and from now till the end of the month will be an increasing factor in the general business conditions.

West Twenty-eighth street opened last week and the young men are much delighted with their reception and the good will of the trade. Few young men have ever launched their ships on such favorable seas. The outlook is broadening every day.

The father of W. B. and A. L. Rickards has been seriously ill with pneumonia for some time and is only now convalescing.

H. Maybie, of Maywood, N. J., was in town last week, celebrating the advent of a 12-pound son. Mr. Maybie consigns his crops to P. J. Smith.

Bonnet & Blake, in Brooklyn, report a fine start on the new season, and a wide demand already for Christmas. They claim there are no better carnations than they receive from A. Dameusy, of Flatbush.

Lecakes & Co. have secured the big building on Sixth avenue for this month, where McMahon's restaurant was, close to Twenty-eighth street, for their overflow Christmas trade. One shipment of laurel received last week totaled 35,000 pounds.

John Lynch has severed his connection with the Burke Rose Co., of this city.

Charles H. Hunt is bringing in an extra fine lot of araucarias and rubbers, of which he has a good supply.

Conrad Schultz, of Westerly, was a visitor to New York last week.

One of the largest displays of flowers at a funeral seen in this city in a long time was at that of Mrs. Henry F. Lippitt, recently. It is estimated there were a hundred designs. Johnston Bros., T. J. Johnston & Co., Eugene McCarron and Mrs. William Butcher, of this city, and Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, had several pieces each, but the lion's share fell to T. O'Connor, who had upward of seventy-five pieces, several of which were from $50 to $125 each.

Peter S. Byrnes, of Wickford, is busy with outdoor work. He recently set out several thousand bulbs at an estate in Westerly.

James Steward, who has been with William Hay at his new place in Oaklawn for some time, has engaged with Joseph Kopelman as assistant superintendent at the latter's farm in Oaklawn.

At the meeting of the executive committee of the Washington County Agricultural Society November 28, J. V. B. Watson, of Wakefield, who has been superintendent of the association for the last thirty-four years, resigned and Philip A. Money, of Slocum, will fill his place.

Robert Greenlaw, representing the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, was in the city last week.

Charles W. Morey, proprietor of the Woonsocket Hill Nursery, Woonsocket, has been appointed tree warden for North Smithfield.

Johnston Bros. have installed a handsome new ice-box in their store on Dorrance street. It is without an equal in this city. It is of quartered oak with heavy plate glass doors and mirrored back. The firm is arranging several alterations and improvements in store and workroom.

William B. Hazard is contemplating giving up his retail store on Mathewson street.

James B. Canning has recently had several large decorating commissions. These included the plants for the John Hay Library at Brown University on the occasion of its dedication, the annual ball of the Providence Permanent Police Department at the State Armory and several at the Narragansett hotel.

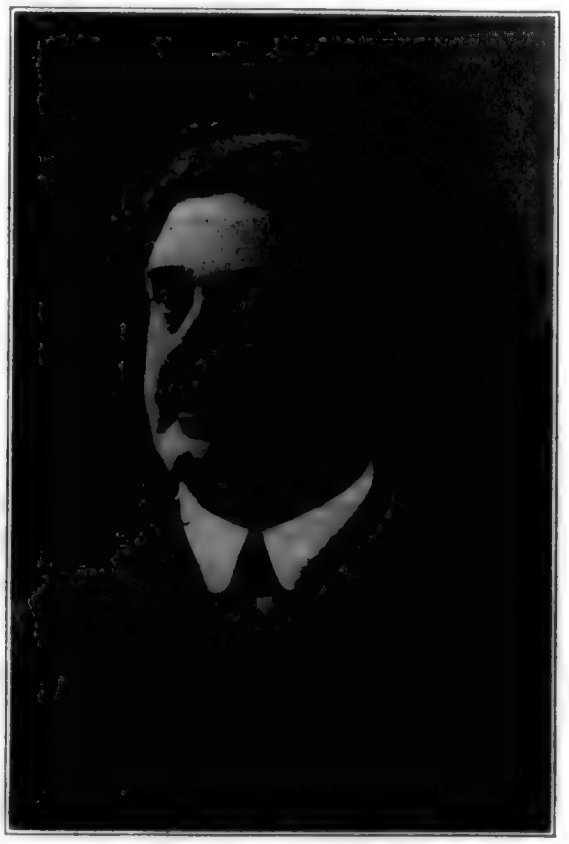
A conservatory 20x50 feet is to be built at the estate of August Belmont, in Newport.

W. S. Pino, Washington street, this city, has just received a large importation of immortelles from France.

Samuel Kinder, tree warden at Bristol, and his force of workmen have just completed the planting of over 300 young trees to replace decayed ones in the central portion of the town.

Fred B. Luther, of Oxford street, is bringing in some fine variegated stevia that finds ready sale.

John A. Macrae is cutting a good crop of extra fine carnations, but his supply does not equal the demand for this stock.



Frank Barker, of Warren, has just returned from a vacation trip in the woods of Maine. W. H. M.

OBITUARY.

Charles P. Braslan.

Charles P. Braslan, president of the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., San Jose, Cal., and probably known personally to as many seedsmen as any other man in the trade in America, died at his home December 3, after an illness of ten days with pneumonia.

Mr. Braslan was born near Boston in 1861 and was therefore in his forty-ninth year. All his life he had been identified with the seed trade, having entered the employ of Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation at Boston when he was only 12 years of age. He remained with the Boston firm for eleven years, but at the age of 23 he went into business for himself in partnership with Jesse E. Northrup, at Minneapolis. In 1887 A. H. Goodwin, now of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, joined the firm, which was incorporated as the Northrup, Braslan & Goodwin Co. This business continued for ten years, Mr. Braslan being the general manager. When the Northrup, Braslan & Goodwin Co. retired from the trade, Mr. Braslan returned to Breck, opening at Chicago a branch for the Boston house, which he continued for a couple of years. In 1898 he removed to San Jose and took up the work of seed growing for the wholesale trade. Within the short space of twelve years he built up the largest seed growing business in the United States and probably his firm had more acres under seed crops last year than any other seed growing concern anywhere in the world. Mr. Braslan did not have the advantage of thorough schooling, except in the affairs of the trade and the business world, but he developed remarkable aptitude for his work and was possessed of strong mental powers. Organizing the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., with the control of a moderate acreage, he rapidly added ranch after ranch in the best seed growing districts of California, until the total ran into the thousands of acres and the magnitude of the operations exceeded anything heretofore known in the seed growing industry. It is stated that the pay roll of the company had not in some years carried less than 600 names and that in various seasons the number had exceeded 1,500. Connections were established with European houses and large quantities of seeds grown in California for export. Mr. Braslan, who had the tile of major, was accustomed to making an annual trip to call on each of the principal seedsmen throughout the United States, and also was a regular attendant at the conventions of the American Seed Trade Association through many years, and made periodical business trips to Europe. He was extremely popular and his nature was so virile that he was welcomed as a breath of fresh air wherever he journeyed.

Charles P. Braslan.

Mr. Braslan leaves a wife, with a daughter of two years. There also are three other children by previous marriages.

William Kennedy.

William Kennedy, a landscape gardener and florist of Greenfield, Mass., died November 23, at his home on Davis street, after an illness of about a year. He was 69 years old. He was a competent man in his business, and in his younger days had been employed on the estates of the Duke of Argyle, of Scotland, and Sir Richard Wallace, of Ireland. He was born in the north of Ireland, and came to this country about forty years ago. After removing to Greenfield he had charge successively of several of the large estates in that vicinity. His last work in Greenfield was grading the entrance to Shattuck park. For a time he conducted a florist's business in Greenfield. He is survived by his wife and six sons, Isaac, of Cleveland, O.; Thomas, of Philadelphia; William, of Brookline; Sherrard and John, of Greenfield.

B. A. Moeckel.

B. A. Moeckel, a florist of Emlenton, Pa., died at his home October 23, after an illness of some months. He was born in Zwickau, Saxony, Germany. He received a thorough education and was graduated from the law department of the University of Leipsic, which was also the alma mater of both his father and his grandfather. After practicing law for a few years in Chemnitz, he came to America. He was a man of warm, sympathetic nature, intensely loyal to his friends, honest and truthful in all his dealings. He is survived by his wife and one sister.

CALLAS WILTING.

I have some callas in bloom. The plants are healthy, but some of the flowers are rotten, or brownish, as if wilted. I keep the temperature between 55 and 60 degrees at night. They are never damp. Can you tell me what is the cause of this trouble? H. R.

This condition is not at all uncommon. It is due to trouble at the roots. Be sure the drainage of your pots is good. Do not feed until the pots are full of roots and then avoid heavy doses. Weak liquid manure twice a week will do much more good than a strong dose once a week. Your temperature should be all right. C. W.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Bennington, Vt.—L. C. Holton is on a flying trip to New York, purchasing stock and getting the latest ideas for holiday trade. The new house is producing elegant stock.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Benson's Flower Store is being advertised by the distribution of a brightly colored post card showing the establishment in Easter attire.

Pittsfield, Mass.—F. S. Folwell has almost recovered from his tumble, which cost him a broken rib or two; he is glad it was not worse. He reports a good season, with plenty of stock.

Pittsfield, Mass.—John White still grows Cullingfordii and considers it the best of its class as a commercial chrysanthemum. He is experimenting with Darwin tulips for Decoration day.

Decatur, Tex.—Albert Spencer has a red seedling geranium, which is a strong grower and which he says stands the hot, dry, windy weather in Texas better than any other variety he ever has grown. He has worked up quite a stock.

Madison, N. J.—The Model Stemmer Co. has been licensed to do business; capital, $10,000; incorporators, Edward H. Behre, Anna Behre and Susan Simonson. The company is to manufacture the metal stemmer exhibited at the S. A. F. convention at Rochester, and florists' supplies.

Bloomsburg, Pa.—J. L. Dillon is sending out a new verbena this season, named Columbia. It is a seedling of their own raising and is pink and white, of unusual size. The firm annually propagates several hundreds of thousands of verbenas for the trade. The shipping season has begun and will continue until June.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—The Stiles Co. has been twelve years in the trade here and has built up a large and substantial business. Besides the store on West Main street, the firm has a range of greenhouses at 1100 West Twenty-eighth street and was specially successful in the growing of chrysanthemums this season.

Missoula, Mont.—The new flower store of the Missoula Nursery Co., in the Montana building, is elegantly fitted up, well stocked and well patronized, and Charles F. Dallman, the proprietor, is well pleased with the prospects. "It is not long," he says, "since people laughed at the idea of making a flower store amount to much in this city. We had a modest little stall then, but we have been expanding all the time since."

Buffalo, N. Y.—S. A. Anderson, the Main street florist, acted as judge in the flower department of the recent exhibition of the Ontario Horticultural Association, at Toronto.

Forest City, Ia.—C. B. Simons, employed at the Hill City Greenhouses, in this city, and Miss Lillian Haggestad, of Dane Valley, Wis., were married November 19.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—J. F. Wilcox is planning to put his business into the form of a corporation. The glass was added to materially during the last summer.

Waltham, Mass.—M. F. Ruane, who opened a flower store on Moody street last September, has greenhouses at Waverley. He conducted a party of visitors through the greenhouses December 4.

Alexandria, Va.—Since opening the new store at 822 King street the Kramer Floral Co. has secured a considerable increase in trade and is quite pleased with the development of the business. The firm has greenhouses on North Fayette street.

Tarentum, Pa.—G. A. McWilliams, formerly in business at Natrona, Pa., has organized a stock company here, to be known as the McWilliams Floral Co. The new organization has purchased a farm one mile from the city and is there operating about 56,000 square feet of glass.

Syracuse, N. Y.—A new firm of florists has been incorporated here, under the name of the W. E. Day Co., with a capital stock of $15,000, of which $5,000 is preferred. The company begins business with a paid in capital of $1,500. The directors are William E. Day, Mary E. Day and Fred W. Bannister.

New Orleans, La.—Charles Eble says he and other downtown florists have been unusually busy lately with an exceptionally large run of funeral orders for prominent citizens. This was in addition to the regular demand for the French opera, weddings and other social functions and necessitated calling for stock from Chicago and other flower markets.

North Adams, Mass.—A. J. Schmutz reports a thorough clean-up at Thanksgiving. His carnations brought $1 per dozen and he is keeping it up now. He says it is easy to get it, and, judging by the stock, it is well worth the price. Octoroon is his best crimson. Pink Delight is not so popular as Enchantress. A fine batch of cuttings is in the sand. Mr. Schmutz is a nephew of A. Demeusy, of Flatbush, and inherits his success in growing, especially in growing carnations.

Union, N. H.—Frank Varney has installed a steam heating system in his greenhouses.

Juneau, Wis.—Mrs. C. Neider is growing chrysanthemums and other flowers for the market and the stock she offers is of excellent quality.

Portland, Me.—Mrs. Goddard, wife of L. C. Goddard, has recently been ill at the Maine General hospital, following a serious operation, but at last report her condition was improving.

London, England.—At the recent date of the organization of the London Florists' and Fruiterers' Association it was stated there were in greater London 2,500 florists and 4,500 fruiterers.

New Orleans, La.—The recent displays of flowers and plants in the greenhouses at City park have been particularly attractive, and Frank E. Brooker, the florist in charge, has been receiving a great deal of well-deserved credit for what he has accomplished.

Springfield, Mo.—The Ozark Seed Co., on Commercial street, has had some remarkably fine displays of flowers in its large show window during the last few weeks, and E. L. Kline, the manager, has received many compliments on the artistic arrangement of the stock.

Lawrence, Kan.—George Ecke has opened a store at 825½ Massachusetts street and has named it the Flower Shop. The formal opening was held November 17 and was highly successful. He occupies his own building, in the center of the business district, and is quite pleased with the prospects for business.

Hiawatha, Kan.—Miss Susan Margrave's new store and greenhouses, recently completed, are tastefully and substantially constructed and are regarded as an ornament to the town. They contain 5,700 square feet of glass and the walls are built of cement blocks, partly of rustic design. Since the death of her father, five years ago, she has had the entire management of the business and has been remarkably successful.

Lynn, Mass.—Edward Dwyer, the florist at 34 Maple street, has sued the Boston & Northern street railway for damages to the amount of $1,000, on account of the loss of a large willow tree. The willow stood near Floating Bridge park, which is owned by the railway company. During the summer, balloon ascensions formed part of the attractions at the park, and Mr. Dwyer states that the gas used to inflate the balloons caused the death of the tree. The tree was considered valuable on account of its location and general associations.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

General business is excellent in the middle west. Clearings at Chicago are running a million dollars a day ahead of last year in spite of the fact that bank consolidations have reduced the number of checks that must pass through the clearing house.

The Lord & Burnham Co., New York, has just issued a new catalogue that should help the flower business in general, as well as the business it was designed to push. For the book shows private greenhouses in a way that ought to make everybody who sees it keen to possess such structures. More than usual stress has been placed on growing fruit under glass, but all sorts of houses are illustrated, from glassed-in porches to the great range at Bronx park. Each subject has a plan number, and a ground plan is shown, as well as an exterior and interior view. The book is an example of modern printing art and bears the imprint of the Tuthill Ad Agency, New York.

CALENDARS RECEIVED.

The 1911 calendars are coming into full crop. The first received are from the North Carolina Evergreen Co., Banners Elk, N. C., and the National Co-operative Show Gardens, Spencer, Ind.

TRADE CONDITIONS IN ENGLAND.

I have read with interest your remarks and quotations of statistics of the condition of the horticultural trades in England during the last five years, and compared with the failures in the States we appear to have the advantage. Yet statistics are not always conclusive, and our British trade press is correct in the conclusion that the trade in England, generally speaking, is not what it should or could be. For while few firms entirely fail, all too many are on the verge of it, which I imagine, perhaps in ignorance, is not the case with you in America. We want more of the "neck or nothing" principle about us over here. Our smaller nurserymen will not speculate or advertise and generally push their business in a manner more in keeping with other walks of life, but they live from hand to mouth, or, as a more apt writer puts it, they "try to live by taking in each other's washing." I can assure you that quite half of our provincial nurserymen are on the verge of bankruptcy, and yet they carry on between themselves a ridiculous cut price competition, which means microscopic profits and eventual bankruptcy, or the equivalent to it, and that is why I write, not to belittle ourselves or our fellow craftsmen, but with the object which I have so repeatedly aimed at over here—to point out the folly before it is too late.

Montagu C. Allwood.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business is swinging along at the brisk pace of a normal winter, with no special feature except a comparative shortage of carnations. Other lines of stock are in larger supply than usually is the case in December, but carnations continue on the short side compared to the excellent demand. Quality generally is excellent and the receipts would be sufficient to take care of normal requirements. It appears, however, that all through this part of the country production is running rather light and demand rather heavy, so that the calls made on the Chicago market are sufficient to hold the prices of carnations at a level rather above what is usual at this date. Most orders are filled in full, but some of those received late in the day are difficult to supply. White is more in demand than other colors, with red selling better than pink.

as they were a week ago, but prices have not advanced; they are at the normal level for this date, though the stock is of superlative excellence. That it is appreciated is shown by the volume of business. Killarney is the most abundant of other roses, but there are many first-class Maryland, and in one or two places Jardine is offered in moderate quantity and of fine quality. The crops of Richmond are good, both in quantity and quality, and this rose steadily is selling better. Few Maid now are received in this market and orders for this old-time favorite, many of which still come to hand from the irregular buyers, are not easy to fill. It is noticeable that the short roses are bringing a better price, comparatively speaking, than the special long grade. The call for funeral work is so heavy, and white carnations are so scarce, that the demand for short white and pink roses is extremely heavy. Short roses are picked up on sight, and in the average wholesale house the only roses to be had late in the day are the special fancy lengths, of which there is an abundance in practically all varieties.

Chrysanthemums virtually have disappeared for the season. Some growers still are cutting quite a few white, but there are not many yellow. The finest of the stock now received is bringing prices fully up to the best realized this year, and even the poorer grades are doing well; the retailers insist mums are not worth what is asked for them, but still they buy. The passing of the chrysanthemums has resulted in the usual increase in the call for Easter lilies, which are now taken up so promptly on arrival that it is not always possible to fill late orders, and, of course, prices have stiffened. Callas are more plentiful, but sell only moderately well.

Violets are again coming in heavily; there has been a constant increase in supply ever since the shortage a few days before Thanksgiving. The receipts now are rather more than the market can consume at regular rates, with the result that prices have weakened all along the line and some portion of each day's receipts is left to be jobbed off. No finer violets ever were received in this market than the best of those now coming in.

There is no change in cattleyas; it still is difficult to fill orders, even at the prices now in vogue. Valley sells excellently, but is not so scarce as it was. There is an abundance of Paper Whites. Stevia is everywhere. A few rubrum lilies find sale at moderate prices.

The increased demand for boxwood has resulted in a comparative scarcity; shipments are not coming forward as rapidly as they should. The situation in other greens is unchanged.

Christmas Prospects.

Ask any grower and he will tell you that, though he understands everybody else is backward, his own crops will be right in time for Christmas. The weather is the important factor for this holiday. It is the season of clouded skies. But there have now been weeks with little sunshine, and the growers feel they are about due for some pleasant days. Carnations are reported full of buds and Beauties and roses just coming into crop. At a time like this it makes all the difference in the world whether crops are just going off or just coming on. With the latter condition, as at present, the growers can do a great deal to stimulate production.

Club Meeting.

At its November meeting members of the Florists' Club perpetrated a surprise on H. E. Philpott by presenting him with gold cuff links, but following his nomination for president, December 1, which was equivalent to election, he completely turned the tables by setting up a course dinner with wine for the fifty members who attended the meeting. After the banquet, which took place in the main dining room of the Union hotel, President George Asmus officiated as master of ceremonies. He called for speeches by each of those who earlier in the evening had been nominated for office, as follows:

President—H. E. Philpott.
Vice-president—A. C. Kohlbrand.
Secretary—A. T. Pyfer.
Treasurer—E. F. Winterson.
Trustees—H. N. Bruns, Alex Henderson and John P. Degnan.

Having then arrived at the point where recourse must be had to the laity, he called for other speakers in the following order: H. B. Howard, M. Barker, E. C. Amling, F. Lautenschlager, F. F. Benthey, L. H. Winterson and Mike Fink. Miss Kohlbrand, daughter of A. C. Kohlbrand, was present and her performance on the piano was rewarded by much applause and the presentation of a splendid vase of Washington carnation, with which the Chicago Carnation Co. had graced the table.

At the business meeting, aside from the nominations, which left no contests for the election, only routine work was handled. For the flower booth at the show Mr. Philpott reported a profit of $193.93 and for the restaurant in the basement Alex Henderson reported a profit of $103.12. A. C. Kohlbrand, for the committee on banquet, accounted for some $700 expended for the affair at the La Salle hotel. Fred Lautenschlager reported for the reception committee. Treasurer Winterson presented a report which showed $1,651.56 cash on hand, against which the club's only liability is $615, then due the La Salle, leaving a balance of $1,038.56.

The following were elected to membership: Max Awizzus and H. C. Wullbrandt, of the E. C. Amling Co.;

WANTED—CONSIGNORS

OUR BUSINESS is increasing so steadily that we can use additional consignments of FIRST-CLASS STOCK. Would particularly like to hear from growers of A GOOD GRADE OF CARNATIONS. No objection to handling PART of a grower's output; our returns do not suffer BY COMPARISON with those from other houses or other markets. Let us give you the names of growers who have "been around" and who now CONSIGN THEIR ENTIRE OUTPUT TO US.

We are not looking for ALL the stock shipped to Chicago, but we want ENOUGH to supply our REGULAR trade. WE DO NOT take on more than this, which assures the grower that ALL his stock is disposed of AT BEST MARKET VALUES, and not half of it and the other half sacrificed, the latter way making poor averages.

William A. Starrett, of the Chicago Carnation Co.; Tim Matchen, sales manager for Peter Reinberg; E. R. Farley, of the Percy Jones staff, and George Klehm, of Klehm's Nurseries. Names proposed for membership were: John W. Starrett, H. B. Dorner, William Wolniewicz, Nic. Karthauser, John W. Schmidt, George Goebel, Guy M. Reburn, Valdav Bezdek and Adolph Malchow.

It was voted to have a supper, Dutch treat, following the January meeting, and A. C. Kohlbrand and his November banquet committee were retained for the job.

November Business.

November was a generally satisfactory month. The retailers had good trade and the record in the wholesale district is generally ahead of the month in any previous year. There was a dull week at the opening of the month, but steadily thereafter demand gathered volume and prices averaged better than in recent Novembers. Thanksgiving was great, and if coming months maintain the November record everyone will be happy.

November Weather.

It was the coldest November since 1903, and in strong contrast with November, 1909, this year the mean temperature having been 36 degrees, as against 48 degrees last year. The percentage of sunshine, 45, was nearly normal. The wind movement was considerably below the average, which perhaps saved something on coal consumption to offset the lower temperature.

Various Notes.

C. A. Samuelson expects to have his new Packard delivery automobile in service before December 15. He is somewhat hampered in the meantime, as the auto was expected several weeks ago, and several horses and wagons were sold in anticipation of its arrival. Delays were met with, however, and it left Mr. Samuelson with a considerably depleted delivery service, but relief is now in sight.

J. P. Risch made his first appearance December 5 at the store of Weiland & Risch, after having been on the sick list six weeks.

The A. L. Randall Co. is urging growers to look out for their coal supply, having found freight already moving with exasperating slowness. They have cars of imported supplies, eastern boxwood and holly and southern wild smilax long overdue.

along through summer, having recently ordered stock for crops of all the leading summer flowers, from peonies, gladioli and asters, to the later blooming daisies, etc.

Ley & Bro., of Highland, N. Y., are shipping Adiantum hybridum to Percy Jones.

John Poehlmann says that the crops of Poehlmann Bros. Co. look as well as he could ask, except the sweet peas. These, too, appear well, the vines having made a wonderful growth, but he says they drop the buds instead of expanding them.

August Grossman, who now is running for his own account the greenhouses which he leased for years to the late Ernest Weber, is cutting a fine crop of Killarney, pink and white. He consigns his output to John Kruchten.

E. C. Amling says he believes there will be more flowers for Christmas than this market ever before has seen.

W. J. Smyth had the family order for the Cudahy funeral last week, including a casket cover of violets, but practically all the leading stores had work for the occasion, the display of flowers being one of the largest ever seen in Chicago.

The Fleischman store in the Railway Exchange building is doing a large business, but uses scarcely any carnations compared to the other flowers handled.

Correction.

The following statement appeared in this column last week: "Yellow chrysanthemums were in great demand, bringing $4 and $5, and some select Chadwicks $6 per dozen, while ordinary stock that usually sells for $1 per dozen often realized $15 in hundred lots." This was intended to be taken in conjunction with the listed quotation that appeared on page 59, of "Mums, fancy, $3 to $4 per dozen." In other words, the prices quoted in this column are extraordinary only, and intended to bring out the strong feature of the market, which in this instance was that yellow chrysanthemums and violets were popular and high in price. The number of yellow chrysanthemums that brought over $3 was small and their quality unusual.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Winter has come. December opened with a snow storm unshared by our brethren in New York and has been followed by another of much larger proportion. Stock has shortened. The dark weather and the wane of the chrysanthemum season are responsible, excepting in carnations.

Carnations are scarcer than anything else on the list. They have taken a decided advance in price, due, undoubtedly, to the short supply. The Wards have gone up to $8, while fancy stock, well grown, of the better varieties brings from $4 to $6. Older sorts and stock of moderate degree brings from $2 to $3. These figures are quoted because they are remarkable for the first week in December.

Roses are improving and sell well. White is easier. Cattleyas continue scarce and high in price. Gardenias and valley are in demand, with not enough for all orders. Sweet peas are plentiful and some of them excellent for the season. Violets are much easier since the holiday; there is no special call for them. Snapdragons are improving, some longer stemmed stock being seen. There are still some Baby chrysanthemums about, but Jeanne Nonin has the field almost to itself among the fancy late varieties, although there are a few Chadwicks and a few Mrs. Jerome Jones. Romans and Paper Whites are about, but sell slowly. Poinsettia has made its appearance, but it is not in demand yet. Shipping is brisk.

Club Meeting.

Senator Heacock presided over an excellent meeting of the Florists' Club December 6, many leading men in the trade braving the heavy storm to hear Edward A. Stroud's paper on flower shows, which was well received. E.

Gurney Hill came in person from Richmond, Ind., with a trunkful of exhibits. These included fine vases of Rose Queen, that attracted everyone by its rich color; Sunburst and Mrs. Aaron Ward, both splendidly grown. Bonfire, a bright scarlet carnation, was well liked. S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. had beautiful vases of Melody and Double Pink Killarney, brought by Edward Schwartz from the greenhouses of Robert Scott & Son. Myers & Samtman brought Hilda in fine form, the deep color showing well in bud and flower.

An Old-Fashioned Bouquet.

A friend came in the other evening triumphantly flourishing a debutante's bouquet captured at a smart coming-out reception. It was made up in the old-fashioned style revived in popular favor for the Assemblies two or three years ago. These bouquets are made up round and flat, very stiff, with the modern addition of the daintiest lace and chiffon bouquet holder. This bouquet varied from the revived style in that it was intended to hold face outward, appearing somewhat like a corsage bunch of about the size usually worn in violets. The flowers used were double violets, pink snapdragon, the individual short stem florets wired with the violets, and a single white gardenia, the lace bouquet holder setting off the bunch as a frame does its picture, with delicate pink, with pink ribbon to match hanging for about a yard in length. On the ribbon were a couple of rosettes of the same flowers, violets and pink snapdragon. The effect was charming. Glancing at the reverse side of the ribbon to see if there was any indication to whom this beautiful creation should be credited, not a trace of authorship was revealed. Strangely enough, after a moment of earnest gazing, the initials "H. Philadelphia Business Methods.

A prominent New York business man decided the other day to pay a flying visit to Philadelphia for the purpose of looking over the stock of one supply house and one cut flower house. His plan was to take the 7 a. m. train from New York, arriving in Philadelphia at 9 o'clock, to devote one hour to each of the two houses, leaving Philadelphia on the noon train scheduled to arrive in New York at 2 p. m. When he imparted this information to his friends the day before they ridiculed the idea, telling him that if he wanted stock he might as well look for it in Brooklyn. Undismayed, the New Yorker carried out his plan, arriving here on time and going direct to the store of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. About 10 o'clock he asked Mr. Bayersdorfer how quickly fifty cases of immortelles could be sent to New York. "As quick as you can say it," came the reply. By 10:30 all the cases were ready and loaded on the express wagons. Further inspection of the large warehouse proved so interesting and apparently profitable that it was 4 p. m. before the New Yorker had finished his business, leaving in a rush to snatch a few moments at the cut flower house before catching the 5 o'clock train. He left with the remark that he would be over every week now.

That is the way Philadelphia does business today.

Christmas Plants.

"We are twenty years ahead." Modest, hard-working Duncan Macaw would be quite shocked did he know that this sentence, uttered in an enthusiastic moment of triumph, would find its way into print. Yet this sentence of Mr. Macaw's so exactly expresses the impression made by the Christmas plants this season that it is given as the best pen picture.

Christmas red and Christmas green, promise of Christmas cheer, are everywhere. The points that stand out most clearly are the high grade of the stock. Not only is it well grown, but it is exceedingly well timed; that means that the finishing or hardening process is being thoroughly done. Then, too, the quantity of the most desirable kinds of stock indicates a clear knowledge of the popularity of each variety, unhampered by lack of skill in producing that variety. For example, poinsettias predominate, as they should; so, too, do cheerful colors in the other flowering plants, with a notable absence of those varieties of plants whose sole claim to popularity at Christmas is derived from the fact that they are something different.

The appointment to look over the Christmas stock for the Robert Craig Co. was for two o'clock. Precisely at that hour Duncan Macaw stepped smilingly forward to show the results of the season's work. For convenience's sake, the stock may be divided into two sections, flowering and foliage. The flowering section comprises poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias and azaleas, all grown in quantity, the first three especially so. The poinsettias were the largest and finest lot of this scarlet flower ever seen in Philadelphia. The bracts are large and full; the foliage almost invariably goes down to the pot. From the large house planted out for cut flowers, through the various sizes of pans made up with ferns, and of pots,

CHICAGO NOTES.

E. E. Pieser, who is as constantly on the job as any man in the market, has been absent from the store of Kennicott Bros. Co. for a couple of days because of lumbago.

H. N. Bruns says valley pip shipments are coming along rapidly and reports receiving 500,000 pips in one lot December 5.

At E. H. Hunt's, Clifford Pruner says the rush in the supply department is heavier than last year and Miss Burkhart, his chief assistant, has been ill this week.

Phil Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, points to the brightness of color in Maryland compared to Killarney as explaining the special demand for the former.

A number of those in the trade received invitations to attend a meeting of those interested in the State Agricultural College at Urbana, December 8, and also a reception to be given by Dean Davenport.

Anton Then's father died December 1, at 4920 North Western avenue. His name also was Anton and he was 82 years of age.

Wietor Bros. are now using the shredded cattle manure in carload lots.

C. L. Washburn has been ill with a cold this week. Bassett & Washburn say one order is being offered around the market for 1,000 long Beauties at $1 each for Christmas delivery.

Kyle & Foerster, who have not hitherto handled New York violets, report having taken on two consignors of these this week.

The Avenue Floral Co. has been opened at 3810 Grand avenue. The proprietor is L. Hoecker, but few will recognize him by that name; everyone who visits Peter Reinberg's knows him as "Stogie." R. Troost is manager of the store.

A. C. Reicher, of Michigan City, Ind., was one of the big buyers in this market Sunday and Monday. He had the work for the Parker funeral in his town December 6.

December 5 was flower day at the County building, the newly elected democratic officials taking their seats. It is the first time in years the democrats have had any occasion to buy flowers, except for funerals, and they made the most of the opportunity. There were hundreds of designs, some of them extremely large and some decidedly unique, one an enormous rooster in flowers and another representing a new broom and inscribed "Sweeps Clean." Wietor Bros. sent Commissioner Joseph Mendel a big bunch of Beauties and he received many other flowers.

One of the novelties now being tried out by Frank Oechslin is a new Christmas plant called the Birdseye cherry. It resembles in many respects the well known Jerusalem cherry, but is somewhat smaller and carries clusters of little red berries well above the foliage. It is especially pleasing because the red is thus much more prominent.

At Zech & Mann's, John Zech says he looks for the largest Christmas business this market ever has seen.

Mrs. J. Sikyta is preparing to open a flower store about December 10 in a new building on Fortieth avenue, near Ogden.

Max Ringier, of Vaughan & Sperry, made a trip to New Castle last week to visit William Dittman and size up the Beauty crops. He says there will be a big cut of long stems for Christmas.

H. E. Philpott returned to Winnipeg December 5. He enjoyed himself all this visit nearly as much as his guests did the surprise he gave them on club night.

The Chicago Carnation Co. has issued a colored plate of its new dark pink variety, Washington.

Christmas trees already have arrived at Winterson's Seed Store—the table sizes.

At George Reinberg's they say business is the best of the year.

C. W. McKellar says he never has seen a time when cattleyas remained scarce for so long. He thinks it is increased demand as much as light crops.

Announcement has been received of the marriage, December 1, of Gustav Reising and Miss Lina Buess. Both were employees of L. Baumann & Co., the groom as traveler and the bride as foreign stenographer.

HUDSON, N. Y.

R. W. Allen says we all have our troubles; his is a solid one—nothing but cement everywhere, except where it could be utilized for walks or benches. He is in a quandary owing to a heavy coating of cement, carried through the air from works three miles distant in the form of fine dust. It settles and sticks so that nothing will remove it except scraping the glass.

The matter is now being investigated. Certain it is that nothing excepting foliage plants will succeed under such conditions. The sun cannot penetrate. Stock planted in beds will not take water. Chrysanthemums that never before, in an experience of twenty-five years, have been sold for less than $2 per dozen, brought only 50 cents this season. Glory of the Pacific and Pacific Supreme were white instead of pink. There is a fine lot of cattleyas, which are making new growths, but they are soft. It is worse than ground glass. M.

IMMORTELLES.

The customs appraisers have advanced the declared value of a recent importation of immortelles as follows:

IMMORTELLES.—From Lemoyne Freres, Toulon, exported October 15, 1910; entered at New York. File No. 56957. Invoice No. 14993. Findings of McClelland, G. A.: Immortelles, red, white and purple; entered at 38 net, advanced to 44 francs, less 5 per cent per 100 bunches. Add cases and packing.

Vegetable Forcing.

Considerable work has been done by the U. S. Department of Agriculture during the last year upon a new spot disease of cauliflower. The cause has been determined, a biological study of the parasite made, and many experiments carried on to determine the conditions under which infection takes place. The efforts which have been made to develop and maintain strains and varieties of the standard commercial vegetables peculiarly adapted for specific purposes have proved decidedly sucessful. The crops now well in hand are lettuce, cauliflower, cabbage, beets and tomatoes. Others will be taken up as rapidly as possible.

GREENHOUSE VEGETABLES.

CHICAGO, December 6.—Cucumbers, $1.10 to $1.50 doz.; lettuce, 20c to 25c case.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Cucumbers, $1 to $1.25 doz.; lettuce, $1.75 to $2.25 2-box strap; mushrooms, 20c to 40c lb.; radishes, $1.50 to $2.50 hundred bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 20c lb.

BOSTON, December 5.—Mushrooms, 40c to 60c lb.; cucumbers, $3.50 to $13 box; lettuce, 85c to $1.25 box; tomatoes, 25c lb.; mint, 50c to 60c doz.; romaine, 75c to $1 doz.; escarolle, 50c to 75c doz.

TOMATOES AND EGGPLANTS.

I am sending you three tomatoes from my greenhouses. Please tell me what is the matter with them and what to do for them.

Please tell me what to spray my eggplants with, to keep down the thrips and green fly. I should like, also, to know what to fumigate with, as the smoke from tobacco stems does not seem to get under the big leaves at all. I am also sending you a leaf of my eggplants. The stalks seem to be healthy and strong, but the leaves seem to wilt in spots, and in a day the whole leaf is like wet paper.

The tomatoes and eggplants are in the same house. I try not to keep them too wet, keeping them a little on the dry side rather than otherwise. I run the house at 60 degrees at night and 70 degrees in the daytime, though sometimes the night temperature goes as low as 56 degrees. M. E. A.

Your tomatoes have the dry rot or blossom end rot, a disease brought on by having the soil too dry. I have never seen a case of this disease where it would not be entirely stopped within two weeks if the plants were kept well watered at the roots. Tomatoes like a rather dry atmosphere and should not be sprayed on the foliage, but they require plenty of water at the roots after they get to setting fruit.

Your temperature should be around 60 degrees at night for either crop and they will do satisfactorily in the same house, although the eggplants will stand more heat and should be sprayed with a strong water pressure, brought up under the foliage occasionally to keep insects dislodged. If the plants are badly attacked, spray them with a nicotine extract.

Eggplants are affected by a peculiar disease which wilts the leaves, but often the plants will recover and outgrow it. I have never found any remedy that seemed of any value for it. Keep the worst leaves picked off and burned. H. G.

A START IN LETTUCE FORCING.

I have a new greenhouse, 20x100, running north and south, and I intend to plant it to lettuce. I should like to know which would be the better way to plant it—in benches eighteen inches high, with one foot of leaves and six inches of loam, or right in the ground. Please tell me, also, what you would think of a bench eight feet wide, with four 1-inch steam pipes, two feet apart, in the bottom, for a gentle bottom heat, and with two feet of leaves and six inches of loam. A. M.

Lettuce will do well either in solid beds of soil, made right on the ground the same as outdoors, or on raised benches like cut flowers. I would advise you to put in benches, however, as the crops come to maturity much more quickly on raised benches with pipes underneath. The bottom of the bench should be about eighteen inches from the ground. Use 6-inch lumber for the sides.

If you use 1-inch pipe for steam heating, you will need about ten of them in the house. I would put an 8-foot bench in the center of the house, with four pipes under it, and would put 4-foot benches along each wall, with three pipes under each. You can hang the pipes with wire hangers to nails driven into the cross pieces of the bench. They will give bottom heat and heat the house also.

If you had the pipes buried in leaves they would not heat the house; such a plan would not be advisable, at any rate. One or two pipes are sometimes buried deep under the beds on solid ground, but they should be small and not turned on much of the time, or they dry the soil and get it too hot.

Never mind the leaves; use good, rich, new soil that is soft and light.

We have had approximately half a day of sunshine since the last writing, and this was of an apologetic kind. Every grower knows what this will do to stock for Christmas. Just at present a much larger amount of stock is on hand to fill orders than a week ago. The orders just about take up everything worth while, but last week they took everything in sight.

The prices, generally speaking, are about the same as at the last writing. Roses of all kinds are more plentiful than they were. The steady supply of Beauties finds a fair request. Carnations are coming in much more slowly than the orders for them and are going up in price. Double violets and valley are in quantity, but find only a fairly good call. Easter lilies, callas, stevias and white and yellow narcissi are also offered. There is a strong demand for greens and a sufficient supply of all kinds.

The shipping trade is constantly increasing and the demand from this source has used much of the stock in the market.

and Bloomhurst. When they reached there the manager, William Sunderbruch, was waiting with the glad hand, and almost the first thing he said was, "Won't you take a look around?" When we saw all the stock, the reason for his immediate invitation was apparent. Everything looks fine, and, according to appearances, the firm will be in good position to take care of holiday demands on roses and carnations.

The Rosebank Co., of this city, is consigning some fine smilax, stevia and carnations to C. E. Critchell.

Dille & Konzelman, of Greensburg, Ind., are shipping excellent carnations to E. G. Gillett.

C. E. Critchell says that he has found an unusually strong demand for

SEFTON CORRUGATED SHIPPING CASES

STRONG, LIGHT AND CONVENIENT

WHY use heavy wooden Boxes for Shipments of Flowers and Plants when you can get a box better adapted to your needs, weighing about one-half as much?

Our Boxes are made to fold flat; thus insuring economy in storage space and enables the commission merchant to knock them down and return them in bundles, reducing return charges--they can be used over and over.

Our Patented K. D. Tin Corner is the only satisfactory K.D. corner ever adapted to a Corrugated Shipping Case. It gives you a perfectly flat box. Costs no more than set up corners.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business has been good, as also is stock. Chrysanthemums are becoming less plentiful. Pink or lavender shades are gone. Some fine poinsettias are already seen and are selling well. While flowers for wearing are more popular than ever, the violet is not meeting with the demand of former years. Single yellow mums, for one thing, have cut into the violet sales. The use of southern smilax for decorative purposes has been exceedingly heavy.

Various Notes.

William Pedrick, of Walkerville, has been ill for a week, but is on his feet again.

The club meeting held December 5 was well attended. All hands participated in a talk on holiday preparations. Three new members were elected: Donald T. McLean, John Roland and Adelbert Gieche.

M. Bloy has possessed himself of a Packard touring car. H. S.

THE government seed shop is preparing to place contracts for its 1912 stock.

THE Washington correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Congressman Mann's pure seed bill will be reported favorably by his committee, but it is doubtful if it will get any farther at this session."

THE announcement of the death of Charles P. Braslan, at San Jose, Cal., December 3 comes as a shock to the trade, for few have been apprised of his brief illness. Particulars will be found in the obituary column on another page.

AS restraining the expansion of the seed business, the lack of experienced help is doing at least as much as the shortage of seed stocks. It always is possible to buy seeds, but it is not always possible to find men capable of buying and selling at a profit.

THE law of supply and demand will in time restore peas to something like former abundance, but probably prices never again will go back to what they were. It will take more than one year of large yield to restore the supply of stock seed, and only high prices will induce farmers to plant the crops. Shortage almost invariably forces prices abnormally high, which stimulates production and, in turn, produces overabundance and prices ab-

In Japan there are two kinds of Giganteum grown, the "flathead" and the tall bulb. The former is planted near the top of the soil, where the hot sun can bring it to size very quickly (at the expense of its vitality and quality). Of course, all Giganteum cannot be the best, and growers are obliged to sell the inferior article for three reasons: First, because many people buy an article just because it is cheap; second, because dealers must buy very cheap from importers to make a profit; third, because many people don't know the difference.

The grower who wants to make money and maintain a modern shop must buy economically—that means he must buy stock which will net the most profit. The profit is in the blooms of lily bulbs, and so he must buy the bulbs which net the most blooms on the average. That's Horseshoe Brand Bulbs—they will average the highest cut per 1000 bulbs of any brand known.

Prices reasonable.

BOLGIANO'S EXPANSION.

J. Bolgiano & Son, whose business at Baltimore was founded in 1818 and ranks among the oldest in the seed trade in this country, have recently purchased one of the finest water front properties in the city. It extends almost 500 feet on Ruppert street, with 375 feet of private dockage on their own piers. The warehouse in connection with the property has over 75,000 square feet of floor space and here the bulk seeds, onion sets, seed potatoes, etc., are to be stored. A complete equipment of seed-cleaning machinery has been installed and a new poultry food plant increases the capacity of this department to something like fifteen times its previous output.

GRISWOLD CO. INCORPORATES.

The Griswold Seed Co., of Lincoln, Neb., is now a corporation, having filed the necessary papers with the county clerk November 25. The capital stock of the company was fixed at $200,000, of which amount $50,000 is to be preferred stock and $150,000 common. At least $125,000 of the common stock is to be paid in. The incorporators are W. B. Griswold, Frank Everts, H. J. Whitmore and E. S. Gunn. The company is to engage in a retail and wholesale business, including the power to sell and buy real estate.

FREE SEEDS AND BULBS.

The seed trade will be delighted to learn that the demand for congressional free seeds is on the increase and that the output of American grown Dutch bulbs, as it is developed by the Department, will be used for free distribution. This is what Secretary James Wilson says of it in his annual report, made public today:

"The distribution of seeds and plants upon congressional order has continued along much the same lines as in the preceding year. The demand for vegetable and flower seeds proved greater than ever before. Certain

BOLGIANO'S EXPANSION.

J. Bolgiano & Son, whose business at Baltimore was founded in 1818 and ranks among the oldest in the seed trade in this country, have recently purchased one of the finest water front properties in the city. It extends almost 500 feet on Ruppert street, with 375 feet of private dockage on their own piers. The warehouse in connection with the property has over 75,000 square feet of floor space and here the bulk seeds, onion sets, seed potatoes, etc., are to be stored. A complete equipment of seed-cleaning machinery has been installed and a new poultry food plant increases the capacity of this department to something like fifteen times its previous output.

GRISWOLD CO. INCORPORATES.

The Griswold Seed Co., of Lincoln, Neb., is now a corporation, having filed the necessary papers with the county clerk November 25. The capital stock of the company was fixed at $200,000, of which amount $50,000 is to be preferred stock and $150,000 common. At least $125,000 of the common stock is to be paid in. The incorporators are W. B. Griswold, Frank Everts, H. J. Whitmore and E. S. Gunn. The company is to engage in a retail and wholesale business, including the power to sell and buy real estate.

FREE SEEDS AND BULBS.

The seed trade will be delighted to learn that the demand for congressional free seeds is on the increase and that the output of American grown Dutch bulbs, as it is developed by the Department, will be used for free distribution. This is what Secretary James Wilson says of it in his annual report, made public today:

"The distribution of seeds and plants upon congressional order has continued along much the same lines as in the preceding year. The demand for vegetable and flower seeds proved greater than ever before. Certain changes in the method of mailing packeted seeds have obviated the necessity for rehandling by the postal authorities in the Washington city postoffice, thereby reducing the labor and facilitating the mailing of the seeds. The packeting, assembling and mailing have been satisfactorily done under contract.

"In connection with the seed distribution, an effort to propagate Dutch bulbs successfully has been continued with encouraging results. Climatic conditions in the Puget Sound region, where the work is being done, appear to be favorable, and it is hoped that a sufficient quantity can eventually be produced to furnish the supply used for congressional distribution."

Referring to the seed testing work, the Secretary says:

"During the past year additional seed-testing laboratories have been opened in coöperation with the North Carolina Department of Agriculture and the Purdue University Agricultural Experiment Station. The laboratories in Nebraska, Missouri and Oregon have been continued. The work of each of these laboratories has increased approximately fifty per cent each year since they were started, showing the interest taken in them by the public. The Department is cooperating with state institutions in order that the work may be done locally when analyses can be furnished, with a great saving of time.

"During the summer a number of representatives of seed firms have taken advantage of the opportunities offered by the laboratory to become familiar with the technique of seed testing in order to carry on similar work for themselves.

"Samples of forage-plant seeds have been collected and examined for the presence of adulterants, and the names and addresses of the dealers who offered adulterated seeds for sale have been published, as formerly, with the result that fewer lots of adulterated seeds have been found the past year than in any preceding year."

FOREIGN RED CLOVER CROPS.

According to R. Liefmann's Sons, of Hamburg, the red clover crops in European countries have turned out better than expected. Writing under date of November 4, they say:

"We are in position today to form a pretty accurate opinion of the general situation. That the dry weather which set in very suddenly has done a lot of good cannot be denied, but, again, it came too late in many important sections. The German crop had already been destroyed by an enormous rainfall, and the dry weather came too late. Consequently the demand will be much larger than ever before. This year's requirements in Germany are being estimated at about 25,000 tons. The above remarks about disastrous weather conditions also apply to Austria, especially Bohemia and Moravia. These countries, which in ordinary years supply a large part of the consumption in Europe, are compelled to import considerable quantities.

"Hungary has a very weak average crop, has already exported a material portion of her crop of inferior grades, but is obliged to again import larger quantities of highest grade seed, as this is what the farmers want mostly to sow in that country.

"In Italy the output is a trifle below an average, a good deal having already been sold. Seed secured previous to the rainy period was very nice quality, showing only little buckhorn, but seeds now coming in contain quite a lot of buckhorn, making them unsuitable for export.

"In Russia the yield, which earlier in the season had been estimated as being materially under medium, turned out a full average. Prices for these qualities, however, will scarcely warrant their being imported into America, because the German consumers pay highest prices for this commodity, generally from 1½ to 2 cents more than for seeds of other origin. Uniform, well-cleaned seed, free from dodder and buckhorn, is selling today at equal to 15½ to 16 cents c. i. f. New York.

"In France the very poor prospects suddenly turned good, owing to summer weather coming in time. Some districts secured very favorable results, others a less good one, so that we can now figure on a very good average output. Qualities are extremely nice in color—mostly purple—and very useful for our consumption, but not at all for America, all lots containing buckhorn to a more or less large extent.

"England, too, has been favored with fair weather in time, and the outlook, which was quite gloomy, is now not wholly for half an average crop. An export of genuine English seed is out of the question. On the contrary, the country will surely have to draw half its demand from the Continent.

"Chile has a small yield. Values around 14 cents c. i. f. New York. Seeds, however, contain large dodder, and for that reason are not used at all in Germany for consumptive purposes, but are sown in Great Britain, where, it is alleged, this awful dodder will not grow.

"To size up the general situation, will say that these average or full average crops of some countries in Europe are faced by a very considerable consumption. With old supplies extremely depleted, and the major part of this year's qualities very nice in color—though containing more or less buckhorn, except seed of Russian origin—our retailers consider values, which went down in general owing to better crop prospects in Europe, as not being dear any more, and commence purchasing. Also we ourselves consider present values reasonable and justified by prevailing conditions. Temporary weak demand or larger receipts, or if America should be obliged to import on a larger scale from Europe, is of course likely to cause material fluctuations of the market both ways before the season is over.

"The recent break in prices, being partly up to 2 cents, principally affected seeds showing more or less buckhorn, or such held for excessively high prices, as for instance Russian commodity, and also all brown seeds meeting only with little favor in your markets. Qualities suitable for America—that means, clean and containing a few single grains of buckhorn—maintained relatively high prices, selling today at about equal 13¾ to 14 cents c. i. f. your side."

PACIFIC COAST.

Santa Barbara, Cal.—S. W. Smith & Son are no longer connected with the florists' trade.

Salem, Ore.—Ruef Bros., of the Salem Carnation Gardens, have opened a branch store at Eugene, Ore.

Centralia, Wash.—John Willius, formerly of Danville, Ill., has succeeded Barnett & Ranck in business here.

Portland, Ore.—V. F. Perry, formerly in business at 595 Madison street, is no longer connected with the trade.

San Francisco, Cal.—The large plate glass window and a big mirror in the Fairmont Floral Co. store at 141 Powell street were broken November 25 by a taxicab that went into the window in avoiding a collision with another motor.

VICTORIA, B. C.

At the meeting of the Florists' and Nurserymen's Association, November 26, the report of the special committee that met the Board of Trade in reference to the establishment of a fumigating station at Victoria was presented. The committee presented a good case to the board, giving many instances of the loss and unnecessary trouble the present system was causing them. At the end of the interview the board expressed its sympathy with the delegates and promised to do all that lay in its power to help them accomplish their objects. Three committees are now appointed, one from the Board of Trade, one from the Florists' and Nurserymen's Association and one from the Fruit Growers' Association, to collect all data possible bearing on the matter, which will be put in as concise form as possible and presented to both federal and provincial governments.

The committee appointed to investigate the alleged discrimination in express rates reported progress and a general lowering of rates from the coast to the east is looked for at an early date.

Two new flower stores have opened this week—Wilkerson & Brown, next door to Woodward's on Fort street; Russell, in the Pemberton block on Broad street.

Fred Bennett paid a visit to the National Apple Show held at Vancouver recently. It was certainly a revelation of the quality of the Pacific coast apples. While in Vancouver he visited two of the largest greenhouses. Brown Bros.' establishment was in fine shape, especially the fern department—nephrolepis and various sports were in heavy supply. Their carnations are nearly all grown at their new place at Hammond, B. C., and are said to be especially fine. The Royal Nursery Co.'s fine place was well filled with seasonable stock. One feature that at first sight seemed to be a backward move, on further reflection seemed worthy of serious consideration; this was a house of carnations in 6-inch pots. As grown here they were certainly fine—strong, stiff stems with few splits. It must be remembered that the coast climate in winter is not so favorable for indoor flowers as the drier and colder sections.

Some outsider has established a street stand for the sale of California violets and seems to be doing an excellent business, but from remarks passed by the trade he is not to be allowed to have it all his own way much longer. What is puzzling the local trade is the fact that he apparently gets his flowers at a much lower rate than local houses are able to do, even on a straight cash basis. F. B.

of rain and should we be blessed with it in the near future it would go a long way toward putting some life into business, which at the present writing is not as lively as one should expect. There has been a sharp increase all along the line with all stock. Carnations have increased about twenty-five per cent, roses fully fifty per cent, and chrysanthemums about the same. Compared with the prices charged the stores one year ago, however, they are not any higher. Violets, since the disappearance of the cool moist days, are not quite so plentiful and we may expect a slight advance together with a lessened supply shortly. Funeral orders have kept most of the retailers busy and these together with a fair round of weddings and other happenings fill out fairly well. From all accounts Thanksgiving trade was slightly below that of last year and the great bulk of the orders were for smaller articles and the sales in smaller amounts. It is yet too early to prognosticate on Christmas business, but from all appearances there will be an abundance of stock of all kinds.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

W. T. MITCHELL & SON, Beverly, O., expect to enlarge their nursery during the coming year.

THE Sturgeon Bay Orchard & Nursery Co., of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., has bought 160 acres of land adjoining the city limits and will plant the whole farm to fruit.

JOHN S. KERR, of the Texas Nursery Co., at Sherman, Tex., says that the demand for fruit trees is heavier this season than in any previous year in his thirty years' experience.

NURSERYMEN have had the best fall season of their experience and, indeed, in some sections are still doing considerable business. Sales for spring delivery also are ahead of this date last year.

THE Gays Mills Fruit Farm & Nursery Co., recently incorporated at Gays Mills, Wis., has acquired 100 acres of land there and will plant the entire tract to apples. The incorporators are John A. Hays, G. A. Sherwood and L. W. Stuckey. The capital stock is $20,000.

DANIEL E. NEWELL, Attleboro, Mass., is contestant of the will of his brother, Fred A. Newell, which is being probated in the municipal court in that city. He is a beneficiary for $10,000, but is contesting because the present will abrogates a previous one that gave him $20,000. The testator, however, is said to have explained to his attorney regarding this change that he had purchased the nurseries which his brother operates and had invested therein more than the difference.

SINCE the publication of the Silva of North America, the most laborious undertaking under the auspices of Professor Sargent and the Arnold Arboretum is a complete Bibliography of the Trees and Shrubs of the World up to 1900, which is now in the hands of the printer. This work will consist of four quarto volumes, and will run to 4,000 pages. It gives all references to the published literature of any value, in all languages, dealing with the woody plants of the globe. By its means the student will be furnished with a complete guide to all the authoritative printed information about any known tree or shrub up to the beginning of the present century.

ASSOCIATION AFFAIRS.

John Hall, secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen, has undertaken an active campaign for new members in preparation for the thirty-sixth annual convention of the association, to be held June 14 to 16, 1911, in St. Louis. The headquarters

The E. G. Hill Co.'s New Forcing Hybrid Tea

ROSE QUEEN

COLOR—This new rose has the startling shade of pink found in Rodocanachi, or in a perfect Testout, with yellow standard at the base of the petal, which is a guarantee that the flower will never "blue" with age, and that it will not fade in bright sunlight.

FORM—The bud is very long, slender, and pointed, and opening shows a heart glowing with color.

STEM—One of its strongest points is the freedom and quickness with which it makes long stems, which hold the fine buds quite upright, producing high-grade blooms earlier than any other rose on first year plants.

PETALAGE—It is fuller than Killarney and opens readily, even in dark weather.

Its KEEPING QUALITIES are remarkable; it has carried in fine condition to all the shows, and has stood up well after arrival.

The FOLIAGE is decidedly handsome, while not too profuse.

It has a strong CONSTITUTION, is healthy and free from mildew and blackspot; does not drop its foliage as Killarney does, and never takes on the faded appearance that so often mars the beauty of the latter.

MANAGEMENT—The average grower will have no trouble in producing high-grade blooms, for the variety has no ugly tricks of growth or faults of constitution; takes same temperature as Killarney or Maid.

It PROPAGATES readily.

ROSE QUEEN won the prize at the Chicago Show, November, 1910, as the best undisseminated seedling.

READY MARCH 1. 50c each; $35.00 per 100 (25 at 100 rate); $300.00 per 1000 (250 at 1000 rate); $5.00 per 100 additional for grafts ready during March.

Our New Carnation

(Exhibited as Mrs. Beckwith, but the lady's choice being a pink carnation, we are reserving her name for one of her favorite color.)

Color, intense velvety scarlet; a nice, clean grower, with beautiful blue grass, indicating a strong constitution; habit, excellent, free in growth and bloom, stem long and stiff, with a strong calyx; this is a first rate commercial scarlet, a fine companion for Beacon, which is now practically our only red variety.

It is early, and opens its bloom quickly; an unusually good traveler and keeper. Each year of its trial has confirmed our estimate of its value.

Won Silver cup (sweepstakes) at Chicago show for best seedling in 1909.

First in scarlet seedlings at Chicago show, 1910.

First in open class for 50 red Carnations at Indianapolis in 1910, winning over 8 entries.

$12.00 per 100 $100.00 per 1000

MRS. AARON WARD

The New Yellow Forcing Rose

This rose is a real joy to the grower, and absolutely distinct; if it never bore a flower, the plant would still be an object of beauty with its close-set foliage, dark and glossy leaves, long, slender and pointed, with maroon reverse.

The habit is admirable, very freely branched, making a perfect shrub in form, and rustling with health.

Every shoot produces a flower—

And the color! Coppery orange in the opening bud; golden orange when partly developed; pinkish fawn of lovely shade when fully open, when it looks like a full, fluffy silk rosette. No wonder that flower-buyers have fallen in love with it.

Any grower wishing novelty in his cut roses, any florist needing something beside pink and white and red, will be delighted with the lovely Mrs. Ward.

down to the little fellows for basket work, all were good and wonderfully uniform. The variety favored is the dark red sort. One house is filled with the double variety, which gives promise of great popularity as soon as it is better known; the heads are particularly effective.

The cyclamens, a specialty here, are well-nigh perfect; from the little fellow for basket work to the big specimen, all are shapely and full of buds; the salmon pink is a pleasing addition to the range of colors. The begonias include Lorraine, the Lonsdale type and Glory of Cincinnati; all three exhibited skillful culture, and—what was particularly pleasing—the houses where they are growing are cold, an all-important fact to their ultimate possessor. The azaleas are confined to Madame Petrick and Vervæneana, with a few Firefly for color's sake—a wise choice of colors that excludes white.

The foliage plant section comprises the dracænas, crotons, ferns, ficus, pandanus, arecas, the berried aucubas and the hardy boxwood and abies. The dracænas are so fine that they are placed even ahead of the crotons, which speaks for itself, for you know the crotons here are wonderful. Dracæna Massangeana is simply superb in all sizes. Dracæna terminalis, just in from Norwood, was strikingly handsome, with a richness of coloring suggestive of health and of Christmas. The crotons were colored with that bright red and yellow, contrasting strongly with green, seen here as it is seen nowhere else. The ferns of the Boston family, both plain-leaved and crested, spoke by their numbers of the confidence felt in their favor. Ficus pandurata was quite as good, if not a little better, than the standard of previous years. Pandanus utilis was well grown and free from blemish. Aucuba Japonica had an unusual number of berries that are already colored—quite a feat for so early in the season, which shows it is advisable sometimes to take a chance, or, as the good doctor says, to "do your imprudence prudently."

The strongest of the hardy section was the boxwood, a fine lot of specimens, looking particularly well.

The whole collection marks a distinct advance in the selection and culture of Christmas plants, the recognition of the necessities of color, durability and varioutclasses everything heretofore grown in the dark pink section. Won first honors in the 100 class for best dark pink at the A. C. S. meeting, Pittsburg, January, 1910, also at the Chicago Flower Show, November, 1909.

It is a pure, bright, dark pink of even shade, size 3½ inches, an early and continuous bloomer, brings fully 25 per cent more flowers to the plant than Lawson at its best; flowers well shaped on long, wiry stems; calyx does not split. It is a good shipper, and the cuttings root easy.

Carnation Dorothy Gordon—Orders Now Booked For More Than Fifty Thousand Rooted Cuttings

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

Last year, you remember, we told you about the great beauty and remarkable quality of our new seedling Carnation "Dorothy Gordon," which we were then introducing for the first time, after giving a very thorough trial ourselves.

Hundreds of growers in all parts of the country became convinced of its merit, both through our advertising and by seeing the flower on exhibit at the various shows of the season, and we sold practically all the cuttings we could grow, up to April of this year.

That means that hundreds of progressive growers are going to make money this year, for we have proved "Dorothy Gordon" a money-maker—beyond all question the most profitable of the commercial carnations. These men are going to make money from the carnations they grow this year; now how about you?

Are you in line for your share of the profits from this splendid flower?

If not, you're going to miss something good this winter, but there's still a fine chance for you to "get in"—we're growing more rooted cuttings, and can fill your order, if placed at once. We have already booked orders for more than 50,000 this fall, so it is evident that this season's business will be a close second to that of last.

Carnation "Dorothy Gordon" is a seedling of Lawson on Enchantress and is a trifle darker than Pink Enchantress. It is vigorous, notably free from disease, and bears extra large flowers of good substance (averaging over three inches in diameter), in great abundance on long, stiff stems. These keep unusually well, and bring much higher prices than other commercial carnations—in fact, we have regularly found that a given quantity of "Dorothy Gordon" would yield just double the returns that could be realized from Enchantress, which we had grown extensively before taking up "Dorothy Gordon."

We quote on rooted cuttings of "Dorothy Gordon" as follows:

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

Orders should be placed early and will be filled in rotation. Write for particulars, or better still come and see "Dorothy Gordon" growing in our houses. Visitors welcome any week-day.

ety in their proper proportions, combined with a distinct advance in cultural methods.

Coal.

Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. report great activity in the anthracite coal market. All the collieries are running on full time, pouring into the market an immense product, which is being absorbed rapidly. Domestic sizes, particularly chestnut and pea, are quite scarce; steaming sizes are more plentiful. Rice is scarcer than buckwheat or barley; little delay is experienced in filling orders for the two last named, but there is some delay in filling orders for rice coal, owing to the increase in the demand for this size from large factories now using forced draft.

The situation in the bituminous coal field is disposed to be dull; there is a good deal of business, but not nearly enough to keep up steady activity.

Various Notes.

The Chestnut Hill Floral Exchange is now open for business, with Alexander Laurentin as manager.

M. Rice & Co. report the letters and telegrams for Christmas goods last week exceeding anything in their history.

Lester Morse, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, was a visitor this week.

Edward Reid will move from 1526 Ranstead street to 1619 and 1621 Ranstead street December 14. Mr. Reid's new quarters will give him needed room for his large cut flower business.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report Messrs. Bridgman, of Boston, and Gibbs, of Lynn, as visitors this week. The steamer Lapland arrived December 5 with 500 cases of Christmas goods for this firm.

The new yellow rose, Melody, is coming in to S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. in extraordinarily improved form. The flowers are bearing out Mr. Scott's prediction that Melody is a cold weather rose.

The ball season opened last week, rather earlier than usual. There will be several handsome entertainments at Horticultural hall and the Bellevue-Stratford during December.

Emil H. Gerschick, who rebuilt four houses and added one more last fall, has his place in excellent condition. Mr. Gerschick has added orchids, a fine lot of cattleyas, to his collection of plants.

George Auegle reports that the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. will have fancy blooms of Chrysanthemum Jeanne Nonin steadily until the holidays.

Henry C. Heilemann has completed a fine greenhouse in the rear of his store.

The Chestnut Hill Floral Exchange has opened for business on Germantown avenue, near the Chestnut Hill station of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Raymond Kessler is away on a fishing trip. Phil.

FINE FERNS

Ready For Immediate Retail Sale

We have an exceptionally fine and large stock of Ferns in the following varieties—first-class plants of exceedingly good value—plants that will please the most critical buyers, both in regard to quality and value.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima (improved). The finest of this type—never showing a Boston frond; has not reverted in the last four years. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.; 8-in., $12.00 per doz.; large specimens in 12-in. pans, $3.00 to $5.00 each.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima Compacta. This bears the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii does to Bostoniensis. It is a dwarf, compact plant, especially fine in the small sizes. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scholzeli. Fine plants, 3½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in. pans, $6.00 per doz.; 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis. Extra strong plants, 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scottii. 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Small Ferns for Fern Pans. Best and hardiest varieties, assorted: Pteris Mayii, Wimsetti, Adiantoides, Aspidium Tsussimense, Crytomium Falcatum, etc. Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, $3.50 per 100.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.

At a meeting of the representatives of the Illinois State Florists' Association, Illinois Outdoor Improvement Association, Illinois Truck Gardeners' Association, Illinois State Horticultural Society and Lake Forest Horticultural Society, with some of the faculty of the University of Illinois, held at the Beardsley hotel, a program was conditionally made out for a joint session of these organizations at the University of Illinois.

The date for this session is January 31 to February 7. On the morning of February 8 will begin the annual meeting of the Illinois State Horticultural Society, to continue for three days, and the annual meeting of the Illinois Florists' Association, to last for two days. At the horticultural meeting there will be an apple show, and at the florists' meeting a flower show will attract attention.

The program of the joint session is to include the names of many prominent speakers, some of them being engaged from Boston. The invitations are to be sent to these men in a few days, and as soon as their acceptances are received the program will be made out.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

Conrad C. Gindra finds excellent sale for the single violet Princess of Wales. He has fine stock. His carnations look good. He has a batch of cuttings already in the sand; nothing like an early start. Beacon, Winsor and the Enchantress family are leaders. He now, as a rule, uses some substitute for hydrocyanic acid gas on roses; the gas almost caused a fatality to a new patrolman who happened in one night to warm up. Mr. Gindra had forgotten to lock the door.

The Saltford Flower Shop is making up the first shipment of holly, which is fairly well berried this year. The firm reports excellent business and is cutting fine roses. My Maryland is in high favor with the college maids, owing to its beautiful color and fine fragrance. Mr. Saltford, Sr., is having trouble with an ear. Its condition threatened to be serious at one time, but it is now improving. M.

Thompsonville, Conn.—The Brainard Floral & Nursery Co. is completing, at the Maple street plant, a new office and salesroom for the cut flower, nursery and seed departments.

The Market.

Business is steadily improving. There was some cold and windy weather during the last week and the supply in some instances has slightly fallen off, but not enough to have any appreciable effect on the market. Good chrysanthemums are not to be had. Roses are holding their own, while carnations are scarce. Violets are coming slowly, but are not so good.

Various Notes.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. has been kept exceedingly busy of late with weddings and other decorations. At their store there is a continuous decoration and exhibit of the finest stock.

W. J. Barnes has completed two new houses, and this gives him 25,000 feet of glass. He has one house of nice Scottii ferns and a fine lot of araucarias. He is still cutting Helen Frick chrysanthemums, which will complete his mums for this year. He also has a fine lot of orchid plants, which will be ready for Christmas.

The George M. Kellogg Co. reports a pleasing amount of business. Roses, violets and carnations are fine, with a shortage on carnations. E. L.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was satisfactory in every way. Good stock was in demand and moved rapidly. Chrysanthemums are getting more scarce as the season advances, while azaleas and Lorraine begonias are making their appearance among potted plants. Fine single violets are raised in this section, while the double varieties are shipped in. Smilax and asparagus are plentiful here.

Various Notes.

C. P. Hayward, formerly of Hayward & Jones, Dubois, Pa., was a visitor in the city last week.

C. F. Cokely, of the Scranton Florists' Supply Co., was in Erie for a few days as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Baur.

6 houses stocked with them, 10,000 in all sizes and varieties now ready, never before better than this year, 5, 6 and 7-in., 40c, 50c, 75c. Same varieties, as big as a bushel basket, $1.00 to $1.25.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine

Palms, etc.

Lead you into wealth

A house full of Godfrey Aschmann's Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in bloom and bud for Christmas, ready for shipment. We have Begonia Gloire de Lorraine to beat the band.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This is another of our specialties. We have a secret in growing them to perfection, only known to us, giving them a rich, deep color; stand shipping well, traveling 2000 to 3000 miles without the least bit of injury if properly handled. We have a big house full in No. 1 condition, 6 to 7-in. sizes, in bud and partly in bloom, ready for immediate sale or for the holidays. Everybody knows that last Christmas we had the best Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in the market. They were cracker-jacks, indeed! We have the deep pink and the light pink (Lonsdale) varieties, 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00; 7-in. pots, $1.25 to $1.50. 3-in. pots, if transplanted soon, will make good 4-in. pots for Xmas. If you have room order now, because they are always scarce at Xmas.

Orders for 6-in. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine will not be filled unless other sizes are called for, too.

Begonia Erfordii, newest improved strain. This variety is always in bloom during the whole winter, Xmas and Easter, 4-in. pots, in bud or bloom, 20c.

Begonia Rex, 4-in., 20c.

AZALEA INDICA.

Already forced for Christmas, showing color now and stored away in cold houses ready for shipment. Deutsche Perle (pure double white), Simon Mardner (large double pink), Vervaeneana (double rose variegated), 75c, $1 00, $1.25, $1.50, $2 00 to $2.50 each. ☞ Remember, only the best healthy plants must be selected for Xmas forcing; poor, weak Azaleas won't force successfully for Xmas. Don't order many 75-cent sizes, because we won't have them. Larger sizes and also white ones must accompany the order.

Easter Varieties. For Easter forcing we have only the well known standard American varieties, such as Mme. Van der Cruyssen, pink (very scarce this fall in Belgium), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Niobe, double white. We have a large stock of this, but mostly in large sizes, $1.00, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00; some, but a limited quantity, at 50c, 60c to 75c. Deutsche Perle, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Helene Theleman, light pink, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. President Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Schryveriana and Empress of India, large, double, variegated, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Professeur Wolters, 70c, $1.00 to $1.50. Simon Mardner, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Vervaeneana and Apollo, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00; dozen or 100 at same prices.

Remember! Small azaleas are scarce this year in Belgium, therefore I had to buy mostly large sizes.

We reached the climax in quantity, quality and price. ☞ Just think, we sell you an Araucaria Excelsa, 4-year-old, as big as an elephant, 6-in. pot, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 20 to 25 inches high, for only 60 cents to 75 cents. A Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror, as wide as a bushel basket, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, 5, 6 to 7 tiers, for only $1.25 to $1.50

Araucarias Our Specialty

No Arguments Needed

Our importation of Araucarias is a Record Breaker this year. We reached the pole and there we are, can't go any higher. We are in the control of the American market. Not only Araucaria Excelsa, but we have Araucaria Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca to beat the band, all good enough to decorate the White House, kings' and emperors' cozy spots, bankers', preachers', merchants' and the poor man's Christmas dinner table.

Where will you go to see another such show? Where will you go to get cheaper prices? I tell you it is of no use for you to hunt up cheaper prices because there is no such thing. Stay right at home and write an order to Godfrey Aschmann.

Araucaria Excelsa, raised from top cuttings only (no seedlings), 2, 3, 4 to 5-year-old, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 15, 18, 20, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, 6-in. pots, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business was good last week. With the continued dark weather crops are decreasing, so that good stock brought a good price. In fact, at times there was not a great variety of stock to choose from, roses, carnations and a few mums being the standbys. With quite a few receptions and several large funerals, the stock in general was cleaned up in good shape from day to day. The beginning of this week finds stock scarce, but, as the demand is light, there is just enough to go around. Stevia is quite plentiful, while the supply of local grown violets is far behind what it ought to be. Mums are a thing of the past. A few Paper Whites have made their appearance, but do not cut much figure.

A noticeable fact is that no snapdragons whatever are coming in at this time. The growers of that line of stock all sing the same song, "All off just now." At the time of writing, December 5, no holly has made its way into this market.

Club Meeting.

While the December meetings of the Milwaukee Florists' Club are always well attended, yet the meeting held December 1, owing principally to the election of officers, was a record breaker, for more than fifty per cent of the total membership list were on deck. It was a lively meeting, such as we ought always to have, in order to make it worth while to come around.

Joseph Sherer, who recently purchased the James Chacona interests, was elected to membership. The final report of the executive committee of the 1910 flower show was presented, and it was reported that all who had

Outside of the two trustees, the election was quickly completed, as the secretary was instructed to cast one vote in each case. The officers for the year 1911 will be: President, H. V. Hunkel; vice-president, Arthur Leidiger, secretary, Gustav Mueller; treasurer, John G. Heitman; trustee for three years, Aug. F. Kellner; trustee for two years, Fred Holton.

After the meeting adjourned the boys sat down to an extra fine venison lunch, secured by C. C. Pollworth and tastefully prepared by Mrs. C. C. Pollworth. It certainly was a treat long to be remembered.

Various Notes.

A carload of wild smilax for the Holton & Hunkel Co. went astray and spoiled last week—rather a poor joke, as most of it had been promised.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. is busy these days getting pot stock in shape for the holidays.

Visitors during last week were: Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Louis Turner, of Kenosha, Wis.; Mrs. Miller, Racine, Wis., and Louis Hartung, Two Rivers, Wis.

PROPAGATING VERBENAS.

What is the best method of propagating verbenas? I have tried many times in different ways, but never had good results, as the verbena cuttings damped away in two or three days. I am located in eastern Texas. M. L.

Verbenas are of easy propagation. It is probable, however, that your warmer climate may be the cause of the damping off. They root readily if treated the same as carnations or chrysanthemums, but must not be put in a warm propagating house. Verbenas withstand a lot of frost and are among the hardiest of annuals. Grow your stock plants cool and take short, soft cuttings, either rubbed off with a heel or cut below a pair of leaves. Use clean, sharp sand and do not allow the cuttings to suffer from want of water. As a general rule, seedlings possess more vigor and are more generally satisfactory than plants raised from cuttings. Sow the seed in February. This will give you strong plants before spring sales start. Of course, to preserve special varieties, it is necessary to propagate from cuttings, but if you purchase reliable seed in separate colors you will find only a small percentage of rogues when they bloom. C. W.

WORMS ATTACKING SALVIAS.

I should like to know the name of a certain worm which attacks salvia foliage, and the best means of exterminating it. The eggs are laid by a moth much like a Green Bay fly. The worm seems to live on the fleshy part of the under side of the leaf, turning it brown. J. P.

I do not know definitely about the particular worm which is attacking your salvia. You cannot use poison without the danger of seriously damaging your plants. Spray the plants well with Sulpho-Tobacco soap, or one of the nicotine extracts. Directions for the use of each comes on the bottles or cans. In using the spray, be sure to direct it so that the lower sides of the leaves will be thoroughly moistened. C. W.

NAME OF VINE.

Can you give me the name of the vine enclosed? M. H. S.

The vine is called Euonymus radicans variegatus. C. W.

Des Plaines, Ill.—Norby & Hoefle report that business is better than last year and prospects are bright for the coming season. They recently added a new house, which is planted to sweet peas.

Greenhouse Heating.

An early winter usually is a bad winter. Are you prepared for a car shortage and a fuel famine?

STEAM FOR THREE HOUSES.

I should be pleased to have your advice about piping my greenhouses for steam heat. I have three houses, each 17x100 feet, running north and south. They measure six feet six inches to the gutter and twelve feet to the ridge, with three feet of glass in the side walls and a lean-to on the north end, eight feet wide. The boiler, a No. 278 Furman, will be at the north end, above the ground, with a Morehead return trap for returning the water to the boiler. I shall use one main flow of 2-inch pipe at the ridge and one 1¼-inch pipe at each gutter in each house. How many returns and what size will be needed under the benches of each house, to have a temperature of 54 to 60 degrees in zero weather? My location is eastern Kansas. I would also ask how many of the pipes should be supplied with valves to reduce the heat in moderate weather, as I shall carry from five to eight pounds of steam in the boiler to operate the trap. B. R.

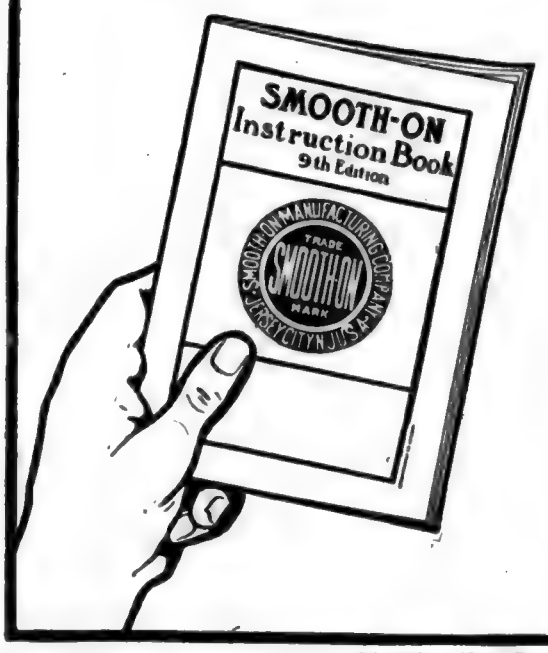
If the houses are disconnected, so that each has two side walls with three feet of glass, to heat them to 60 degress will require nine 1¼-inch return pipes, in addition to the 2-inch flow and the two 1¼-inch pipes on the plates. There should be valves on six of the nine returns.

UNSATISFACTORY PIPING.

I am having trouble with my hot water system and come to you for advice. I have two houses, one 12x35, the other 22x42, and eleven feet high to the ridge. In the smaller house I have one 2-inch flow and one 1½-inch return and had no trouble in keeping it hot last winter. The flow is about eight inches above the top of the boiler.

The larger house is new and has 3-foot walls, with twelve inches of glass in the southeast side. The house runs from northeast to southwest. I have in it one 2½-inch flow and two 2-inch returns, extending entirely around the house on the side walls. The flow pipe rises gradually from the boiler to the farther end of the house, and the returns drop about two inches in sixteen feet until within eight feet of the boiler, when they drop about two feet in eight. The opening in the boiler for the returns is 2-inch. In heating, the upper or flow pipes get quite hot, but the returns are barely warm, except about one-half the way back. Can you tell me whether I have sufficient heating power in the one 2½-inch flow and two 2-inch returns? What is the reason the returns do not heat? I am located in central West Virginia and wish a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees at night. I have been thinking of putting one of the returns under the benches. Would this help the heating? H. E. F.

To heat the house 22x42 feet to 50 degrees in zero weather, it would be well to have one 2½-inch flow pipe and ten 2-inch returns. The trouble with the circulation is possibly caused by the fact that the returns are too near the level of the boiler. It would help matters if the flow were carried to as high a point as possible and then given a slight fall through the house. At the farther end, divide the flow and carry the returns as high as possible.



WATER UNDER PRESSURE.

Some time ago I asked whether there was any advantage in placing a pressure of twenty-five to forty pounds on a hot water heating system that was deficient in radiation. In your answer it was not made plain whether hot water boiled at a higher degree of heat with a pressure of forty pounds than with a pressure of ten pounds. We are told that with each pound of pressure the boiling point is raised, while our steamfitter says the water will travel no faster and bear no more heat at forty pounds than at ten pounds of pressure. J. T.

The fact that the water is under pressure has nothing to do, of itself, with the rapidity of the circulation, and yet indirectly it may have a marked effect upon the efficiency of a given amount of radiation, so that it may be possible either to carry a higher temperature when the water is under pressure than when an open system is used, or the amount of radiation needed may be materially lessened.

Carrying the system under pressure makes it possible to raise the water to a higher temperature than in an open system, as the boiling point is raised. Everything else being equal, the circulation will be more rapid when the water is under pressure, owing to the fact that the water is hotter. Hot water is lighter than cold water, and the circulation in a hot water system is due to the difference in the weight of the cooled water in the returns and that of the hot water in the flow pipes. The former, being the heavier, pushes the light, hot water from the boiler out into the flow pipes and around into the coils, where, as it cools, its increased weight tends to keep up the circulation, which is still further maintained and accelerated by the heating of the cold water which has forced its way into the boiler.

In theory it is best to have a single flow pipe lead to the highest point of the system, and this should be as near the heater as is convenient, so that the water in the flow can be kept as hot as possible, while the returns should be smaller, in order to hasten the cooling. The reduction in the size of the returns will, of course, be limited by the increased friction in small pipes, but it is possible to use smaller returns when running under pressure than with an open system.

While the cost of installing a closed system may be less, the amount of fuel required will be greater.

INSUFFICIENT RADIATION.

I have one small greenhouse, with side walls three feet high, double boarded. The house runs east and west and adjoins the woodshed. I have an upright hot water boiler, standing in a pit in the woodshed. The outlet starts with a piece of 4-inch pipe about fourteen feet long, which runs along the side wall and is then connected with four 2-inch pipes running back on the side walls and ending in a small piece of 4-inch pipe, which serves as the return to the boiler. With this piping I have not been able to maintain a temperature of over 50 degrees in the house in freezing weather. I am located in the western part of New York state. Can you help me out of my trouble? H. K.

¶ The installation of a Morehead Return Steam Trap in a Greenhouse is absolute evidence of progressiveness on the part of the florist.

¶ It is further evidence of good management, for the "Morehead" is an investment in both satisfaction and economy.

The four 2-inch pipes should be sufficient to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in freezing weather, but for use in zero weather, which is common in northern states, six pipes will be needed.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

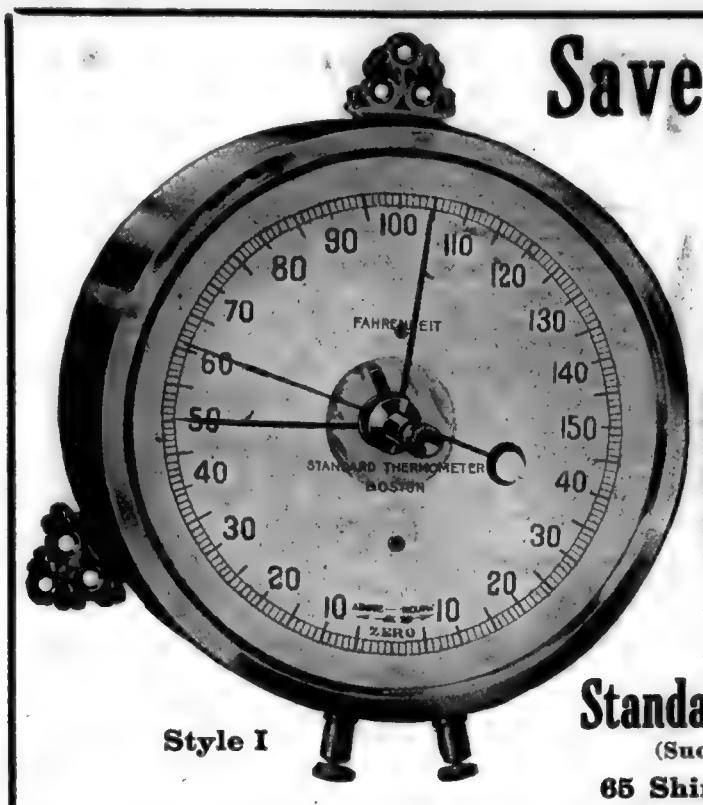
The retail business last week was quite satisfactory, and according to the way some of our leading florists in the west end were buying at the wholesale houses they must have been busy. Society was alive with weddings, dinners, parties, receptions and balls, and these events, of course, greatly help the florists.

Stock in all lines has not been any too plentiful and all of our wholesalers sold up pretty clean all of last week. Monday we were having our first real snow of the season and if the dark weather continues it will keep stock scarce this week. Everything in all grades is selling well, especially carnations. These are short in supply. There are a good many roses coming in, but they clean up well. Chrysanthemum blooms are still arriving.

In bulbous stock, Romans, Paper Whites, valley and lilies have big demand, but not any too many are offered. Values are almost up to Christmas prices.

Bouquet green is to be had at from $10 to $15 per hundred pounds. The local florists who ordered in advance at $5 per hundred pounds were in their glory for a while until they were notified last week that their orders could not be half filled, and there is a big howl among them. Holly is going to be cheap this year. At present it is being offered here by our commission men at $4 per case. The advance shipments show the holly in good shape and well berried.

Various Notes.



J. J. Burke has sold his store at Grand and Finney avenues to Miss May Burns, who of late was in the employ of Miss M. S. Newman. The new firm will be known as the Burns Floral Co. Mr. Burke's future plans were not learned.

Henry Emunds, proprietor of the West Park Floral Co., at Belleville, says that he had an exceptionally good season with chrysanthemums, and will have 1,000 blooms between now and Christmas of the new white, Miss Nonin, with blooms almost as large as Timothy Eaton.

Alex Siegel says his two stores are doing well. The one recently opened in the big department store at Eighth street and Washington avenue is in charge of Charles Connon.

Grimm & Gorly's Washington avenue store had a big run of funeral work all last week.

ceed Phil Scanlan, who would surely succeed himself if he was on the right side of the fence politically, as he has made a splendid official. It is rumored that a well known local florist is after the office, and, of course, a host of politicians also.

There was quite a delegation of traveling salesmen here last week and all were from Philadelphia. They were Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co.; F. J. Farney, of M. Rice & Co.; Will Craig, of Robert Craig Co., and S. S. Skidelsky, of Skidelsky & Irwin Co.

J. J. B.

NEW CASTLE, IND.

In the summer of 1909, as readers of The Review may remember, the Dingee & Conard Co., of West Grove, Pa., purchased "the corporation name, stock, and all that pertained to the mail order business" of Heller Bros., the rose growers of this city. Since that time the establishment conducted here under the name of Heller Bros. Co. has really formed a part of the Dingee & Conard corporation and is spoken of as the western branch of the concern. The company has repeatedly expressed its determination to make this western branch an important factor in the catalogue plant business of the country.

The office of the company in this city has been moved from the old dwelling near the greenhouses, to the new building known as the Hudelson house, on South Main street. An important addition has been made to the office force by placing J. P. Brasselmann at the head of the advertising department. For sixteen years he was on the staff of the McFarland publicity service in the east, and is a thorough advertising expert.

James McLaughlin, the grower and propagator, is preparing a large stock of plants of all kinds. He expects to have a half million plants in the spring, doubling the output. P. J. Lynch, the managing owner of the business, is optimistic as to its prospects in this city.

As already reported by The Review's Philadelphia correspondent, Mr. Lynch has just been married. He was married at a most fitting time, the eve of Thanksgiving, and the bride was Miss Caroline Forkner. The same correspondent characterizes Mr. Lynch as "the brilliant, talented, versatile Joe Lynch, who is able to do easily and well a little more than the rest of us can do with prodigious effort."

Waterford, Conn.—Stanley Jordan, formerly of Madison, N. J., has now taken charge of the E. S. Harkness estate, in this vicinity.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—George W. Southern & Sons, the nurserymen, were particularly busy in the last part of November on account of the demand for shade trees, to be planted in yards in various parts of the city.

Heating System Never Worked so Well Before

We have just gone through a rough, cold spell for California, and the two Kroeschell Generators, No. 5 and No. 14, have done fine work. We are very much pleased with the results of both of them, and would not be without your Generator on any account. In half an hour we can get the pipes very hot to the far end of our last house, which is over 280 feet from the boiler. We have never had our heating system work so well before, and believe it is due to the Generators.

The Market.

Business for the month of November was the best ever experienced by the retail and wholesale florists in this section for the same month of the year. All through the month there was a plentiful supply of stock and especially was this so in chrysanthemums, so many of these being grown in this section at present that many times it was necessary for the grower to dispose of them cheap to get room. The noticeable lack of sunshine for several weeks has been detrimental to the growth of roses, but the indications at present are favorable for a large cut for Christmas if we should be favored with a fair amount of sunshine.

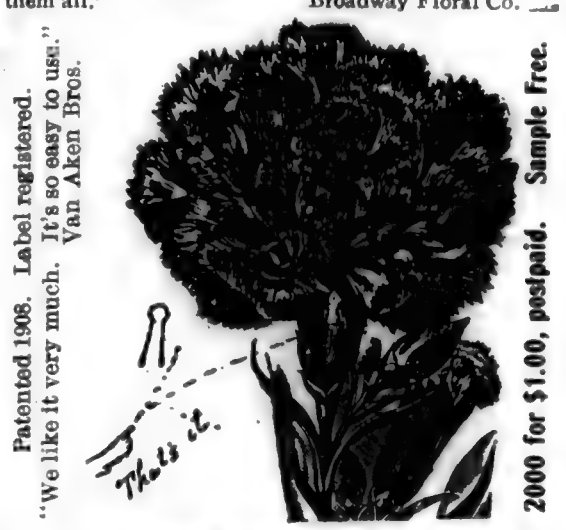
Carnations have been about enough to fill orders and the plants at present are well covered with buds. There has been an unusual demand for violets. The outlook for poinsettias for Christmas is promising, and several growers have large quantities both for pans and cut flowers.

Sweet peas are arriving in small quantities and move fairly well, the only drawback being the short stems. Greens are plentiful and in demand. Holly is arriving and is good. Lycopodium is exceedingly scarce, and prospects are anything but promising for Christmas.

The Exhibition.

The Maryland State Horticultural Society had one of the largest exhibitions that was ever held and thousands of visitors went daily to see the fine display of fruit and flowers, which proved that Maryland can produce goods which are hard to beat.

The exhibit of Gude Bros. was a credit to them and their vases of roses were admired by all. The vase of 100 Beauties was extra fine.



Mrs. Henry Barton Jacobs' exhibit of plants and cut flowers was a show in itself.

The judges of the exhibition were George Fields, John Freeman and George Cook, of Washington. Q.

C. W. Green, of Kerr & Green, has been showing at their store on Hickory avenue a large American Wonder lemon tree, which, although but four years old, bears seven specimens of the fruit averaging seven pounds each in weight, the largest lemon being five inches in diameter.

Less Work—

Sunlight Double Glass Sash reduces to a minimum the labor connected with hot-bed and cold-frame gardening.

You never have to cover Sunlight Double Glass Sash

All the hard work of handling and the expense of buying heavy boards and mats—all the time spent in covering and uncovering the beds are eliminated.

The double layer of glass does it
(See diagram above.)

Between the two layers is a ⅝ inch layer of dry still air—a transparent blanket that is better than mats or boards because it never shuts out the light. The plants gets all the light all the time. As a result, they will grow faster and become sturdier, will be ready for the market earlier and bring the big prices.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

The week following Thanksgiving was probably one of the best in the cut flower business this year. There was plenty of everything, excepting carnations, and a demand to suit. There was an unusual number of social affairs, which created a demand for roses and anything in the shape of novelties. There was also an unusual demand for cheaper stock for funeral work, and, taken together, the week was quite satisfactory from the wholesale standpoint.

We still have the dark weather with us and more snow than we usually have at Christmas time, and conditions would indicate that winter is here in earnest. Carnations seem to suffer most from the dark weather and have not been so scarce for years.

Violets, which have been scarce up to this time, are now quite plentiful; the price has dropped accordingly. A few late chrysanthemums still are coming, but in such a way that we would be better without them, as the people always seem to want the color they cannot get.

Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi are quite plentiful and the first Yellow Trumpets made their appearance December 1, not enough, however, to be noticed much, but another week will bring them in large quantities. So far there are no signs of Christmas goods in the stores. This stock makes its appearance all at once about the middle of the month, which is, no doubt, a good thing, as that is about as soon as people are ready to look for that kind of goods.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements had a number of the large debutante affairs last week, which kept them going night and day to keep up with their work.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had her share of the good things, as was evidenced by the busy auto and extra wagons which she kept on the jump to keep up with the deliveries.

The A. W. Smith Co. reports business as giving all the evidence of an exceptionally good holiday season, as last month was one of the best in its experience.

The Zieger Co., as well as H. L. Blind & Bros., were participants in the big demand last week.

G. P. Weaklen & Co. say they cannot compare their business with any other season, as this is the first, but it looks good to them.

E. C. Ludwig does not say much, but from the quantities of stock at his place of business, the activity of his help and the number of funeral designs going out, one can tell that the dead are being well taken care of.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is quite busy and working overtime getting out supply orders. This firm is enjoying a heavy demand for boxwood.

Harris Bros. are putting in a handsome new store front. They recently secured additional frontage and will have an attractive storeroom when completed. These boys are hustlers.

The McCallum Co. is handling some fine Beauties and reports trade as good, with not enough carnations to satisfy the demand. Hoo-Hoo.

CHRISTMAS

A CHRISTMAS WREATH WINDOW.

Framed in One Immense Wreath.

Early in Christmas week, feature wreaths for one day. For the central figure have one immense wreath, as large as the window will accommodate, hung against the glass and placed low enough so that it will not only be seen itself, but will also permit the spectator to look through its center at a variety of well displayed wreaths within.

This large wreath should be of sufficient width of outline to be heavy and luxuriant looking, and should be well decorated with a dash of red and a huge tie. The material of the wreath itself may be of the cheapest green obtainable, according to the locality. Where pines abound, there is nothing more graceful than their large branches, with their cones. For the dash of red use rose-hips, California peppers or California Christmas berries, immortelles, holly, artificial or natural poinsettias in Kift vases, with or without ribbon. Or tie with a shower or cluster of smaller wreaths, from which can depend a shower of chiffon, or pine cones or scarlet ribbon.

Pine cones can be brightened by a frill of scarlet ribbon pressed in between the upper layers of scales and tied in clusters of the same ribbon.

Wreaths of Many Kinds.

The following are some of the variations that make attractive styles for wreaths from twelve to twenty-four inches in diameter:

All holly wreath, with a spray of mistletoe on one side, tied with scarlet fiber ribbon.
